A German family, seven in number, lost their lives by a somewhat unique accident. They slept in one large apartment, lighted by gas. Before retiring the father hung his overcoat above the gas burner. During the night this garment slipped and fell on the tap, turning the gas full on and so suffocating the slumbering inmates.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how > the mournful crocodile

> With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
> —"2, Henry VI.," 1, 226.
> —"Poet's Lore."

VIVID HEALTH

Nothing as rare as charity, easily impaired and often lost—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is—vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of sickness to the gain of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the altering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the fire of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and so Death gathers in his cheques.

Stimulants and Purgatives cannot cure you, but The GREAT INDIAN BLOOD MEDICINE must and will

Every bottle of this universal blood maker and flesh builder carries a positive GUARANTEE. Evident sickness tells of hidden disease. A deranged stomach will undermine the entire system. Co Bo, in its direct action on the liver, kidneys and stomach, cures every phase of mal-nutrition, makes blood and carries food and strength to every tissue; and gives back health where once lurked death. Sixteen North Waterloo Voters Swear Their Ballots Were Altered.

Berlin, Ont., Oct. 6.—The charges in which Wildfong and Cummings are accused of spoiling and switching ballots were taken up at the North Waterloo election trial yesterday afternoon. F W Sheppard, a voter in No. 3 division, was the first witness. Judge Meredith was of the opinion that he might be asked any question but how he had voted. Judge Osler combatted this view. The voter, he contended, could not be asked to disclose the way he had voted or any questions leading up to this point, but he agreed that he might be asked as to whether the ballot was in the same plight and condition as when it left the voter's hand.

The Floor Gave way.

London, Oct. 6—While a party of farm laborers were sitting at dinner in the granary of a farm at Westwell, near Ashford, yesterday, the floor above, on which some twelve tons of oats were stored, suddenly gave way. Benjamin Hole, Ashford, and another man whose name is unknown were killed instantly, and a third man injured.

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 26 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sosai, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sosai—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians probably through the Phoenicians.

SOUTH AFRICAN CRISIS

Sixty-Seven Steamers Chartered to Convey the Troops.

FREIGHTS ARE ADVANCED.

Removal of Carrying Vessels From the Atlantic Causes a Panic.

Conviction in England That Peace May Yet Be Made—Imperial Government Will Accept Five Hundred Canadians for Service in South Africa.

New York, Oct. 6.—A special to The Herald from Boston says: It was learned to-day that sixty-seven trans-Atlantic steamers have been chartered by the British Admirality to transport troops and supplies to South Africa. That the Columbian and Chicago of the Furness line had been taken was confirmed today. It is also said that the Oakmore, of the Johnston line, which leaves here tomorrow, will, upon the discharge of her cargo in London, be turned over to the Government. Mr Wyllis, the local agent of the line, has received no official advice of the charter. The steamer Nomadic, of the White Star line, has been taken; also the new Allan line steamer Bavarian, which has made two trips to Montreal.

Freights have advanced nearly 50 per cent on account of the removal of so much tonnage from the Atlantic seaboard and there is every indication of a still greater advance. Grain charters closed Saturday at 2 3-4 pence per bushel and fixtures made yesterday were on a basis of 4 pence per bushel. The rate to Liverpool Saturday was 2 1-4 pence, while yesterday 3 1-2 pence per bushel was quoted. It is understood that some of the Elder-Dempster line steamers plying in the Montreal service are among the fleet taken by the British Government.

The Door Is Still Open.

London, Oct 6.—All the reliable intelligence from South Africa points to a continuance of the existing situation for some time, as both sides are apparently diffident about commencing an attack. A well defined conviction is prevalent that the Foreign office is trying to discover a way out of impasse which has been created by admitted mistakes and miscalculations, and it is evident that peace advocates and peace counsels are gaining ground, although Mr Chamberlain's refusal to seize the chance given him by the petition of fifty-eight members of the Cape House of Assembly seems to show a personal determination on the part of the Secretary of State for the Colonies not to yield an iota in the interest of peace.

While the distaste for war evidently increases in Great Britain, despatches from the scene of possible hostilities grow more and more lurid. It is said that the Boer forces at Volksrust will advance today to the Natal border, and according to Gen Symons, although Commandant General Joubert is personally adverse to hostilities, his patient tactics will not last, as the Boers will soon either demand to be disbanded or to receive orders to invade Nathal.

Canadian Troops Accepted.

London, Oct. 5.—Queensland ane New Zealand have been notified by the Imperial Government that their offers of 200 and 250 troops respectively have been accepted, and their troops are to be fully equipped and at the disposal of the British commander in Cape Town by October 31.

Canadian Troops.

As cabled on Tuesday, the Canadian Government has made no formal offer yet, but has, in a letter from Sir Wilfrid Laurier to Hon Mr Chamberlain, practically invited suggestions. The original idea was a force of 1,000 men from Canada. The Canadian Government has now, however, been advised that should Canada desire to place at the disposal of the British commander at Cape Town by October 31 four fighting units, numbering 500 in all, infantry preferred, the Imperial Government will accept the offer with the sincerest gratitude and the fullest appreciation of the high Imperial aims dictating the proposal.

The proposal is that these 500 Canadians should be officered by one major, with captains and subalterns. The desire in so limiting the numbers is to ensure that each colonial unit shall have what a soldier always prays for, the best possible show in the fighting line.

Cars Tumble Into a River.

Montreal, Oct. 6.—An accident occurred on the Grand Trunk Railway at Ste. Anne's yesterday morning, when part of a freight train bound from Montreal westward jumped the track on the bridge that spans the Ottawa River near that town, and was participated into the river. The engine and the two first cars got over in safety to the western side of the span, but the five succeding cars left the metals and tumbled into the waters of the Ottawa. The making of improvements had weakened the bridge and rendered the accident possible.

Blew Out the Gas.

Sarnia, Ont., Oct. 6.—Emily Smith, an aged lady from Port Elgin, Ont., put up at the Belchamber House on Wednesday. On retiring she blew out the gas. Her body was found dead in bed. The woman was on her way to Duluth to visit a daughter.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface, then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his house, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors. The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape, a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean, then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

VISIT TO HADES.

Wonderful Dream of a Well-known Peterborough Man.

A few days ago a prominent citizen of Peterborough told the Times of a wonderful dream he had a few evenings previous, and which, he said, he will never forget. He did not care to have the Times disclose his name, as some might ridicule him for his weakness.

He thought that he had died, and after leaving the earth, was transformed to a sphere where his environments were truly Utopian. After wandering through a maze of beautiful flowers and singing birds, he arrived at the junction of two paths, one wide, the other narrow. Here he was confronted by a knight in silver armor, who bade him choose his way. He selected a path and his guide vanished.

A Grinning Satan

In a little while he came to a place where a stream barred his way. Another knightly apparition appeared, and ferried him across in a small boat, worked by an electric button. He next encountered two entrances, one very plain, the other of marble, delicately chased. A third knight bidding him choose, he signified his intention of entering the planer portal, which met the approval of his cicerone, who, however, informed him that he might visit the inside of the marble mansion, but he must speak to no one except his guide.

"We both entered," continued the narrator, "the knight preceding me, and before me were spread out all the combined grandeur, splendor and wealth of Solomon, Caesar and Croesus. There in the midst of all Satan sat enthroned in a palace, king of them all. He was dressed in black and gold, with that indescribable grin on his countenance and a pack of playing cards grasped in one hand. With the other hand he pointed ed toward countless piles of gold.

"From the realm of the Prince of Evil we passed into the chamber of everlasting torment, where victims innumerable were placed in individual iron furnaces, which heated the iron a white, semi-molten state. Each victim was placed in a furnace for one hour daily, there to undergo the most excruciating pain and torture. The climax to this daily torture were the hideous yells of ghoulish delight uttered by the angels of Beelzebub.

"Turning to my guide I asked, 'How is it that I see so many good men, who on earth expounded the gospel and told of hell and its everlasting punishment? Tell me, good knight, how came these men here?'

"'These are they who taught false doctrines, hypocrites, masters in all sorts of infamy, and others,' he replied.

"Then the knight asked if I wished to see any further, and I told him no, and we passed out. He once more touched a button and the plain door came in view, I passed through, and at last I was in heaven.

"In heaven everybody appeared to know me, and also that I was coming. There was universal accord of song, and all rejoiced to behold me. Among that heavenly throng I saw many I never expected to see there, and when making inquiries after some I imagined would be in heaven, alas, I found that they were not there, and none even knew where they were.

"I had expected to see golden streets set with diamonds, in fact that every detail would be superb. Instead all was different. Simplicity was the dominating feature, yet every person there was happy, content and overflowing with a sense of ideal enjoyment. In brief, it was one vast festival of praise to our Great Lord, our God in heaven. Then I awoke from my wondrous dream."

absent-minded chap;
He'll start for a chair and like as not set down in some one's lap.
I happened along where he stopped to bait his horses the other day—
He'd given the horses his luncheon pail and was trying to eat their hay.
But he tackled a different kind of a snag when he fooled with Matilda Ann.
When he fooled with Matilda Ann, by jinks, he got it square in the neck,
And the doctors say, though live he may,
he's a total human wreck.
He's wrapped in batting and thinking now.
Of the grief in insulting a brindle cow.

Matilda Ann gives down her milk and she doesn't switch her tail.
She gives ten quarts—week in, week out, and she never kicks the pail.
She doesn't hook and she doesn't jump,
but even Matilda Ann,
Ain't called to stand all sorts of grief from a dern fool hired man.
And when he stubbed to the milking shed in sort of a dream and tried To make Matilda "So" and "Whoa" while he milked on the wrong off side
She giv him a look to wilt his soul and pugged him once with her hoof
And I guess that at last his wits were jogged as he slammed through the linted roof.
He's got a poultice on his brow
Of the size of the foot of a brindle cow.

Now, study the ways of the world, my son; oh, study the way of life!
It's the hustling chap who gets the cash or the girl he wants for a wife;
It's the feller that spots the place to grab when Chance goes swinging by,
Who gets his dab in the jusiest place and the biggest plum in the pie.
There's always a chance to milk the world; there's a test, a pail and a stool;
There's a place for a chap with sense and grit, but a dangerous holt for a fool,
For while the feller that's up to snuff drums a merry tune in his pail
The fool sneaks up on the left hand side and lands in the grave or in jail.
It's an awkward place, as you'll allow,
The off-hand side of the world or a cow.

The Telltale Eye.

"No matter how self possessed a man may appear on the surface," said a close observer, "there are certain involuntary movements by which he will always betray himself to minute scrutiny. To illustrate the point, here's a neat little parlor trick in mind reading:

Seat yourself directly in front of your subject and tell him to hook his finger tips together before his chest and pull as hard as he can, at the same time thinking intently of some letter of the alphabet. Then look fixedly at his right eye and repeat the letters aloud, beginning with A. When you come to the one he is thinking about, a swift, indescribable change will flash across the pupil. It is purely unconscious and involuntary, and no human being alive can prevent it. The purpose of the finger tip pulling is merely to distract his thoughts and keep him from baffling you by concentration of will. Try it some time."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Bringing Up the Average.

Old Rufus Gogblink, a slow, deliberate sort of man, dropped in one day in a casual sort of way to see his friend, Stephen Nobbler. It was the first time he had been in to see Stephen in 12 years.

"Um-m! You don't come in very often, Rufus," said Mr. Nobbler.

"No," said Mr. Gogblink.

But he went in to see his friend Mr. Nobbler again the very next day.

"Um-m! You're coming in pretty often now, Rufus," said Mr. Nobbler.

"Ya-as," said Mr. Gogblink. "I'm sort o' bringing up the average."—New

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algns with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 50 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist ez good natured and happy now as she wus when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer or somethin will be spilled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeered uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never forgit of I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wuz only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven er eight head uv fine horses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves perticker on, fer they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wuz yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wuzn't a funeral perocession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week or ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough fer me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin for the lady in less than no time.

"The team wuz feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wuz a dozen or more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wuzn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wus gittin anxious, though she wuzn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 300 yards from the upper turn, and there wuz no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heard a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wuz Jim a-comin lickety spit. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wus comin after us wuz like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let em go for all they wuz wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wus fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wus comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wus.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wuzn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist rared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forrard as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there for a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wuz in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wus that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wus, I'm afeard I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I wus dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wus killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hunderd pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let theselves out on a spurt that wus chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wus, and so was Mandy, fur before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wuz up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wus ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

"Mandy wus in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin fur me as I come back; and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it was only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uf a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all those golden sovereigns for so much paint!"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying! I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.

THE DEADLY CIGARETTE.

Are the Schoolboys Indulging in Them ?—A Writer Says So.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Pardon me while I address a few words through the columns of your widely read newspaper to the Board of Education: "For months I have noticed that the use of these abominable cigarettes has been increasing among the students of our schools. I would like to see the management committee take steps to have it stopped at as early a date as possible. We will either have to put a stop to it, or else we are going to have a poor, miserable set of men for the next generation. Parents should be asked to co-operate in the matter. I believe there are a number of small stores at which our boys obtain these cigarettes illegally, and steps should be taken to have the owners of them prosecuted.

I think that the attention of the principals of the different schools should be instructed to have the habit put a stop to. I believe that some of the principals are not doing their duty in this regard, and should be censured.

Hoping that the matter will have attention at the next meeting of the Board, I am, &c.,

Ald. Langford's Position.

The Times was pleased to see that Ald. Langford, who has been accused of being interested through his son in the paving contracts, take the stand he did on Monday night, when he supported Ald. McWilliams' resolution to have the matter referred to the judge. It was the proper course for him to take.

Double Tracking C. P. R.

The work of double tracking the C. P. R. between Montreal and Toronto is proceedingly steadily. From Montreal Junction, to Ste. Anne, the line will be doubled in a very short time, the second track being laid with 100-lb rails, while the same weight of steel will replace the old rails on this same section of the road out of Montreal. The grades are likewise being reduced between Ste. Anne and Lachine Bank, and the line is being straightened between Smith Falls and Havelock. Inter-locking appliances are also being provided by the company at Montreal Junction and St. Polycarpe. It is the intention to continue the work of double tracking until completed between Montreal and Toronto. The Peterborough section will probably be taken up next season.

Wanted

Wanted, on or before the evening of the 23rd instant, a new alderman to hold down the seat that formerly held up Mr. R. S. Davidson. Must have a knowledge of mixing and building granolithic pavements. A man who is not interested in town contracts preferred. Address the Town Clerk, Peterborough.

To Fill the Vacancy.

There does not appear to be any very great rush of aspirants for municipal honors, to fill the vacancy in the Council caused by the resignation of Mr. Davidson. Amongst the names mentioned in this connection is Messrs Harry Rush and W. Salisbury, either of whom would fill the position satisfactorily.

INSANE MAJOR.

Change of Food Cured Him.

What a determined and intelligent wife can accomplish, is well shown in the experience of a certain retired Major of the Civil War, and his estimable wife. For oblivious reasons, the name and exact address of of the Major is withheld but the facts are given by his cousin, a well-known lady of Marion, O.

Without apparent cause, but coming on gradually, the Major lost his mind, and some of the most eminent specialists in brain and nervous diseases stated that he would never recover, strongly recommending the wife to place him in an asylum, although confident he would live only a few months.

Being a woman of much strength of character, she refused to incarcerate him, but on the contrary, took him to a cottage along the shores of a little lake for the summer, and devoted herself entirely to the case, studied him carefully, and especially applied herself to the preparation of food and drink, gradually eliminating what was harmful and substituting nutritious and properly selected articles, with the startling result that in about six months he was an absolutely sane man, and in a year was healthier than he had ever been in his life.

She realizes that the chief agency in his return to health was Postum Cereal Food Coffee, for from the moment she began using that article in place of coffee he improved in a marked degree. At one time, she left off Postum and allowed him to use ordinary coffee, and he had a quick and serious backset. Returning to Postum he improved; now they use nothing else and are most enthusiastic in their faith in its health-giving qualities, and naturally make many converts among their friends.

The relater adds: "At first we thought Postum was flat and tasteless, but after following the directions exactly and boiling it twenty minutes, we secured a richness equal to the best Mocha and Java, and enjoyed it greatly. I have lost that heavy, depressed feeling that obtained formerly, and my children are growing fat on Postum." The lady requests that her name be omitted from publication. The name, however, will be given by letter upon application to the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., at Battle Creek, Mich.

RAILWAY NOTES.

The new standard railroad rules that went into effect on the eastern division of the Grand Trunk at the beginning of last week are giving the officials some trouble. A number of the men have not taken kindly to them, especially the despatchers, some of whom seem to be afraid of them and have resigned their positions. The result of this is that freight trains have been delayed somewhat.

The Grand Trunk surveying party have commenced laying out the work for improving the grades and double-tracking on the line between Hamilton and Niagara Falls.

Rich Copper Mines.

The Toronto Globe in a recent editorial on the future of mining in Canada says: "It is however to the recent discoveries of copper ore at various points along the Northern shores of Lake Superior and Lake Huron that we look for the chief development of Western Ontario. With every increased use of elctricity as a motive power comes an increased demand for copper. Copper mines if they are of true fissure formation, are practically inexhaustible. Some of the Spanish copper deposits have been worked steadily since the opening of the Christian era. In the face of all this the announcement that the American syndicate that owns the MacGowan copper mine near Parry Sound the other day refused an offer of $3,000,000 for the property, which is still comparatively undeveloped, means much for this Province. The possession of as great a copper producer as the Rio Tinto of Spain, the Calumet & Hecla of Michigan or the Le Roi of British Columbia will direct the world's attention to this hitherto neglected backbone, which seems to be after all wonderfully rich instead of barren. It is asserted by Boston journals acquainted with the copper trade that the Rockefeller interests have secured control of the recently discovered copper fields of the Michipicoton District and will keep them out of operation. The refusal of three million dollars for the MacGowan mines proves that the copper ring in attempting to prevent the opening of new copper fields only stimulates the competition in unexpected quarters. The owners of the MacGowan have announced their intention of opening up and working the deposit on an extensive scale. Looking at the developments in the past few years in the portion of Canada so long regarded as a weakness, one wonders how many Sultanas and Copper Cliffs and Micados and MacGowans still await the explorer and prospector." The Superior Gold & Copper Co., Limited, are now engaged in opening up some promising native copper copper locations on the North shore of Lake Superior near Black Bay, said to very much resemble the Calumet & Hecla in the occurence of the copper ore. This is a Canadian Company Messrs Currie & Kiteley, Bankers, Toronto are making a speciality of the stock and will be pleased to send prospectus and particulars to investors.

When Does This Century Close ?

Some people think the 19th century closes at the end of this year. Such is not the case, it closes December 31st, 1900. To mark the closing year, the publishers of that great paper, "The Family Herald and Weekly Star," of Montreal are giving their yearly subscribers two magnificent pictures, instead of one, as formerly. They have selected the "Battle of Alma" as one, and it is a beauty. The other is also a gem entitled "Pussy Willows." It pays to be a subscriber to that great weekly. Just think of it! A paper of 24 pages, 192 columns, every issue, equal to a book of 384 pages each week, and these two handsome pictures, all for one dollar. The publishers of "The Family Herald and Weekly Star" promised a surprise, but this beats all. All new subscribers as well as old ones are entitled to these pictures. "The Family Herald" office should be kept busy all this winter.

THE LAST SURVIVOR.

M. BONNY DIES IN A HOSPITAL OF "DARKEST AFRICA."

as Praised by Stanley, But the Eminent Explorer Made $200,000, While His Hard Working Subordinate Only Re- [illegible]

ondon, Oct. 9.—Poor old Wm. Bonny, ast survivor of the Emin Relief Expe ion's ill-fated rear guard, died recently the Guards' Hospital, Rochester Row. beginning of 1898 this great Afri traveller was found in the consump ward of St. George's Union Work use in the Fulham Road, and mention that last extremity of adversity of the e famous man aroused the sympathy d indignation of all who knew how ch he had done and suffered for Eng nd.

"Phthisis" was the official description his ailment, but it was "Darkest frica" from which he was really suffer g. Malarial fever on top of malarial ver had been his share of African ad nture, and malarial fever had at last de eloped into consumption. Of the Emin elief Expedition Bonny seemed to have en the one man for whom all his fellow mbers had nothing but praise and re pect. "With a force composed of men ke Wm. Bonny," wrote Sir H M Stanley, it would have been easy to conquer the tire Soudan."

Bonny's Share.

African exploration is notoriously a editable occupation. Sir H M Stanley is id to have made $200,000 out of the book scribing his own and Bonny's adven res. Explorers get gold and ivory and ncessions, all of which are valuable terwards. What had Bonny done with s share of the plunder? The answer is mple. He never had any plunder. He as three years with Stanley, and his alary was $500 a year, making $1,500 In ddition to this he got an honorarium of 1,500, making $3,000 in all. But when he expedition came out into daylight at anzibar, there were complete outfits to uy, and there was the expense of living uring several months of convalescence, o that when Wm. Bonny got back to Eng and he had very little left. He was pro ibited by contract from publishing any arrative of his adventure which would terfere with the success of his leader's ook. He had to be content with what as left, and Sir H M Stanley's published raise.

Rare Fish Caught.

London, Oct. 9.—A magnificent speci en of the rare British fish the opah has een captured in the North Sea. Its ex reme rarity is indicated by the fact that he late Frank Buckland never saw a pah specimen. The specimen in question was purchased by Mr Seotney fish monger, of Southend, as a sunfish, and identified by Mr Charles Hussey. Its prevailing colors are splendid red and green, with tints of purple and gold dotted over with round silver white spots. The fins are a brilliant vermilion and the iris of the eye a vivid scarlet. A curious ridge runs in irregular curves from the tail to the gill cover. The fish—the dimensions of which are, length 3 feet 7 1-2 inches, width 2 feet 9 1-2 inches, girth 4 feet 6 inches, and weight 89 pounds—is being set up in London, and will probably find its way in due course to the Buckland Museum.

KILLED FOR GOLD.

Young Farmer Disappears While Attending a County Fair.

Toronto, Oct. 9.—The Attorney General's Department is notified from Cookstown that John Eldridge, a young farmer near Churchill, is missing. With his wife and three children he visited the fair here last Thursday, and after taking tea with them went for his horses, not returning when expected. His friends went to the stable, located in a lonely spot, but found Eldridge had not been there his overcoat being still in the buggy. All that night search was prosecuted without avail. Relatives have made enquiry since then without success. Eldridge had $100 rent money, which he displayed on the fair grounds when buying candies for his children. As suspicious characters were on the grounds it is feared that they saw the money and ran him down. The family are greatly distressed over his mysterious disappearance.

SIGNAL BOOKS STILL MISSING.

Has Some Enemy of England Obtained Official Information?

London, Oct. 9.—Though rewards of $100 and $50 respectively have been offered for the recovery of the missing naval signal books at Portsmouth, and for information as to the identity of the offenders, the authorities are still without a clue. There is, it is understood, practically no evidence against the man who has been detained on suspicion of having some knowledge of the affair, and he will probably be released. London detectives are assisting the local police in their inquiries. Contrary to official statement, it is clear that the books are of a highly confidential nature.

Wellman Reaches New York.

New York, Oct. 9.—Walter Wellman, the Artic explorer, who recently returned from a journey of exploration in Franz Josef Land, arrived in this city yesterday on the steamship Umbria. He was accompanied from England by his wife. Mr. and Mrs. Wellman took a train for Washington, where they reside. The severe injuries the explorer received from a fall in an ice crevice still kept him upon crutches, and he had to be assisted from the ship by his wife and a friend.

JOHANNESBURG MENACED BY A REIGN OF TERROR.

Natives United With Lawbreakers, Get Beyond Control, and Anarchy is Greatly Feared There.

SALISBURY MAY APPEAL TO THE COUNTRY

Conservative Government May Take the Sentiment of the English People on the War—Facts About Buller's Command in the Transvaal.

London, Oct. 9.—According to the latest advices from Johannesburg, the natives, who seem to have been reinforced by the lawless element, are getting out of hand and anarchy is threatened.

BULLER'S COMMAND.

London, Oct. 9.—The vastness of Great Britain's military preparations—seemingly out of all proportion to the work in hand in South Africa—was not fully realized by the public until the War Office announced that 25,000 reserves had already been summoned to join the colors.

As a matter of fact, Gen. Sir Redvers Buller will have command of twice as many British soldiers as the Duke of Wellington. The reasons back of this lavish display are probably a fear of a native rising and probably a conviction of the advisability of showing to Europe that Great Britain is prepared to resent any action resulting from the prevalent continental ill-will.

A Happy Omen.

In this connection, the action of the American Department of State and the friendly statements of President McKinley and Secretary of State Hay, published here, are heartly welcomed as a happy return for Great Britain's refusal to sanction continental intervention in the war between the United States and Spain.

As the Boers failed to attack Natal when the colony was vulnerable, it is beginning to be felt that they are pursuing a deliberate policy of waiting for the British proposals, remaining in the meantime on the defensive, in the hope of thus winning the sympathies of the world and perhaps the support of other nations, and leaving to Great Britain the ignominy of starting hostilities.

No War Just Yet.

If they await the advance of General Sir Redvers Buller, it is conceivable that peace will not be broken during the present month. Should that prove the case and should the alleged wastage in the Boers commandos continue, the force Boers commandos continue, the force confronting the British commanding general will be neither as numerous nor as efficient as that now encamped along the Natal border.

Events have thus seemed to shape themselves to secure ample pause for consideration. All the proposals in the correspondence between President Steyn, of the Orange Free State, and Sir Alfred Milner, British High Commissioner in South Africa, show that the negotiations were proceeding up to October 6, and that neither despaired of peace, Sir Alfred Milner saying he was sure any reasonable proposal would be favorably considered by the British Government. President Steyn's virtual proposal of a neutral zone, to be created pending further attempts at conciliation, meets with considerable approval.

A General Election.

A rumor is current that the political interest of the situation may shortly increase, as it is alleged that the managers of the Unionist party in Great Britain are strongly urging the Government to dissolve Parliament after the necessary credit is voted, and go to the electorate in a Parliamentary general election upon the broad issue of the Government's policy in South Africa. The real intentions of the Premier, the Marquis of Salisbury, may be expected to develop shortly. As at present arranged, the work of the session, which will begin on October 17, will consist of the Queen's speech, dealing exclusively with the South African question, the voting of credit and the passage of an appropriation bill. This will probably occupy three weeks. The legislative plans of the Government will not be disclosed until Parliament meets again in February, and no private bills will be allowed to be introduced. Owing to the drain on the military resources, all colonial reliefs have been stopped for a year.

The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, returned to London this morning.

FORSTALLED THE BRITISH.

Lorenzo, Marques, Oct. 9.—The British steamer Guelph, from Southampton, September 2, via Teneriffe, September 8, has arrived here. As it was supposed she had ammunition on board consigned to the Transvaal authorities, the British third-class cruiser Philomel sailed to intercept her. The Guelph, on being signalled to stop and to state what ammunition she was carrying, replied that she had none. She was therefore allowed to proceed, the Philomel following her into the harbor.

It appears that the ammunition was landed at Durban, Natal, as the owners learned that the cargo would be seized at Lorenzo, Marques.

BOERS ARE IMPATIENT.

London, Oct. 9.—A report from South Africa has it that the movement to replace Commandant-General Joubert by Viljoen, who is a rabid hater of England, is taken as an indication of Boer impatience at the conduct of military affairs.

ALARM IN THE CAMP.

London, Oct. 9.—The most important news from South Africa comes from Mafeking, where twice on Saturday the British camp was aroused. The men stood to their arms, guns were limbered, and patrols were despatched in the direction of the border. No hostilities have occurred as yet, but the enemy has moved practically to the border, eight miles from Mafeking, in force estimated at least 6,000, comprising five commands.

Sixteen Thousand Men.

A Times correspondent cables that there are 16,000 men on the Natal border, and this the Republic is easily able to send 6,000 men west.

Returning Home.

An important despatch came from the Transvaal last night which is in strange contrast to the warlike despatches of the last few days. A cablegram from Newcastle says that farmers who arrived there yesterday from Buffalo river state that the Boers are returning to their homes, leaving patrols along the river. The despatch, of true, probably indicates that the South African Republic is about to yield, or in any case, that the Boers have abandoned the idea of invading Natal. This retirement of the Boers is what the British war authorities have expected, as their defective commissariat would prevent them from long remaining massed along the border.

General White Arrives.

General Sir George White, who will command the British forces in Natal, has arrived at Durban and has left for Pietermaritzburg. Further transports from London with Hospital ships have also arrived at Durban, and the men and material have been sent to Ladysmith.

Interested Capitalists.

A green book issued on Friday contains President Kruger's reply to Mr. Chamberlain's despatch referring to the petition of the Uitlanders to the Queen.

The Transvaal alleges that the complaints of the Uitlanders emanated wholly from a small body of British who are breeding race hatred and a revolutionary movement, and whose membership and newspapers openly boast of the influence exercised by them upon the policy of the Imperial Government.

The reply adds that the complaints are not founded on fact, and that if the real character of the league could be known, it would soon lose its influence and the tension between the two Governments would speedily disappear.

Boers Are Brutal.

In England public opinion is being more and more embittered by the stories of Boer brutality that are being told by the Cape Town despatches. According to the Evening News the reports of the barbaric excesses committed by the Boers on refugees have caused a thrill of horror in London. In one instance 70 women and children were packed in a cattle truck so tightly that they were unable to sit, and were thus kept side-tracked for 30 hours without food or water. When they attempted to leave the truck they were driven back with blows.

Cheers For Kruger.

In Dublin yesterday during the ceremonies connected with the laying of the Parnell statue, Messrs. John and William Redmond delivered addresses in support of pro-Boer resolutions, and hearty cheers were given for "gallant old Kruger." The Lord Mayor was the object of a hostile demonstration, because of his refusal to attend the pro-Boer meeting, held on the previous Sunday and was obliged to return to the Mansion house under a strong guard of constabulary.

Girouard's Post.

Major Gorouard, a French-Canadian has temporarily resigned the presidency of the Egyptian Railway Board in order to take charge of the military transport arrangements in Africa for the campaign.

SHAMROCK SAILORS THE BEST.

British Tars Handle the Challenger With Rare Ability.

New York, Oct. 7.—Old Boreas again to-day played battledore and shuttlecock with the great single-stickers and the third attempt to sail the first race of the Columbia-Shamrock series for the international trophy ended in failure. The race was declared off fifteen minutes before the time limit expired, with the yachts still five miles from the finish. Still the vast throngs who went down to the sea to witness the battle royal, were in a measure compensated by seeing a magnificent light-weather duel. When the race was called off the Shamrock was in the lead.

Superior Seamanship.

After three miles the experts are about as much mystified as they were at the beginning concerning the merits of the two boats. Nothing but a spanking, wholesail breeze will furnish a true test. To-day, as on the two previous days, the course was laid fifteen miles dead before the wind and return. So evenly matched were the beautiful clean-lined racers, that they rounded the outer mark like thoroughbreds, almost neck and neck. As a result of to-day's struggle, and those of Tuesday and Thursday, the talent are a good deal confounded. Some of them differ as to the merits of the two boats, but they seem unanimous upon two things. First, that the Shamrock is the ablest boat that ever crossed the Western ocean to "lift" the mug, and, second, and what is more important, that she is more ably handled than the defender. The superior seamanship of Capt. Hogarth and his crew of jolly English tars was demonstrated at several critical points in the race to-day.

Sail Daily After Thursday.

By a mutual agreement between the representatives of the N.Y. Yacht Club and the Royal Ulster Yacht Club, the Columbia and Shamrock will sail every day after next Thursday until the question of international yachting supremacy is established.

The request for such an arrangement came from Sir Thomas Lipton. Sir Thomas wanted the races to be sailed daily after next Tuesday, but the memberg of the N.Y. Yacht Club refused to assent to such an arrangement. At the conclusion of the meeting the following agreement was drawn up and given out for publication:

"The foregoing agreement, the challenge agreement, is further modified by mutual consent as follows: "Strike out the clause beginning "the first race shall be sailed on Tuesday, October 3, 1899," and substitute the following: "The races shall be sailed on the following dates until the series be completed, viz: October 10, 12, and on each following day, except Sunday, provided however, that immediately on the conclusion of the race of October 12, and of each subsequent race, the Regatta Committee shall inquire of each contestant whether he is willing to start the next day, and should either contestant answer in the negative one day shall intervene before starting the next race."

LAURIER IN CHICAGO.

Carriage of the Canadian Premier Followed the Grand Army of the Republic.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—The military, naval and civil parade this afternoon was reviewed by President McKinley, Premier Laurier, of Canada, Don Ignatio Mariscal, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Mexco, and other distinguished guests of the city of Chicago.

The day was fine and the line of march was jammed with spectators, windows, roofs and every available space where a foothold could be secured being occupied. The parade began to form as the ceremonies of laying the corner stone of the federal building were being concluded. At the conclusion of the corner stone ceremonies, Premier McKinley and the Presidential party, with other distinguished visitors, were escorted to the Union League Club, where they partook of a hurried luncheon. The members of the Presidental party were then driven to their places in the line.

The carriages containing the Premier of Canada and members of the Reception Committee occupied places in the parade immediately after the Grand Army of the Republic, Veterans, ex-Confederates. Then came a guard of honor, sixteen cavalrymen. Carriages containing officers, accompanying Premier Laurier and members of the Citizen Committee came next.

A WIDOW'S SUICIDES.

SHE THREATENS TO SHOOT A TORONTONIAN NAMED HAMEL.

When the Police Arrive on the Scene the [illegible] Woman [illegible] into the River and is Drowned.

Brockville, Ont., Oct. 9.—A young widow named Rogers committed suicide last night by jumping into the river from Mathews' wharf. The body was recovered at daybreak this morning. Her husband died at about six years ago, leaving her in straitened circumstances. About four years ago she opened a boarding house, and among those who came to lodge with her was a man named Hamel from Toronto. He paid her marked attention, and it was understood that they would marry. However a short time ago Hamel transferred his affections to another Brockville lady, and it was announced that they were about to marry. When the news reached Mrs Rogers she was heard to remark that she would shoot him rather than see him marry another woman. Hamel called at Mrs Rogers' house on Sunday afternoon. They had a heated discussion, she finally drew a revolver and threatened to shoot him. He immediately raised a window and leaped out, and forthwith sent the police to the house. It is supposed that seeing the police coming towards her house he became frightened and fled to the wharf which is near the house. An inquest wil be held this afternoon.

THANKSGIVING FIGHT.

Operations Will be on a Much More Extensive Scale Than Usual.

Toronto, Oct. 9.—Arrangements for the visit of the Montreal Fusiliers to Toronto on Thanksgiving Day are just about completed. The regiment numbers 664 men, and elaborate preparations are being made for their accommodation in Exhibition Park. On Friday, the 20th, the regiment will be taken to Niagra Falls for the day. Saturday will be spent sight-seeing in Toronto, and on Sunday the visiting soldiers will return to Montreal.

The scheme for the sham battle on Thanksgiving Day is not yet definitely fixed, but it is understood that the military operations for the day wil be on a much more elaborate scale than usual. The force will be in operation at Mimico, while the opposing force, including the Queen's Own Rifles, will start in near Eglington, the two meeting somewhere near High Park.

A Hero of Shangani.

London, Oct. 9.—Intelligence has just come to hand from Bulawayo of the sudden death there of Mr. Will Gooding, who was one of the three men of Major Wilson's party who escaped the Shangani massacre, and whose services to the cause of civilization in Rhodesia had been acknowledged and rewarded by the Imperial authorities as well as fully appreciated by the British pioneers in that country. Mr. Gooding was a volunteer in the small force under Major Wilson and Captain Borrow which pushed forward from the main body of the British troops operating against the Matabeles, and crossing the Shangani river in pursuit of Lobengula found himself in dire peril of annihilation. It was important to communicate with the main body and hurry up reinforcements. Three men, of whom Mr. Gooding was one, were specially selected for the task. The venture was regarded as a forlorn hope. Though repeatedly attacked by natives and escaping death almost miraculously, they reached the main body unscathed, and shared in the terrible privations which the main force endured after the abortive attempt to relieve Major Wilson's smaller party, which was massacred to a man.

SPORTING ITEMS.

The rules to govern the play are St. Andrew's Golf rules. The first round is to be played off by Thursday, Oct. 12th, and any members who have not handed in their score cards by that date will be scratched. The draw is as follows:—

Miss Archer vs. Mrs R S Davidson.
Miss N Hall vs Mrs A H Stratton.

Saturday's Match.

To the Sporting Editor of the Times.

Sir,—Sam Ray had very little to do when he threw a stain upon the golf players of the town by saying that the Commerce Bank team, which has been licked by the Bank of Montreal team (all [illegible] McHarris being licked), and by the Electric team (when Mr Carter alone escaped) could do anything up in town. If it is a reputation for getting beat they have it.

MEN CURED FREE.

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness, such as impotency, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions, premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The Doctor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt giving the various ingredients to be used so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the receipt free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L.W. Knapp, M.D. 1011 Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer, and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

HARD AND SOFT COAL.

A correspondent of the Ottawa Journal points out the difference in the value of different kinds of hard coal. There is as much difference he says, between one kind of anthracite and another, as there is between rock maple and elm, both of which are classed as hard wood, but command very unequal prices in the market. Deposits of coal always contain useless mineral (incombustible) matter, and the amount of this determines the amount of ash which is left when the coal is fully burned. First-class hard coal should not contain more that 5 per cent. of ash. A sample containing 10, 15, or a higher percentage of ash is of less value, and should be sold at correspondingly lower price. This writer who seems to know whereof he speaks, thinks that coal purchased in large quantities should always be dealt with on the basis of commercial analysis.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

Good morning.

The announcement that Premier Laurier has taken a whip into his cabinet is taken to indicate that some of the ministers have not been behaving themselves lately.

•• • ••

If you think you have nothing else to be thankful for, you can be thankful on Thanksgiving day because the Government has had the good sense to put the holiday a month ahead of its usual date, and you ought to be thankful for that.

•• • ••

After the ratepayers of the town of Sarnia have passed a by-law by over 800 majority, reducing the number of aldermen, the town council now threatens to out the formal third reading of the by-law. The electors of the western town ought to know how to handle those of their servants who think themselves greater than their masters.

A contemporary says: Have you ever noticed that many streams that years ago ran water all summer now dry up entirely save after heavy rains? This is a serious matter to the stock raisers. Climatologists say that this is due to the cutting down of the timber and the better drainage of the lands. The cutting of timber has gone on until now many farms have not even enough for fuel. The time is near when tree planting will be a live question. There are many spaces on some farms that ought to be turned into nurseries for forest trees, and they would in years to come yield a good return for the work.

The statement is published that invasion of the Philippines by U. S. troops has resulted in a 500 per cent. increase in the number of saloons, and has made Manila an earthly hell, is a sad commentary on the boasted benefits that the presence of civilized beings is supposed to confer upon the uncivilized. Judged by its fruits the civilization of the United States is, as the correspondent puts it, not Christian, but infidel.

PROTESTANTISM AND THE BOERS

Far-Reaching Consequences of England's Attack on the Transvaal.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—That race which is extending its influence and its power is now confronted by another race and another expansion neither barbarous nor half savage, but, on the contrary, Christian and semi-European. Fronting the English advance we find the establishment and the possessions of the Dutch. There stand the true elements of the conflict.

To-day everybody can see by the attitude taken not only by the Government of the Free State, but by that of the Afrikanders of the Cape—headed by Schreiner, the Prime Minister of the Colony—that the coalition opposed to British domination includes all who are not English in those regions and everybody who stands by the Hollander.

Now, it is no small affair for England to run upto run up against the name and the great moral authority, especially in the Protestant world, of Holland.

Among the countries of Europe, small and great, each one of which has had its hour of glory, there is none whose past is more illustrious or its present more estimable than Holland. In philosophy, in letters, in arts, in politics, in military and naval glories, the names of Spinova, Rembrandt, William of Nassau, William of Orange, Tramp and Ruyter stand in the front rank. For the services that she has rendered Holland is entitled to the respect of all humanity, and especially of the Protestand portion of it. It is more than probable that, if the United Provinces of Holland had not resisted Spanish domination, and had not continued against Philip II. a struggle most unequal and heroic, Protestanism would have disappeared from the world.

Holland is therefore the ancestor of Protestantism just as she was the initiator of the liberal cause. Ir is for this reason that she should be treated by Europe with marked respect, but it is in opposition to the noble and pure Dutch tradition, in disregard of the Bibicial and Protestant confraternity, and in hostility to Dutch expansion, that English aggression now arises in southern Africa.

The situation is serious. Victory or defeat for England must be equally unfortunate. In that distant portion of the globe the seamless garment is bound to be torn. In Africa things move along slowly, and consequences are seen later on Hatred and vengeance perhaps may perhaps be engendered in many hearts. But in Europe positions are taken up, necessarily, with more rapidity, and results are quickly devenoped.

At the present time between the two great branches of European Protestantpism, prudent Holland is extremely moderate. Sh e treats with caution her great maritime neighbors and her powerful Continental neighbors. She lives, prospers and continues the even tenor of her way, keeping her redoubtable brothers always at the same distance But her weight counts for something, and it would not take much to change the balance and break the equilibrium.

Now, that is precisely what the conflict in the Transvaal is likely to bring about. The Dutch element in the entire world is wounded to the quick. In its weakness and the natural desire to exist, it seeks the support of the German element. Whatever may be the immediate issue of the present difficulty, there will be produced one of those astounding evolutions of which Bismark spoke, and the consequences of which nobody can forsee. Napoleon used to say that Antwerp was a cannon aimed at England. The remark is still applicable to the ports of Holland. If they should one day abandon their friendly neutrality, England would lose one of her points of security.

So goes on the world. Men are excited. Their passions rule them. They heap up reasons, precautions and deductions. But every game has its turning point; every profit has its losses, and every success its catastrophe. Probably that is the reason why the wisdom and philosophy of Lord Salisbury made him still hesitate before sending England, and perhaps the world, into a contest in which the profits of the plungers might not be sufficient to cover the future deficts of the nation.

ON HIS WAY HOME

Where a Fortune of $300,000 Awaits a Lucky Englishman.

A tall, handsome young Englishman walked into the Times office yesterday and, shaking hands with the chief editor, introduced himself as Reginald P. Dawson, awaiting whom in London is a fortune of $300,000. Dawson has just arrived from the Klondike, where he was found after a most tedious search by the police of two countries, England and the United States.

A story fraught with romance and adventure lies behind the heritage, and added is the pall of death. Thirteen years ago Dawson, then 22 years of age, wandered in aimless search for wealth and excitement to Calcutta. There he fell in love with Miss Eleanor Archibald, daughter of Captain George Archibald, retired and one of the wealthy citizens of the Indian capital. His devotion was awarded by the young woman, but the match was looked upon unfavorably by her bluff old father. They eloped to London, however, whereupon Mrs. Dawson was disinherited.

The couple met with varying fortunes and finally drifted to Canada in 1893. Two years ago the old captain died, leaving an estate of $300,000. London attorneys for the estate at once began a search for the daughter, Mrs. Dawson, and placed the matter in the hands of a Toronto law firm. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson were traced to Tombstone, Ari., thence to Kingston and afterward to Colorado. It was subsequently learned that the wife had died of consumption in Denver in 1897 and that Dawson had gone to Alaska.

The case here appeared hopeless, but by flooding the towns and camps in the gold regions with circulars the searchers were rewarded by receiving a letter from Dawson, dated at Juneau, Alaska, and bearing the information that he was on his way to Peterborough, where he will remain with friends until this evening, one of whom accompanied him to the Times. Yesterday he arrived at this office, where he told the story of his adventures in the north.

During his two years of prospecting he secured $40,000 worth of gold, but part of it was stolen. After going west he will depart for London. One of the principal clews in the unraveling of the problem was a bullet mark on the shoulder of Mrs. Dawson, which had been caused in her childhood by a stray bullet.

"Please Smile AND Look Pleasant."

When a woman says "I am racked with pain," the word "racked" recalls the days when they stretched the tender bodies of women on the rack with rope and pulley until the very joints cracked.

Fancy an attendant saying to the tortured woman, "Please smile and look pleasant."

And yet the woman "racked with pain," is expected to smile through her agony and to make home happy. She can't do it. It is against nature. Generally speaking, the racking pains of ill-health such as headache, backache and "bearing down pains" are related to derangements or disorders of the organs distinctly feminine. When this condition is removed the general health is restored, and with health comes back the smile of happiness.

Any woman may regain her health at home without offensive questionings or examinations by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures perfectly all diseases and derangements peculiar to women. Sick women may consult Dr. Pierce by letter free of charge. Such letters are treated as sacredly confidential.

"I was a great sufferer for four years from displacement and ulceration," writes Mrs. Mary Pickering, of Ollie, Keokuk Co., Iowa. "At the time I began using Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I was not able to sit up in bed. I took eight bottles and got to be a stout woman. Any doubting this can write to me, enclosing a stamp, and I will answer."

No alcohol in any form is contained in "Favorite Prescription." Substitution is selfish. It cares more for its profit than for your cure. Therefore, insist on getting "Favorite Prescription."

Dr. Pierce's great work the "Common Sense Medical Adviser" is a book no woman can afford to be without. Send 31 one-cent stamps, cost of customs and mailing paper edition, or 50 cents for the cloth binding. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

How They Used to Kill.

In repairing an old house in Dartford, England, not long ago the workmen found several ancient death warrants, bearing the signature of the Duke of Portland, minister of King George III. One of them, dated June, 1798, gives an idea of what legal hanging and quartering were like in those days. It runs:

"Whereas, James O'Coigley, having been attainted of high treason and had sentence passed upon him to be drawn upon a hurdle to the place of execution and to be there hanged by the neck, but not until he is dead, but that, being alive, he shall be taken down and his bowels taken out and burned before his face, that his head shall be severed from his body and his body divided into four parts, and that his head and body shall be disposed of as we think fit, and whereas we think fit to remit that part of the sentence directing the burning of his bowels and dividing the body into four parts, our will and pleasure is that he shall be drawn and hanged and have his head severed from his body."

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" asked the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore?" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell, 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate since you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

A SYSTEM OF EXPLORATION.

United States Should Join England and Germany in Arctic Research.

Berlin, Oct. 8.—Dr. Nansen, the Arctic explorer, said to-day to the correspondent here of the Associated Press:

"The United States ought to join Great Britain and Germany in co-operative polar exploration. Thus the three progressive nations would work for a common good of mankind and science. If the polar districts are ever to be thoroughly explored it will probably be due to such joint action."

Poultney Bigelow has presented a written motion for the International Geographical Congress' adoption, saying that hereafter each colonial power pledges itself to submit such new methods or questions relative to the treatment of natives as may come up from time to time to a permanent international committee empowered to decide upon them. This proposition coincides with that Andrew White, the United States Ambassador made at the recent peace conference at The Hague.

SIGHT THROUGH X-RAYS.

A Blind and Paralytic Child Marvelously Restored.

Chicago, Oct. 7.—Harriet Heilbuth, 5 years old, and for two years blind and a paralytic, has had her sight and the use of her limbs restored through the agency of the X rays. Two years ago the child, while playing, fell from a porch to the sidewalk, a distance of 16 feet, striking on her head. The fall left her totally blind and with her right side paralyzed. A few days ago the X rays were applied and revealed a tumor the size of an egg pressing on the brain. The skull was trephined directly over the cyst as shown in the skiagraph and the tumor removed. The child was able to move her limbs on recovering consciousness, and is now gradually recovering her sight.

Rich Copper Mines.

The Toronto Globe in a recent editorial on the future of mining in Canada says: "It is however to the recent discoveries of copper ore at various points along the Northern shores of Lake Superior and Lake Huron that we look for the chief development of Western Ontario. With every increased use of electricity as a motive power comes an increased demand for copper. Copper mines if they are of true fissure formation, are practically inexhaustible. Some of the Spanish copper deposits have been worked steadily since the opening of the Christian era. In the face of all this the announcement that the American syndicate that owns the MacGowan copper mine near Parry Sound the other day refused an offer of $3,000,000 for the property, which is still comparatively undeveloped, means much for this Province. The possession of so great a copper producer as the Rio Tinto of Spain, the Calumet & Hecla of Michigan or the Le Roi of British Columbia will direct the world's attention to this hitherto neglected backbone, which seems to be after all wonderfully rich instead of barren. It is asserted by Boston journals acquainted with the copper trade that the Rockefeller interests have secured control of the recently discovered copper fields of the Michipicoton District and will keep them out of operation. The refusal of three million dollars for the MacGowan mines proves that the copper ring in attempting to prevent the opening of new copper fields only stimulates the competition in unexpected quarters. The owners of the MacGowan have announced their intention of opening up and working the deposit on an extensive scale. Looking at the developments in the past few years in the portion of Canada so long regarded as a weakness, one wonders how many Sultanas and Copper Cliffs and Micados and MacGowans still await the explorer and prospector." The Superior Gold & Copper Co., Limited, are now engaged in opening up some promising native copper locations on the North shore of Lake Superior near Black Bay, said to very much resemble the Calumet & Hecla in the occurrence of the copper ore. This is a Canadian Company. Messrs Currie & Kiteley, Bankers, Toronto are making a speciality of the stock and will be pleased to send prospectus and particulars to investors.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the graphophone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a graphophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth" will be the feature of Frederick Warde's repertory next season.

It is unofficially announced that Rudyard Kipling is to write the fairy play to be produced at the London Lyceum next summer.

Some German statistician has discovered that stage dancing is conducive to longevity. Taglioni lived to be 80 and Fanny Elssler to be 74.

Rose Coghlan has been re-engaged for her original role of "Mlle. Fifi" for next season, the piece to open its tour in August in Chicago.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grizzly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lochnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a fold where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

VISIT TO HADES.

Wonderful Dream of a Well-known Peterborough Man.

A few days ago a prominent citizen of Peterborough told the Times of a wonderful dream he had a few evenings previous, and which, he said, he will never forget. He did not care to have the Times disclose his name, as some might ridicule him for his weakness.

He thought that he had died, and after leaving the earth, was transformed to a sphere where his environments were truly Utopian. After wandering through a maze of beatiful flowers and singing birds, he arrived at the junction of two paths, one wide, the other narrow. Here he was confronted by a knight in silver armor, who bade him choose his way. He selected a path and his guide vanished.

A Grinning Satan

In a little while he came to a place where a stream barred his way. Another knightly apparition appeared, and ferried him across in a small boat, worked by an electric button. He next encountered two entrances, one very plain, the other of marble, delicately chased. A third knight bidding him choose, he signified his intention of entering the planer portal, which met the approval of his cicerone, who, however, informed him that he might visit the inside of the marble mansion, but he must speak to no one except his guide.

"We both entered," continued the narrator, "the knight preceding me, and before me were spread out all the combined grandeur, splendor and wealth of Solomon, Caesar and Croesus. There in the midst of all Satan sat enthroned in a palace, king of them all. He was dressed in black and gold, with that indescribable grin on his countenance and a pack of playing cards grasped in one hand. With the other hand he pointed ed toward countless piles of gold.

"From the realm of the Prince of Evil we passed into the chamber of everlasting torment, where victims innumerable were placed in individual iron furnaces, which heated the iron a white, semi-molten state. Each victim was placed in a furnace for one hour daily, there to undergo the most excruciating pain and torture. The climax to this daily torture were the hideous yells of ghoulish delight uttered by the angels of Beelzebub.

"Turning to my guide I asked, 'How is it that I see so many good men, who on earth expounded the gospel and told of hell and its everlasting punishment? Tell me, good knight, how came these men here?'

"'These are they who taught false doctrines, hypocrites, masters in all sorts of infamy, and others,' he replied.

"Then the knight asked if I wished to see any further, and I told him no, and we passed out. He once more touched a button and the plain door came in view, I passed through, and at last I was in heaven.

"In heaven everybody appeared to know me, and also that I was coming. There was universal accord of song, and all rejoiced to behold me. Among that heavenly throng I saw many I never expected to see there, and when making inquiries after some I imagined would be in heaven, alas, I found that they were not there, and none even knew where they were.

"I had expected to see golden streets set with diamonds, in fact that every detail would be superb. Instead all was different. Simplicity was the dominating feature, yet every person there was happy, content and overflowing with a sense of ideal enjoyment. In brief, it was one vast festival of praise to our Great Lord, our God in heaven. Then I awoke from my wondrous dream."

THE POULTRY YARD.

Pea fowls are small bodied birds, and it will not pay to raise them for their flesh.

Do not hatch bantams too early. Small size is desirable. Hatching in August will give the best results.

Lack of shade in hot weather and too much exposure in the sun are often prolific causes of disease.

Clean earth is a first class disinfectant and purifier. As long as it is dry it can rarely be used to excess.

Until your experience and accommodations warrant confine yourself to one or two well known varieties.

Feed systematically two or three times a day. Scatter the food so that the fowls cannot eat too fast or without proper exercise.

Get as many early chicks as you can. It means early laying pullets during the fall and eggs in winter, when good prices can be realized.

DON'T WANT THEM.

FRANCE WILL NOT ALLY HERSELF WITH GERMANY.

The Village of Bazeilles Still Bears the Wounds of the Last War.

London, Oct. 7.—The much talked of entente between France and Germany has just received a cold water ducking by the recent ceremonies at Bazeilles, according o the accounts in the French papers. The two days' fighting in 1870 around and in that village, where Napoleon's regulars fired their last cartridges, formed the sequel to Sedan. Among all the accounts of battles there are few indeed that are more dramatic or more rich in examples of heroism and horrors than the story of Bazeilles. Even the comparatively brief sketch of it in the London Times by the Duc de Fitz James, after the capture of the village by the Germans, send a shudder through the reading world. After the Crimean war, the war in Italy and the gigantic Civil War in the United States, all marked by deeds of generosity and chivalry, and all unstained by atrocity, the world was but poorly prepared for Bazeilles. Even to-day the "damned spot" will not "out" for Germans.

The record is still red, but it is relieved somewhat by the recollection of the glorious conduct of the German officer, who, sword in hand against his own men, saved the life of the heroic Lambert, whose portrait can be seen in the figure leaning against the old oak chest in De Neuville's picture, Les Derniers Cartouches.

Every year there is something new and interesting in the ceremonies at Bazeilles. As in former years, the religious part of them was carried on this year in the private dwelling which still takes the place of the church that was shattered by shot and shell. All the principal cities of France were represented by delegations of veterans of the war of 1870. At the close of the religous ceremonies the Mayor of the Commune, M Vautier, delivered an address in which he protested against any reapproachment with Germany.

"No, gentlemen," said he; "here in Bazeilles there is a flood of hatred and rancor which is destined to separate us for ever from our enemies of 1870. With fire and sword they marked upon our hearts the recollection with the Germans! Let us hope, on the contrary, that this land, enclined by the generous blood of our brothers who died for their country, will soon raise up that vigorous growth which enables us to hope and to watch."

Bazeille would surely be a poor place to preach the blessing of socialism and anarchy linked with the obliteration of frontiers and the beautiful brotherhood of man. The village still bears the wounds of the war. Most of the houses are bespattered with bullet marks, and here and there shells may be seen embedded in the walls. Many of the houses have been left just as they remained after the war, that is to say, in ruins. They are now ivy clad. The graves of the non-combatants killed in cold blood after the capture of the place are well and carefully kept, and the stories of the victims are told and retold doubtless with many variations.

Twenty-nine years have brought about many changes for the better in most places, but this old shell-battered village limps slowly indeed along the road to prosperity. Its population broods constantly over its misfortunes in the annee terrible, and dreams of nothing but revenge. Perhaps it presents the true portrait of France at present. If this should be so, the world may witness another struggle between France and Germany, and the battle-cry of the French will be "Bazeilles!"

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet, ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

One Exception.

"Do you love me so much," she demanded, "that you would be willing to give up your all for me?"

"Yes," he replied, "I would willingly give up all for you; but, of course, that doesn't include what I expect from your father."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Looking Ahead.

"It is only a matter of time," said Golfer, "when the expansion policy will carry us into Canada."

"What makes you think that?"

"Oh, we will need the land on the other side of the border for golf links!"—Philadelphia North American.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Straight, full skirts continue to be used in making up sheer transparent summer textiles for slender waists.

The new corded taffeta silks in a great variety of summer colorings and effects are in favor for making up dressy shirt waists.

The black and white striped fabrics in silk or silk and wool effects, which impart length and slenderness to the figure, are uncommonly handsome and varied in design this year.

The pretty Tudor sleeve, cut off at the top and finished above the deep upward point with a small gathered cap of fabric matching the yoke or guimpe, is a model used on costumes and toilets of every sort.

On many of the costumes of foulard, figured taffeta or surah, drap de chine, drap d'ete, summer costume cloth, etc., the waist is belled at the back and on the sides, but in front is in jacket style, with tabbed ends falling below the waist line.

One of the most graceful summer models for a rather full figure, to use in making up organdie muslin, dimity, batiste and similar goods, is the new seven gored model, with a pretty demitrain, to be made up separately over a foundation skirt of exactly the same shape.

Skirts with closings at the side instead of at the back are now the most favored. If so arranged, the round waist or basque bodice can be permanently fastened to the skirt at the back, thus avoiding the time and trouble necessarily given to a waist and skirt differently laced or hooked.

White veiling or barege may be as elaborately trimmed as a white organdie. It will have as cool an effect, be nearly as comfortable on a hot day as cotton, and during a sudden change in the temperature the light wool gown will give the needed protection.

THE ENTREE AN ECONOMY.

Dulls the Eater's Appetite For the Dinner Proper.

In the French and Italian cuisine, where economy is studied far more scientifically and thoroughly than in the English or American kitchen, the entree is not considered an extravagance. On the contrary, it is looked upon rather as an attractive economy—like soup, which dulls the eater's appetite so that he partakes less heartily of the more costly meat courses that follow. On the continent the luncheon never begins, as with us, with the chief dish of substantials. There is an introduction in the shape of a soup, or a dish of eggs, or of rice, or of macaroni, or semolino prepared in appetizing mode. Upon this the luncher tries the first edge of his appetite, so to speak. The piece de resistance comes afterward.

In the same manner, at dinner, the soup is almost invariably followed by one or two entrees. In the more ambitious menus these may consist of fish or poultry, or even of meat, prepared in croquettes or rissoles, or vol-au-vents. If there are two entrees, the vegetable will come second. But when, as is the case at many tables, there is only one entree, this is nearly always a vegetable and is served directly after the soup.

It must be borne in mind that the old fashioned custom which prevailed so generally some years ago in America, and is still to be found in certain places, of serving a number of vegetables with the principal meat dish is not followed on the continent. In England it is not unusual to see half a dozen dishes of vegetables appear with the roast. There they have even less idea of variety than is common with us, for precisely the same vegetables are offered day after day until one grows weary of the very sight of them. This, of course, is not the case among those people who have made a study of dinner giving and have grafted French customs on the British stock.

On the continent, however, things are done in a different fashion. At a simple dinner, containing, let us say, five courses, the first will be soup, the second a vegetable entree, the third meat of some kind, with one, or at the most two, vegetables, and one of them rarely fails to be a salad. Then comes a sweet, and after it fruit or cheese. The vegetable that appears as an entree need not of necessity be costly or unusual. Perhaps it is only a cauliflower, served with a good white sauce, or spinach, not cooked as we see it here—the stems and leaves coarsely chopped—but minced to a powder and then put through a colander, so that it is deliciously smooth and soft before it is dressed with butter or cream and surrounded with three cornered bits of toast or friend bread, or the entree may be nothing more elegant than white turnips or young carrots cut into small pieces, stewed tender and served with a cream sauce, or celery divided into three inch lengths, fried brown and seasoned with a tomato gravy. The name of the combination is legion, but they all have one point in common—that they are comparatively inexpensive.—Harper's Bazar.

Poison Bottle Ornaments.

At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city, there is a great collection of ancient jewelry, much of it in gold richly adorned with precious stones. Jewelers in the metropolis frequently visit the museum for the purpose of obtaining suggestions. This collection at the Metropolitan museum is in fact the finest assemblage of antique objects of personal ornaments in existence. Some of them date as far back as 900 B. C. Those of them which are made of silver have been practically destroyed by oxidation, but the gold ones being cleaned are as bright and new looking as they were 2,500 or 3,000 years ago. The jewelry from Cyprus is the work of ancient Phœnicians and Greeks.

One thing very noticeable is the frequency of tiny gold bottles attached to objects of jewelry derived from those ancient times. All evidence points to the conclusion that they were employed to hold poison, for in those days life was by no means secure, and at any time an emergency might arise where a man or woman would be glad to end existence promptly to escape lifelong imprisonment or indescribable torture by the horrible means used by the ancients.

Infantry Versus Strikers.

Paris, Oct. 7.—Dissensions are reported among the leaders of the strike at La Creusot on account of the decision to accept the arbitration of the Government.

The Echo de Paris states that in anticipation of the march of the strikers on Paris ten battalions of infantry are ready to proceed to bar the roads to the strikers.

THE TURF REVIEW.

Stock, 2:15¼, is to be tried this year at the pace, by George Saunders, according to report.

Marion, 3, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is said to be showing a good gait and good speed this year.

It is said that Rose Croix, 2:13¼ at three years, has shown a mile in 2:15 at the pace for McHenry, at Pleasanton, Cal.

Nelly R, ch. m., 2:23, by Red Cloud, although 10 years old, has never had a foal until this year. It is by Dan T, 2:06¾.

A horse with the peculiar name of Esaw, by Seesaw, dam by Independence, is to be raced this year by D. H. McGill.

All reports to the contrary notwithstanding, it is thought that Willis O. Foote will be able to be in the sulky this season.

There is a great deal of talk about Directly, 2:03¾, beating all the pacers out this year and taking a record faster than 2:00 besides.

Since the sale of Advertiser, Palo Alto farm has only three sons of Electioneer remaining in the stud, Altiro, Azmoor and Mendocino.

A race for a purse of $1,000 is projected for July 4, at Youngstown, O., with Lord Vincent, 2:16½; La Honda, 2:13¼ pacing, and Oddity, 2:10¼ pacing, among the starters.

The 3-year-old bay filly Marion, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is eligible to start in the New England $10,000 Futurity, and is likely to do so if the reports of the speed she is showing are correct.

The first new 2:30 trotter of the year is a dun gelding named Dot, breeding unknown, who took the first heat of the 2:40 race at Norfolk, Va., May 16, in 2:27¾.—Turf, Field and Farm.

POULTRY POINTERS.

Impure water in summer often causes disease among poultry.

The objection to late hatched fowls is the danger of their being stunted.

Poultry matures within a year and is easily changed in any of its characteristics.

Irregular feeding invites derangement of the digestive organs and often causes disease.

In nearly all cases the male imparts the color. When white males are used all the chickens will be white.

Generally, ground bone is one of the best forms in which to give lime to the laying hens when they need it.

By using milk instead of water in mixing the soft feed for fowls it serves both for moisture and nourishment.

One advantage in favor of the white breeds is that the pin feathers do not show so plainly as in the black plumaged birds.

Cornmeal does not contain all the essential elements of growth, and for this reason chickens often die off when fed upon it.—St. Louis Republic.

RAILROAD TIES.

It is proposed to construct a railway in French Guinea.

Khartum will be reached by the railroad by November next, barring accidents. The railroad is now 80 miles south of the Atbara river.

The original capital of the Pennsylvania railroad was $950,000. The system on its fifty-third birthday represented an investment of $800,000,000. Last year it carried 71,000,000 passengers.

An "improvement" introduced by the Great Eastern railway, England, consists in widening the cars to the limit of safety in order to allow six passengers to wedge themselves into one seat.

HIS HAIR TURNED WHITE.

Peculiar Experience of the Man Who Dealt In High Explosives.

"Nitroglycerin, sir; high explosives accomplished it," said a well dressed man with a youthful face and snow white hair to a chance acquaintance at the Great Northern.

"But your face is not scarred? It would seem that an explosion"—

"An impending explosion it was. Two years ago I was the most successful well shooter in America. I could make the oil loosen up where others had failed. The secret lay in the explosives I employed. I made them myself and had the business down fine. At that time I went to New York to figure on a big blasting contract that would have made me a pile. I failed to make the arrangement, and the very day the negotiations fell through I started suddenly for England on a similar mission.

"'Is there such a thing as high explosives ripening?' asked the Englishman I was accompanying on the second day of our voyage.

"The question brought me to my feet and caused an exclamation of horror to escape from my lips. Many explosives undergo a ripening process, which adds greatly to their destructive power, at the same time decidedly increasing the danger of handling them. That made by me was this character. Indeed 25 days after it compounded it was almost certain to explode of its own volition, so to speak. on the upper shelf of the checkroom my New York hotel I had left a large grip containing a 20 pound can of this compound, the ripening of which meant destruction and death.

"For an hour I was almost in a state of frenzy, freely denouncing myself as a multimurderer. In vain I drew an awful picture of the devastation that would overwhelm a certain New York hotel in exactly 17 days and called upon the captain to put his ship about. He promised to transfer me to a west bound steamer if an opportunity presented itself, but fortune failed me, and I was obliged to cross the ocean. On the morning of the twenty-fifth day of the life of my ripening high explosive I sprang from a carriage and rushed into the hotel.

"No reprieved murderer ever experienced greater joy than I did as I saw the last of the terrible fluid disappear in a catch basin. Ten minutes later I started back from the mirror of the hotel bar, where I had gone for a 'bracer,' in absolute dismay. My jet black hair had turned white as snow."

VETERANS UNDER FIRE.

The Reason They Don't Stoop When the Bullets Are Flying.

"The temptation to stoop when under fire is almost irresistible," said a veteran, "and that accounts for so many of the wounds received by raw troops. You see, when a man happens to be hit in a stooping posture the chances are that the bullet plows right through his body from end to end. On the other hand, if he is standing erect, the probabilities are in favor of the wound being slight, anyhow not mortal. Old soldiers are well aware of this, and while they will drop flat and hunt cover every chance they get they never stoop.

"After a soldier has been in a few engagements he learns such tricks, and, as far as the rest of it is concerned, he becomes simply a fatalist. There is nothing strange about it, for almost all his experiences appear to lend color to that doctrine. For instance, he never dodges, because he has seen men dodge and get killed when it really seemed as if they had reached for the bullet. In fact, the strangest things are continually happening, all apparently the pure whim of chance.

"I remember near Petersburg a comrade of mine, as brave a fellow as ever lived, took refuge behind a little hut. He was worn out under fire and wanted to get a moment's breathing space. Twenty feet in the rear and a little to one side was a pile of crossties full of wrought iron nails. A bullet came along, splintered a tie and drove out one of the nails at right angles. The jagged iron struck my chum in the side, penetrated his kidneys and killed him.

"That's the blind chance of war, and after getting a few such object lessons a fellow is apt to acquire a sort of sang froid that is immensely impressive to a recruit. It isn't because he has a contempt for danger; he has merely learned the folly of trying to evade it."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my dernedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

The men-of-war o' the ancient Romans had a crew of about 225 men, of which 174 were oarsmen wor'ing on three decks. The speed of these vessels was

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT has has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 60 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

A PERMANENT BRIDGE.

Looking for a Site for the New Bridge Over Chemong Lake.

A committee of the Town and County Councils, consisting of Aldermen McWilliams and Langford, and Warden Hawthorne and Councillors Pearce, Peck and Fitzgerald drove out to Bridgenorth yesterday to look over a site for the new permanent bridge which it is proposed to build over the lake to Ennismore, to take the place of the present floating bridge. The party were accompanied by Engineer Aylmer, Government engineer. The Government steamer Empire was on hand and the party took soundings and measured the distance at three different places, one above the present bridge, one where the bridge now is, and one across almost directly in front of the hotel. The latter site will probably be chosen, as it will afford the shortest and possibly the cheapest route, while the high embankment which will be necessary to cut down, will afford material for filling in with.

It will be remembered that the Dominion Government put $10,000 in the estimates for this bridge. It is hoped that the Ontario Government may be induced to make a grant. The town, county and Township of Ennismore will have to make up the balance.

We are pleased to learn that Mr Bert Bellingham, accountant in the Ontario Bank, Tweed, has been promoted to the head office, Toronto. He goes to Sudbury for a time to relieve, before taking up his home in Toronto.

Mr B F Ackerman left yesterday morning for the Northwest on his annual fall business trip.

Miss Emma Stephens returned on Friday evening from a trip to New York and New England cities.

Mr V Ferguson, of the local staff of the Ontario Bank, has been promoted to a position at the Tweed branch.

In Bobcaygeon.

The Bobcaygeon Independent says that Rev R A O'Connor, Bishop of Peterborough, made an official visit to St. Joseph on Sunday, and also confirmed a large class. His Lorship delivered an excellent sermon after confirmation, chiefly directed of course to the young people who were taking part in the solemnities. Before the conclusion of the services he expressed his pleasure on meeting so large a congregation, and on the good feeling that was apparent between pastor and people. He was much pleased with the very successful efforts made by Father O'Leary with his picnics, by which had succeeded in reducing the debt on the Presbytery to $550 and in speaking of this matter, the Bishop warmly expressed the gratification with the kindly neighborly spirit that had been manifested by so many who were not within the church. He hoped that this Christian spirit would ever exist. In the afternoon Rev F McColl gave an address, and drove his Lordship to Ennismore for the evening.

Rubber Stamps.

Mr J Gordon Dalgety of 218-200 Washington street, Chicago, will during to-day, Tuesday and Wednesday exhibit in sample rooms of the National Hotel, Peterobrough, the best and most complete line of rubber stamps ever brought into Canada, comprising all the latest novelties for printing show cards, bulletins, price tickets, etc., in fact rubber stamps of every description. Mr Dalgety will be glad to show his latest novelties to all who call and inspect them.

The Council Vacancy.

Several names have been mentioned in connection with the vacancy in the Council, but it is not known that any of them will accept. The Times is of opinion that the vacancy should be filled with a representative of the laboring class, who are practically without such in the present Council, and would favor holding a public meeting of laboring men with this object in view. We hope this will be done.

The Mayor's Answer.

In response to the enquiry by the Montreal Star as to his opinion contingent to South Africa, Mayor Davis sent the following on Saturday: Am strongly in favor of sending a Canadian contingent to the Transvaal at the most opportune time. Let England but say the word and Canadians will do their duty to defend and maintain the integrity of the Empire."

Have Not Come to Stay.

(By the Times' Poetical editor.)

We hear of horseless carriages
Propelled by unseen wing—
Also of loveless marriages,
Which are not quite the thing.

We hear of wireless telegrams,
A wonder of our day
But don't think cementers sidewalks
Will ever come to stay.

A Turkey Famine.

The fixing of Thanksgiving Day a month earlier than usual, says the Toronto Globe, will likely deprive that day of one of its greatest delights for many people, for the indications are that there will not be one-quarter enough turkeys to go around. The announcement has found the farmers wholly unprepared, for they had not begun to feed the birds. While they run the fields at their own free will not fatten, and the time is now short for bringing them into condition. The local trade anxiously discusses the situation, and promise all who hurry up their turkeys for Oct. 19 a gilt edged price, which will put turkeys beyond the reach of many who might otherwise purchase.

New Improvements

Work has been commenced on the improvements which are to be made to the Montreal House, on Aylmer street, opposite the Grand Trunk station. The hotel is to be bricked, the roof raised, and the upper stories refitted with modern improvements. New sheds and increased stabling accommodation are to be erected, and when completed the house will have the appearance of an entirely new place. Mr. Laroque, the proprietor, conducts his house in a business-like manner, and increased business demands increased accomodation.

By Day Labor.

The result of the contract system in connection with the granolithic pavements is, to put it mildly, very disappointing. The Times would suggest that no further work be undertaken in this way, until day work, under proper conditions, be given a fair trial. There would be no object in slighting the work, or reducing the quantity of cement used, if no one was to profit by it, as under the contract system. With a capable superintendent, who would exact an honest day's work from all those employed, there is no reason why it would not be more satisfactory than the present contract system.

Mile Posts.

Lindsay Post: Peterboro' bicyclists have taken advantage of the offer of the Canadian Wheelmen's Association to furnish free road signs to any club willing to erect same. Mr. F. H. Dobbin, who is an enthusiastic bicyclist, is looking after the matter, and the first instalment of about 30 of these guide signs or mile posts are being located. The signs are of metal, neatly painted, with a hand pointing the way intended and reading "To * * * miles." They will direct the traveller towards Lindsay, Port Hope, Lakefield, Chemong and other points, giving the number of miles to each place, and will be appreciated by drivers as well as wheelmen.

Knocked Out.

Lindsay Post:—"Thos. Somerville, of Arnprior, killed six ducks at one shot the other day, and the Pembroke Observer says the feat was never equalled but once, when a local clergyman killed eight ducks with one barrel. What say our local sports?" That's nothing. The editor of this g. f. j. has known one barrel, (a small one at that) to knock out fifteen dead game sports in less than an hour, and some of them belonged to Lindsay too, where they are used to that sort of pastime.

A Remarkable Incident.

The editor of this g. f. j. while digesting his ideas in Snowden's back parlour the other day, heard the proprietor of that well known hostlery relate an incident in the fish catching line, that entitles him to promotion. He said that while Sam Ray and he were out trolling on Clear Lake one day a few years ago, his hook caught something, and nearly upset the boat. He concluded it was a sunken log or something even more substantial, but when the line began to move through the water he knew there was a fish on the end of it. Mr. Ray and Mr. Snowden paddled ashore with the line which was a long one, and took a hitch around a stump. After awhile they landed the fish and the lake immediately went down two feet. Just then the Steamer Majestic was seen in the distance, flying signals of distress, and soon after a deputation from the steamer came ashore in a small boat and waited on the two fishermen stating that the boat was stuck on the bottom, and requesting Mr. Snowden to put the fish back in the water, so that the steamer might proceed on its trip. This he did, and in consequence therefore was not in a position to prove the truth of the story, hence had not related it before.

Barber, Spare That Mop!

By the Times' football poet.

Now doth the young athlete,
Of burly build and square,
Sternly forbid the barber man
To duck his mop of hair;
The locks are thick upon his brow
And to his shoulders fall;
He's in the opening stages now
Of training for football.

And now we hear on every side
The echoes widely wake
To gibberish slogans loudly cried
That cause the ear to ache;
It is the foot-ball yell—alas!
We hear that heathen call
Till for another year doth pass
The season of football!

Indigestion and Stomach Troubles Removed by South American Nervine—Four Bottles Brought Back Health and Vigor.

Mr. Jas. Sherwood, of Windsor, Ont., writes: "For a year I was a great sufferer from indigestion and stomach trouble. After trying other remedies without any benefit whatever, I was attracted to South American Nervine through great cures I read of its making, and I decided to try it. After a few doses I felt great relief and benefit. I have taken four bottles, and although I am seventy years old I give this thankful testimony for relief from the great suffering I had. I consider it a great medicine." Sold by Ormond & Walsh and H. S. McDonald.

A Fine Old Chinese on His Travels.

Shanghai, Oct. 9.—Kang Yi, the Imperial Commissioner, is now at Shanghai, having aroused in a houseboat from Soochow, escorted by 300 braves of the old regulation pattern. He is a great hater of foreigners, and when he arrived at Woosung recently on his way to Nanking he refused to come up to Shanghai and see what the "model settlement" is like. The day after he arrived from Soochow he and his escort narrowly escaped being arrested by the police at Shanghai. The rule of the foreign settlement is that a Chinese official wishing to pass through from the Soochow Creek to the native city with an armed escort must make application and receive permission from the chief of police to allow the escort to pass. This he omitted to do and his crowd of rag, tag and bobtail braves were on the point of being arrested and conducted without the limits, when the Mixed Court magistrate hurried to secure the necessary permission, which was granted.

This mighty potentate has recently delivered his opinion on the reform movement, the supporters of which for protection's sake naturally reside in or near Shanghai. In an interview with the local officials and gentry Kang Yi said he could not understand why the Chinese now are desirous of opening foreign colleges and schools; those who have been educated in these institutions in possessing a slight knowledge of foreign languages and affairs often wish to turn agins against China, and it was abominable that merchants should be so enthusiastic in supporting such establishments. The military forces had lately been learning foreign military drill, which was really a bad practice, and giving up sword, spear and shield exercises to go in for regular pacing and orderly marching was a serious mistake. In warfare to advance courageously is essential, and when regular pace in marching was maintained bravery could not exist and was a source of danger to the army.

MORE THAN HER OWN

An Important Speech Made By British Ambassador in China.

ENGLAND HAS DONE WELL,

Sir Clude Says Many Important Results Have Been Obtained.

His Own Belief Was That the Hanging of Officials Was the Only Way of Putting an End to the Outrages Crime and Corruption.

London, Oct. 11.—Sir Claude M. Macdonald, British Minister at Pekin, speaking at a dinner given by the China Association in the Whitehall Rooms of the Hotel Metropole, said in regard to British affairs and interests in China during the past three or four years he did not think there was any necessity for the pessimistic tone adopted by a good many critics. He thought that Great Britain had decidely more than held her own. Cheers. Many important results had been obtained, and it behooved them now to do their level best to make the best of those results. Hear, hear. The results which had been achieved included the opening of the West river, of several new treaty ports, and of inland waters for steam navigation, and the granting of many important railway and mining rights to British subjects; and those results having been arrived at, it should be their policy now to develop them, and be on the vigilant outlook for more. Laughter and "Hear, hear."

Criticism had been levelled at the Chinese Government on the ground that they took away with one hand what they gave with another, or at any rate whittled down a measure so as to render it almost valueless. He regretted to say that his experience showed a certain amount of justification for that criticism. There was, however, a great deal to be said on the other side, and he believed that China was now becoming alive, in her own interests, to help those who were prepared to help her. Hear, hear.

As to outrage and crime, he was convinced that the Chinese Foreign Office were willing to put them down with a firm hand. His own belief was that the hanging of officials was the only way of putting an end to this state of things.

THE BOER WAR HAS BEGUN IN EARNEST NOW!

Boers Are Advancing on Ladysmith, and Hostilities Are Reported to Have Already Begun in Natal.

A REPORT SAYS THAT A REVOLUTION AMONG THE DUTCH IS IMMINENT AT THE CAPE.

Sir Alfred Milner Declares All Abbettors of the Boers to be Traitors. Transvaal Consulate at London Closed and Consul White Leaves for the Continent. Kruger is Still Harping Upon the Theme of Divine Aid. Absent Burgers Ordered to Return to the Transvaal Immediately.

London, Oct. 11.—A despatch from Pietermaritzburg, Natal, says that intense excitement prevails there owing to persistent reports that troops of the Orange Free State have already crossed the border and are advancing upon Ladysmith. It is further stated that the invaders entered Natal by the important pass of Cundycleuth, which crosses the Quathlamba or Drakensburg mountains about forty miles north-west of Ladysmith.

Cundycleuth or Tandicu Pass, as it is sometimes called, is a mountain pass some 5,000 feet high, traversing the Drakensberg mountains, which form the boundary between Natal and the Orange Free State. It is about twenty miles from the railway line leading from Harrismith in the Orange Free State to Ladysmith, where a large contingent of British troops is stationed. Ladysmith, the ostensible objective point of the burgers, has a population of 2,000, but may prove important in the present operations, seeing that it is the point where the railway from Durban, on the coast, divides into two branches, one going to the capital of the Orange Free State, and the other going to Johannesburg, Pretoria and other Transvaal towns. As a strategical position it is of best value, and if it were held by the Boers these latter could prevent the despatch by rail of troops or supplies towards either the Orange Free State or the Transvaal, and thus cripple British operations. It appears improbable, however, that the Orange Free State should take the step accredited to it.

BOER CONSULATE CLOSED.

London, Oct. 11.—Mr. Montague White Consul-General of the South African Republic in London, closed the Consulate this afternoon and immediately left for the Continent.

MILNER'S PROCLAMATION.

Cape Town, Oct. 11.—Sir Alfred Milner, Governor of Cape Colony and British High Commissioner in South Africa, has issued a proclamation declaring all persons abetting the enemy in a state of war with Great Britain to be guilty of high treason.

Mr. Conyngham Greene, the British diplomatic agent in the Transvaal, is expected to leave Pretoria this evening.

TO OCCUPY NEWCASTLE.

Cape Town, Oct.—The Boers are expected to occupy Newcastle, Natal, tomorrow.

WAR BEGINS TO-NIGHT.

Newcastle, Natal, Oct. 11.—A telegram received from the Government says that war with the Transvaal will probably begin to-night, Wednesday. The Premier felt it his duty to warn the people. A public meeting was held and it was decided to leave the matter in the hands of the corporation.

Ex-Premier Escombe, who is a pro-Boer, spoke reassuringly, stating that there was no immediate danger; that he anticipated no harm from the Boers, and no panic, the people leaving at their own discretion.

BOERS CROSS THE BORDER.

London, Oct. 11.—If the latest reports which are confirmed from various points in South Africa, are true, the Boers have not waited for the expiration of the time limit, but have already crossed the border, as they would be entitled to do in default of the notification contained in the last paragraph of the ultimatum and also of the British acknowledgement, which reached Pretoria so speedily as to justify a belief, amounting almost to a certainty that the war party in Great Britain while welcoming an act which has deprived the country of all peaceful alternatives, and given it the great superficial advantage to be derived from the fact that the adversary has voluntarily assumed the stigma of virtually declaring war, was eagerly awaiting its chance.

KRUGER'S LATEST SPEECH.

Pretoria, Oct. 10.—President Kruger's birthday was announced this morning with a salute in camp and a general display of flags throughout the town. There was no official reception, but the foreign representatives called upon the President. The British diplomatic agent, Mr. Conyngham Greene, was represented by the secretary of the agency. Congratulatory telegrams were received by the President from all parts of South Africa and Europe. In the course of the morning, addressing a body of burghers, who were immediately before setting out for the front, the Premier impressed upon them that they must not trust in themselves but should place all their reliance upon God who directs every bullet. "You must keep up your courage," he said, "and remember that in former days, although our enemies were numerous, comparatively few burghers fell."

The burghers departed singing the Boer national airs. Advices from Bulawayo say that the Gwelo-Gwando railway in Rhodesia continues uninterrupted.

GERMANS ARE ACTIVE.

Pretoria, Oct. 11.—The German detachment has posted a big gun on the Free State Natal border in a position to aid Wakkerstroom. Five hundred burghers assited in hauling the gun up a steep and almost inaccessible acclivity.

CRONJE HAS 4,000 MEN.

Cape Town, Oct. 11.—Noon.—The following despatch has just been received here from Mafeking: "No alarm was raised here during the night. Although all the preparations have been made for defence, however, the excitement increases. It was aggravated by a report that the wires had been cut. This, as it turned out, was due to the fighting top of an armoured train which the train guards had forgotten to lower. The telegraph staff had hard work to restore communication, but this was accomplished early this morning.

"General Cronje's force, estimated at 4,000 men, is known to be in readiness. Apparently there is no intention on the part of the Boers to attack Buluwayo.

"The town is dull, owing to the departure of the troops and business is at a complete standstill. The utmost effort will be made to keep the mines working. Splendid rains have again fallen."

BOERS MOBILIZE AN ARMY.

Volksrust, Transvaal, Oct. 11. — The entire first draft of the Transvaal and Free State Boers is now mobilized. The laager has been shifted to a better position for water and grazing. The generals, commandants and field cornets have inspected the various strategical positions on the border. A man ostensibly coming from the Orange Free State has been detained here owing to his suspicious actions.

THE IRISH FLAG.

Pretoria, Oct. 11.—Some of the laagers are flying the Irish flag jointly with the flag of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. The ambulance corps has arrived.

REVOLUTION OF THE DUTCH.

London, Oct. 11.—An important South African firm in London has just received a despatch from Cape Town saying that a revolution of the Dutch in Cape

ALLAN LINER CHARTERED.

London, Oct. 11.—It is reported from Glasgow that the Allan Line steamship Siberian has been chartered to take one thousand men and officers from Montreal to South Africa. In shipping circles it is asserted that another half million tons of shipping will be required by the Government, and the owners are finding it difficult to maintain their regular trade services.

BASUTOS BECOME RESTLESS.

Pietermaritzburg, Oct. 11.—The Basutos are becoming restless and congregating on the borders.

The Basutos are an African tribe under British rule occupying territory on the south-eastern border of the Orange Free State, and also adjoining Natal. Basutoland has about 300,000 natives.

CANADA WILL CONTRIBUTE.

A despatch from Ottawa to the Globe says: The news of the Boer ultimatum makes it about certain that the militia of the Dominion will be called upon by the Ottawa Government to furnish a contingent for service in the Transvaal.

The Imperial authorities have known all along that the Government will gladly furnish such a force, but they requested that the Ottawa authorities refrain from making any public announcement of their intentions. To-day however, a despatch received the Militia Department makes it clear that the Imperial Government has no hopes of peace. The despatch asks how many units of 125 officers and men each Canada can furnish for service in the impending struggle. The forces asked for are cavalry, infantry and mounted infantry, artillery not being needed.

All the expenses of the contingent will be paid by Great Britain, including pensions to be paid after the war and the expense of returning the forces to Canada. The Canadian Government will only be asked to land the men in Natal, or perhaps at Belagoa Bay, if the rumored secret agreement for the purchase of Portuguese East Africa be carried out, Attached To Army.

The various Canadian units will not be brigaded together, but will be attached to Imperial corps, the project of a separate Canadian force under a Canadian officer not being carried out. The highest rank to be held by any of the Canadian officers will be that of major.

The Militia Department is making inquiries to-night by telegraph as to the men available for service. No man who cannot pass a very stiff medical examination will be accepted.

A high officer of the Militia Department stated this evening that the department was certain that 2,000 officers and men possessing the best physical qualifications could be enrolled and despatched to South Africa by October 31, which is the date mentioned by the War Office as the last at which the Canadian contingent will be acceptable.

Clothing Ordered.

The W E Sandford Company, of Hamilton, contractors for militia clothing, were to-night ordered by the Department to turn out with all speed infantry tunics and trousers for a force of 1,000 men.

Offers of Canadians to fight for the Empire are coming in from every quarter, and include offers from former Canadian soldiers now living in New York, Dakota, Chicago, St. Louis, City of Mexico, etc.

The report of the Minister of Militia as to the force available will be presented at a Cabinet meeting to be held on Thursday, and mobilization will be immediately proceeded with. The transport carrying the troops to South Africa will, it is expected, be ready to sail from Montreal on 22nd or 23rd inst.

Distributing Rifles.

London, Oct. 11.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Daily News says that, at a meeting of the Dutch at Sterkstroom it was asked to ask of the Government of the Cape Colony to supply them with arms, and in the event of a refusal to apply to the Orange Free State. The correspondent adds that a mysterious distribution of Mauser rifles is proceeding at Steynsburg and other Dutch districts in the Cape Colony.

Rubber Stamps.

Mr J Gordon Dalgety of 218 200 Washington street, Chicago, will until Friday next exhibit in the sample rooms of the National Hotel, Peterborough, the best and most complete line of rubber stamps ever brought into Canada, comprising all the latest novelties for printing show cards, bulletins, price tickets, etc., in fact rubber stamps of every description. Mr Dalgety will be glad to show his largest novelties to all who call and inspect them.

Typhoid Fever.

The local medical health officer publishes a letter in the evening papers regarding what to do in case of typhoid fever, in order to check the spread of the disease. As the worthy Doctor does not consider the readers of the Times of any account (he evidently forgets that everybody reads the Times), we will not repeat his letter in full. He simply states that the discharge from the kidneys, stomach and bowels should be passed into vessels containing enough of the disinfectant solution to cover them. After remaining one hour in the solution the discharge should be buried in such a location as not to contaminate any well or other service of water supply.

PARTY DIFFERENCES ASIDE.

He Severely Criticises the Treaty Made After Maguba Hill.

In Face of This Attack Upon the Nation, People Will Close Up Their Ranks and Relegate Party Controversies More Convenient Season.

London, Oct. 11.—Lord Roseberry, the former Premier and Liberal leader, has finally declared his position relative to the South African question. In a letter, under to-day's date, he says: "I have maintained silence because I am loath to re-enter politics. To-day, however, I can speak without touching politics, for a situation has been created which is beyond party polemics. I think there is much in the last three years of our relations with the Government of the Transvaal to criticize if not to condemn; but that is all over for the present. It is needless to discuss how we could best have attained our simple and reasonable object of rescuing our fellow-countrymen in the Transvaal from intolerable conditions of subjection [illegible] and of securing equal rights for the [illegible] races in South Africa for an ultimatum has been addressed to Great Britain by the South African Republic, which is itself a declaration of war.

"In the face of this attack upon the nation, the people will undoubtedly close their ranks and relegate party controversies to a more convenient season.

"There is one more word to be said. Without attempting to judge the policy which concluded a peace after the reverse at Majuba Hill, I am bound to state my profound conviction that there is no conceivable Government in this country which could repeat it."

London, Oct. 11.—There was a great scene on the floor of the Stock Exchange at 3.10 to-day, the time of the expiration of the period fixed in the Boer ultimatum. The brokers gathered and began singing "God Save the Queen" and "Rule Britannia". A large crowd outside took up the strains, and singing and cheering spread from point to point in the neighborhood, until the whole district was alive with enthusiasm.

London, Oct. 11.—The Foreign Office confirms the report from Washington that Great Britain has asked the United States Government to empower the United States consular authorities in the Transvaal to represent British interests there during the hostilities.

Another Yukon Claim

Montreal, Oct. 10.—There is another big claim looming up against the Government in connection with the Yukon and the nature and extent of the demand will no doubt create a great deal of interest throughout the country. It will be remembered that as soon as the Klondike rush began several of the banking institutions of the country fell over each other in their frantic rush to set up a branch at Dawson, and above all to secure the Government account. The Hon. George Cox, it is said, had been a liberal subscriber to the Grit election fund in Ontario, and as his bank, the Canadian Bank of Commerce, was as good as they make them, that institution got the account in question. Now, however, they wish they hadn't, for the expected profits have turned out to be no profits at all. In fact, the huge surplus that was expected from the year's banking in the Yukon has not materialized, and a big deficit reigns in stead. The Senator, however, has a better plan for getting over deficits than had his old friend, Sir Richard Cartwright, for the proposition is to ask the Dominion Government to recoup the Canadian Bank of Commerce for the loss they have sustained. It is said, in fact, that the sum will be a handsome one.

How it is Done in Toronto.

The Construction and Paving Company of Toronto have been called on the carpet for not using material called for in the contract with the city. Specifications provide for cement and broken stone, and Ald Denison produced an envelope containing what he said was a sample of the alleged broken stone. It was dust and small chippings, and such material as is generally classified as quarry refuse. Ald Denison says the very best of cement could not hold such material together, and the foundation would thus be too weak to hold the roadbed solid. In Peterborough any old thing would do in the shape of material. Toronto provides the quality and the quantity of the different materials used in paving, including water. In Peterborough the water is run into the mixture out of hose, and is not measured. In Toronto the Engineer and inspectors protect the city from loss, in Peterborough the contractors practically do as they like.

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 11, 1899

THE VENEZUELAN BOUNDARY DIVISION.

The Chicago Record soliloquizes thus: "The Venezuelan commission has fully confirmed what the Alabama claims commission demonstrated—that differences between the two great Anglo-Saxon nations can be settled without resort to war, and without loss of dignity by either people." Our esteemed contemporary thinks that is a pretty good sample of nickel-plated Harveyized cheek. There was no quarrel between the two great Anglo-Saxon nations. It was a case where the United States, at a moment's notice, dangerously interfered in a matter which was none of its business, espoused the cause of a little South American republic regarding the merits of whose case it had not the slightest knowledge, and in a week brought Britain and itself to the ragged edge of war. Nothing but the hard-headed self-restraint and moral courage of the British prevented a conflict. Every United States newspaper that hadn't even a map of Venezuela in its office, and every bold patriot, who didn't know whether the Schomberg line was a trolling line or a trolley line, were shrieking for war with the country which was throttling the liberties of their brother Americans on the Hootchy-Kootchy river and the extensive but well-water swamps of the lower Wenamu basin. When people are anxious to be at it, the cause of war is but a little matter. Britain, however, said: "This whole Venezuelan country is not worth fighting about. Put up your gun and we will arbitrate." Then the little European countries cackled. They thought John Bull had got "up against it," and the irrepressible Emperor Billy seized the occasion of the Jameson raid a fortnight later to wire his congratulations to Kruger—so low had Britain's prestige dropped. It was then that the famous Flying Squadron was floated out, just as a gentle hint that Britain might stand a good deal from irresponsible idiots, but other people must not presume on the forebearance. All this trouble, danger and expense was caused by "the other great Anglo-Saxon nation" because it felt impelled to interfere and resist "by every means in our power," alleged encroachments on the rights of a South American republic. Now, after the crisis is past and the question in dispute is disposed of, and Great Britain's extreme claims on Venezuela upheld by a board of arbitration, two of whom were Americans, two British, and a fifth chosen by both. And the United States newspapers, after first trying to suppress the full effect of Britain's win, talk glibly about the value of arbitration between "the two great Anglo-Saxon nations." The funny thing about it is that the South and Central American republics do not seem to appreciate United States interference in the least, though the latter is ready to plunge into a war on their behalf.

NOTES AND COMMENT

Two years ago Great Britain had a slight unpleasantness with a tuppeny-ha'-penny South American republic. The United States claimed suzerainity over the republic, as far as the relations with European powers were concerned, and interfered. This year Britain has trouble with a South African republic, over which she claims suzerainty, and some millions of United States citizens want Uncle Sam to interfere there too. The United States is laying up a heap of trouble for itself on this half of the hemisphere without carrying it into Africa. She practically claims suzerainty over all the little republics from here to Terra del Fuego, as far as their relations with European powers are concerned. The republics don't admit it except when they feel like it. Uncle Sam had not much trouble in having the precedent established with the European powers, but, wait till he tries to enforce it with the little republics.

OUTWITTING AN ELEPHANT.

A Hunter Saved by His Knowledge of the Beast's Habits.

Only those familiar with the "manners and customs" of the elephant have any idea what a nimble creature it really is. Massive and slow footed as it looks, it is capable, when roused, of feats that would be difficult for much fleeter animals. Especially is this the case with African elephants, which, though taller, are generally lighter than their Asiatic brethren. Moreover, accustomed for ages to lead a wild life and often depending on their alertness and speed of foot for their very existence, they have acquired a skill in gymnastics which has occasionally taken even old elephant hunters by surprise.

In illustration of this fact we are reminded of a story told by one of the sportsmen in Africa. He was "out after elephants" and had just fired at and wounded a magnificent specimen. Unfortunately for him, he had only succeeded in slightly wounding it, when, infuriated by the attack, it turned and charged him. It was a terrifying sight. With its enormous ears spread out like sails and emitting shrill notes of rage, it came thundering over the ground like a runaway locomotive. The hunter fired another shot, but missed. His nerve was shaken, and, throwing down his "express" rifle, he sought safety in flight. Near at hand was a steep hill, and to this he directed his steps, for, being but slightly acquainted with the climbing powers of the elephant, he thought his pursuer might be baffled by the steepness of the ascent.

It was a terrible disappointment to find that the elephant could climb a hill just as quickly as the hunter, nimble runner as he was. The fugitive, indeed, would have soon been overtaken if he had not thought of a really ingenious ruse. He knew that elephants never run, or even walk, down a steep incline, but always crouch down, gather their feet together, lean well back and slide down. Just as the ferocious animal had got within a few yards of him, therefore, the wily hunter suddenly doubled and ran down the hill again.

Quick as a flash the elephant turned, gathered himself together and, trumpeting with baffled rage, slid down after his victim. The hunter had just time to spring out of the way as the great beast came "tobogganing" after him, smashing trees and shrubs and carrying everything before it like an avalanche. Then once more the hunter dashed to the top of the hill, while the elephant, unable to stop itself, went careering down to the very foot, where, apparently feeling very sore and disappointed, it rose and walked wearily back to its native woods.—Chums.

Odd Disasters.

In an English coal mine a few years ago a callous youth viciously pricked a pony with his penknife. The wounded animal kicked out furiously, overturning and breaking several safety lamps. The naked flames fed the foul gases in the air and created an appalling explosion, which wrought the death of over a hundred miners.

Sun rays, shining through a decanter of water on to the cartridge of a loaded rifle, slew a sleeping man on a lounge near by. The innocent owner of the rifle was arraigned for the supposed crime and was sentenced to death, when the testimony of a shrewd detective solved the mystery and secured his reprieve.

A German family, seven in number, lost their lives by a somewhat unique accident. They slept in one large apartment, lighted by gas. Before retiring the father hung his overcoat above the gas burner. During the night this garment slipped and fell on the tap, turning the gas full on and so suffocating the slumbering inmates.

The Telltale Eye.

"No matter how self possessed a man may appear on the surface," said a close observer, "there are certain involuntary movements by which he will always betray himself to minute scrutiny. To illustrate the point, here's a neat little parlor trick in mind reading:

Seat yourself directly in front of your subject and tell him to hook his finger tips together before his chest and pull as hard as he can, at the same time thinking intently of some letter of the alphabet. Then look fixedly at his right eye and repeat the letters aloud, beginning with A. When you come to the one he is thinking about, a swift, indescribable change will flash across the pupil. It is purely unconscious and involuntary, and no human being alive can prevent it. The purpose of the finger tip pulling is merely to distract his thoughts and keep him from baffling you by concentration of will. Try it some time."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Bringing Up the Average.

Old Rufus Gogblink, a slow, deliberate sort of man, dropped in one day in a casual sort of way to see his friend, Stephen Nobbler. It was the first time he had been in to see Stephen in 42 years.

"Um-m! You don't come in very often, Rufus," said Mr. Nobbler.

"No," said Mr. Gogblink.

But he went in to see his friend Mr. Nobbler again the very next day.

"Um-m! You're coming in pretty often now, Rufus," said Mr. Nobbler.

"Ye-as," said Mr. Gogblink. "I'm sort o' bringing up the average."—New Deadly Habits. The woman who is addicted to the terrible morphine habit knows that she is rapidly going down the steep hill that leads to death. There are thousands of other women rushing down the same incline, but they do not know it. They find themselves suffering from nervousness, headache, despondency, irritability and a dozen other symptoms of female troubles. For relief they turn to the many alcoholic stimulants, malt extracts and other "compounds," so widely advertised to cure the ailments of women. These produce a false stimulation, and the sufferer finds herself compelled to take more and more as time passes, and soon becomes an unwitting slave to strong drink. What a woman needs is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which contains not a grain of opium or a single drop of alcohol or other dangerous stimulant. It acts directly upon the womanly organs, stopping drains, restoring displacements and having a wonderfully beneficial effect upon the general health. Suffering women who wish to consult Dr. R. V. Pierce himself can do so by mail, addressing him at Buffalo, N. Y. He makes no charge whatever for advice.

Mrs. Rena Hensel, of Massillon, Stark Co., Ohio, writes: "I had been troubled with chronic constipation and female weakness and doctored with different physicians, none of whom seemed to help me. I saw one of your advertisements, and I thought I would try your medicines. I did so and with good results. Took two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and one of his 'Favorite Prescription' and I can say I am cured of my troubles, thanks to Dr. Pierce and his medicines. They do a world of good to those who give them a good trial."

If you want a book that tells about all woman's diseases, and how to treat them at home, send 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay customs and postage, and he will mail you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser. For a heavier, handsome cloth-binding, 50 stamps. It is the grandest medical book for popular reading ever written.

NOT FOR THE WOMEN.

"People often ask me the meaning of the apparently crazy hieroglyphs and figures that are stamped on the inner side of the uppers of ready-made shoes nowadays," said a shoe dealer to the Times the other day. "As every shoe manufactory has a secret stamp code of its own, and there is, therefore, no possibility of the general public learning more than such codes exist, I may as well tell you that the vanity of customers—shall I say, of women customers particularly?—is at the bottom of these queer stamped characters and figures. You'd be surprised to know for instance how many women there are who imagine that they wear a No. 3 shoe when in reality their size is a couple of figures larger. A shoe salesman who understands his business can tell precisely the number of the shoe a woman customer wears at a glance. But, as often as not, a woman whose boot is No. 5 calls for a couple of sizes smaller, and the mysterious stamped hieroglyph scheme was devised for the purpose of encouraging her in the belief that her foot is a couple of sizes smaller than it really measures in shoe leather. When a woman calls for a No. 3 to fit a No 5 foot, no shoe salesman of this period who cares for his job is going to tell her that she requires a No. 5. He simply brings out a shoe of the style she wants, and he feels confident will fit her comfortably, and lets it go at that. A woman rarely thinks to to inquire if the shoe is really the size she asked for, she takes it for granted that the salesman has given her what she requested. But when a woman does ask that question it is the shoe salesman's business to unblushingly reply in the affirmative—and I don't think these little necessary white lies are stored up against men in business. The woman customer might examine the hieroglyphs inside the uppers for a week without finding out differently, and, even if she had the key to the puzzle, it would only make her feel badly, so what would be the use? There are tricks in all trades but ours.

OFFENSIVE EVEN TO MYSELF.

Was My Catarrh—Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder Dethroned it after Twenty Years Reign.

F. A. Bottom, druggist, Cookshire, P. Q., says: "For 20 years I have suffered from catarrh. My breath was very offensive even to myself. During that time I tried everything that came my way which promised me a cure. In almost all instances I had to proclaim them no good at all. I was induced to try Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. I got relief instantly after first application. It cured me and I am free from all the effects of it. I am a thorough believer in its curative powers." Sold by Ormond & Walsh and H. S. McDonald.

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet, ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard-skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

One Exception.

"Do you love me so much," she demanded, "that you would be willing to give up your all for me?"

"Yes," he replied, "I would willingly give up all for you; but, of course, that doesn't include what I expect from your father."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Looking Ahead.

"It is only a matter of time," said Golfer, "when the expansion policy will carry us into Canada."

"What makes you think that?"

"Oh, we will need the land on the other side of the border for golf links!"—Philadelphia North American.

KRUGER TRIES TO FORCE ON THE WAR.

He Sends an Ultimatum to Great Brifain Demanding the Withdrawal of British Troops.

LONDON GOES WILD WITH ENTHUSIASM.

Departure of Troops for South Africa Made the Occasion for a Patriotic Demonstration of Unequalled Fervor.

London, Oct. 10.—President Kruger, of the Transvaal, has forwarded to the British Government an offer to submit all differences to arbitration coupled with a demand for the withdrawal of all British troops from the border of the Transvaal, the removal from South Africa of all reinforcements, and the landing of troops now at sea at other points than South Africa. The ultimation, which is signed by F. W. Reitz, Secretary of State, reads as follows:

"Her Majesty's unlawful intervention in the internal affairs of this republic in conflict with the London convention of 1881, by the extraordinary strengthening of her troops in the neighborhood of the borders of this republic, has caused an intolerable condition of things to arise, to which this Government feels itself obliged, in the interest not only of this republic, but also of all South Africa, to make an end as soon as possible, and this Government feels itself called and obliged to press earnestly and with emphasis for an immediate termination of this state of things and to request Her Majesty's Government to give assurances upon the following four demands.

"First, that all points of mutal difference be regulated by mutal recourse to arbitration or by whatever amicable way may be agreed upon by this Government and Her Majesty's Government.

"Second, that all troops on the border of this republic shall be instantly withdrawn.

"Third, that all reinforcements of troops which have arrived in South Africa since June 1, 1899, shall be removed from South Africa within a reasonable time to be agreed upon with this Government and with the mutal assurance and guarantee on the part of this Government that no attack or hostilities against any portion of the possessions of the British Government shall be made by this republic during the further negotiations, within a period of time to be subsequently agreed upon between the Governments; and this Government will, on compliance therewith, be prepared to withdraw the armed burghers of this republic from the borders.

"Fourth, that her Majesty's troops which are now on the high seas shall not be landed in any part of South Africa."

To these demands is appended the definition of the time limit for a reply:

"This Government presses for an immediate and affirmative answer to these four questions, and earnestly request her Majesty's Government to return an answer before or upon Wednesday, Oct. 11, 1899, not later than five o'clock p.m.

"It desires further to add that in the unexpected event of an answer not satisfactory being received by it within the interval, it will with great regret be compelled to regard the action of her Majesty's Government as a formal declaration of war, and will not hold itself responsible for the consequences thereof, and that, in the event of any further movement of troops occurring within the above-mentioned time in a nearer direction to our borders, this Government will be compelled to regard that also as a formal declaration of war.

"I have the honor to be, respectfully yours.

"F. W. REITZ,
"State Secretary."

It isreported that at the coming special session of Parliament formal announcement will be made of the cession of Delagoa Bay and the surrounding territory in Portuguese East Africa to Great Britain. The price is said to be $10,000,000.

FOR ACTIVE SERVICE.

London, Oct. 10.—The reports from all the military centres show that the mobilization orders are received with the greatest enthusiasm now that President Kruger has crossed the rubicon and taken the irrevocable step of issuing an ultimation. Whatever official feeling may be, there is no mistaking the significance of the great manifestation, combined with war spirit, of Imperial solidarity that occurred in the streets of London this morning when the New South Wales Lancers traversed the city to embark for South Africa. Tens of thousands assembled to do homage to the little handful of soldiers representing the Empire's loyalty.

Wild Scenes.

From the arrival of the squadron at Waterloo station to the entraining at Fenchurst street station tumultuous scenes of wild enthusiasm marked the route traversed. The bands were allowed to play nothing but "Soldiers of the Queen," Rule Britannia," "God Save the Queen," in which the dense crowds joined. It is doubtful if such a frenzied welcome was ever before witnessed in London. There was an incessant roar of cheers and song until the Mansion House, the official residence of the Lord Mayor of London, was reached.

Traffic Blocked

Here traffic was completely blocked by the surging throngs; and it was only with the greatest difficulty that the Lord Mayor, Sir John Voce Moore, in the full robes of office, restrained the singing and vociferous cheering while he addressed the colonial troops, wishing them Godspeed and expressing the interest of the country in their heroic determination to assist in asserting Imperial authority in South Africa. Sir John Moore said: "I hope there will not be war; but the necessities of the moment, require a demonstration of authority."

An inspiring scene closed with the singing of the National Anthem, the Lord Mayor leading.

Shower of Flags.

A similar demonstration took place at Fenchurch street station. The windows in the neighborhood were crowded with [illegible], who showered minature Union Jacks and squares of bunting bearing portraits of the Queen upon the passing troops. When the station was reached an incident occurred typicial of the readiness of the colonists to fight. Viscount Hampden, former Governor and commander-in-chief of New South Wales, was present. A sergeant-major stepped forward and drew Lord Hempden's attention to the fact that he was wearing the same sword used by his Lordship when the latter belonged to the New South Wales Lancers. Lord Hampden was about to examine the weapon, when the sergeant-major cautioned him, saying: "That sword has been sharpened and is ready for active service."

SIR CHARLES TUPPER.

Montreal, Oct. 9.—Before leaving Boston to-day for Montreal Sir Charles Tupper stated to a newspaper man that Canadians were united in their desire that aid should be sent from their country to join the imperial army in South Africa. He sincerely hoped that the existing laws regulating the raising of troops would not be such as to prevent the sending of a Canadian contingent. Sir Charles said that a friend of his had offered to contribute $1,000,000 to insure the men who go there against loss of life or limb, and he himself would personally support the ptoject.

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Ellson's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye;
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored climate.—Andrew Carnegie in North American Review.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

With sorrow snares relenting passengers.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected in Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed; and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

GIVE AND TAKE.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Declares His Policy on the Boundary Question.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier delivered an address yesterday at the celebrations in connection with the laying of the foundation stone of the magnificent new Federal buildings. The carriage containing the Premier of Canada and members of the Reception Committee occupied a place in the parade which preceded the speech-making immediately after the Grand Army of the Republic and veterans of the ex-Confederates. Then came a guard of honor, 16 cavalrymen, and carriages containing officers accompanying Premier Laurier and members of the Citizens' Committee came next. The President, Cabinet officers, and members of the Reception Committee headed the parade.

When Sir Wilfrid rose to speak the band played "God Save the Queen," and the audience joined in the chorus. He said, among other things:

"I feel that though the relations between Canada and the United States are good, though they are brotherly, though they are satisfactory, in my judgment they are not as good, as brotherly, as satisfactory as they ought to be. It is the belief of the Canadian Government that we should make a supreme effort to better our relations, and make the Government of President McKinley and the present Government of Canada, with the assistance of Great Britain, so to work together as to remove all causes of dissension between us.

"And regarding the commission which sat first in the old city of Quebec and sat next in the city of Washington, I am sorry to say the result has not been commensurate with our expectation. Shall I speak my mind? (Cries of "Yes.") We met a stumbling-block in the question of the Alaskan frontier. Well, let me say here and now, the commission did not settle that question, and referred it to their respective Governments, and they are now dealing with it. May I be permitted to say here and now that we do not desire one inch of your land. (Applause.) But if I state however, that we want to hold our land, will that be an American sentiment, I want to know? However, though, that would not be an American sentiment, though it would not be a British or Canadian sentiment, I am here to say above all, my fellow-countrymen, that we want not to stand upon the extreme limits of our rights.

They Keep Moving.

The religion of a Bedouin tribe seems to be to "move onward." Having once begun the nomadic life, it becomes almost necessary for them to keep it up. In the first place, they don't want to settle down, and they wouldn't have any place to stop if they wanted to. Sometimes it becomes expedient that they make great haste in these long journeys. Wandering around over the plains are other tribes whose only occupation is "moving on." There is frequently enmity between two of these Arabian families and should one pursue the other it behooves the pursued to hasten onward with all the speed their animals are capable of. Or it may be that the springs of water are so widely separated that hard travel is necessary to make the distance from one to the other in a day.

When either of these contingencies arises, they cook and eat while on the march. They don't eat much. Two or three dinners such as American boys and girls are used to every day and something extra for Sundays and company are supposed not to agree with Bedouin children's stomachs. When on the road, bread is their chief food. This is baked while riding. One woman will mix the coarse flour which is carried in a sack on the back of her camel, another will roll and shape the dough, which is brought to her in small quantities, and a third will make a fire in an earthen vessel and attend to the baking. Women or boys on foot run along from one cook to the other and carry the material, and when the feast is ready they distribute it among the various members of the tribe.

A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, king of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush on this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an assistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot, when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his blood by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $50 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of undecision he drew $579 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $500. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down four aces and a five spot.

"With a look of horror and a Samoan wail of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was thus allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

Reciprocal.

"Yes, sir," remarked the amiable man, "I look to see an Englishman come over here and drop his h's once in awhile."

"Yes," answered the man who has been to Epsom downs, "and he likes see us go over there and drop our h's."

INDIA'S PROBLEM.

Lord Curzon to Check Alienation of Land in India.

Simla, Oct 10.—A bill has been introduced in the Indian Legislative Council restricting the transfer of agricultural land in the Punjab, with a view to check its alienation to non-peasant classes.

Mr. Rivaz, the member in charge of the bill, said that the evil of alienation had long been growing. The Punjab was a land of yeomen furnishing the flower of the native army, and these men looked forward, on the completion of their military career, to ending their days on their ancestral acres. The sole object of the measure now proposed was, while affording facilities for unobjectionable transfers, to arrest an ever increasing political danger.

The Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab said that the bill was attended to mitigate the almost revolutionary effect of British rule as affecting land in the Punjab, and to correct positive unfairness.

Burglars Were Scared Away.

Preston, Ont., Oct. 10.—On Saturday night an ineffective effort was made to burglarize Mr. Lawrason's private bank at St. George. This morning the proof vault at Clare Bros. extensive foundry was burglaried. It is thought by the cracksmen, but their efforts were more successful. About 3 o'clock in the morning people residing opposite the foundry office were aroused from their slumbers by an explosion. A few minutes later there was another very loud report, and a moment or two later two men were noticed running up the street.

Nitro-glycerine was used by the cracksmen. After they had removed the knob dial from the door with a jimmy they poured the explosive into the lock, and soap was used to make the charge air-tight. The power of the explosive was so great that it tore a large hole through the half-inch steel vault door and smashed a window 12 feet away, besides shooting a bolt through the window of an adjoining residence 100 feet away. The cracksmen were evidently alarmed at the tremendous force of the explosion, as the steel cash box in the interior of the vault was hastily knocked open and $41 in bills taken, the men in their hurry not noticing the silver and cheques in the box. There is no clue to their identity.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Two Train Wrecks.

Toronto, Oct. 10.—A G. T. R. freight train was derailed at Weston this morning through the breaking of an axle on one of the trucks. Three cars went into the ditch and traffic was delayed some time in consequence. Beyond a few minor breakages the damage was slight. No person was injured.

The G. T. R. Montreal express, due here at 7 o'clock, was three hours behind scheduled time this morning. The delay was caused by an accident at Vaudreuil, a station just outside of Montreal. The engine ran into a freight at a crossing, but fortunately the trainmen escaped without injury. The freight train was considerably smashed up, and the line was blocked. The damage to the express was practically nil, though the front of the engine was battered considerably and a draw bar was broken. The passengers received quite a shaking up, but no casualities are reported.

Trophies of War.

Brussels, Oct. 10.—In a letter received from the Congo, written in June last, the correspondent states that the rebels who have reached Tanganyika are showing as trophies of war some chairs, the seats of which are made from the skins of Belgians whom they killed in battle.

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the heartiest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, [illegible] in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 35 cents each, but with $35 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah got back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fiah department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth Is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

A CLEVER RUSE.

The Auctioneer Was Quick Witted and Finally Made a Sale.

An auctioneer on East Washington street—one of those redoubtable individuals commonly termed "slick"—was the cause of a farcical scene recently that would have done credit to a burlesque show. He had been talking industriously for a long time to a crowd of interested but enthusiastic listeners.

The affable auctioneer conscientiously went through his repertory from beginning to end, but somehow the crowd did not "warm up" to him—to quote his own language. Finally, with a dark look that bordered on despair, he grabbed up a well known pasteboard hatbox containing about 50 spools of silk thread of different colors. With the grace of a conjurer he extracted five of the spools, and, arraying them in a tempting semicircle on the counter, announced that they were "to go at any price."

But the audience, while admitting with nods of approval that they were good spools of thread, displayed no marked inclination to become excited over them. Not a bid was offered.

"I'll sell 'em for 10 cents," suggested the auctioneer timidly. It was plain from the tone of his voice that he was losing faith in himself and in all the world. There were no takers. The man of the red flag added three more spools to the semicircle. "All for 10 cents," he declared. But thread stock was far below par. The auctioneer caught up all the spools from the counter and flung them into the box with an impressive gesture. The light of inspiration flashed from his eyes.

"The whole blamed box for 10 cents!" he cried.

"I'll take it," was the prompt response, and a little man in a washed out overcoat and wearer of red chin whiskers stepped out from the crowd with a dirty 10 cent piece in his upraised hand. The auctioneer clutched the money feverishly, and, turning the box upside down so that all the spools dropped into a basket on the counter, he handed the worthless piece of ancient pasteboard to the anxious customer. A roar of hilarious laughter rose from the crowd that was heard throughout that neighborhood.

"I don't want your blamed old box!" wailed the unfortunate purchaser.

"You said you'd take it," replied the auctioneer. "I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came in a strong chorus from the delighted audience.

"I bought the spools!"

"No, you didn't! You bought the box! I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came the answer again, stronger than ever. The red whiskered man stalked indignantly from the place with the box under his arm.

"What you going to do with it?" yelled the crowd.

"That's what!" cried the speculator as he held the pasteboard box in both hands, football fashion, and kicked it vigorously into the middle of Washington street.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Straight, full skirts continue to be used in making up sheer transparent summer textiles for slender waists.

The new corded taffeta silks in a great variety of summer colorings and effects are in favor for making up dressy shirt waists.

The black and white striped fabrics in silk or silk and wool effects, which impart length and slenderness to the figure, are uncommonly handsome and varied in design this year.

The pretty Tudor sleeve, cut off at the top and finished above the deep upward point with a small gathered cap of fabric matching the yoke or guimpe, is a model used on costumes and toilets of every sort.

On many of the costumes of foulard, figured taffeta or surah, drap de chine, drap d'ete, summer costume cloth, etc., the waist is belted at the back and on the sides, but in front is in jacket style, with tabbed ends falling below the waist line.

One of the most graceful summer models for a rather full figure, to use in making up organdie muslin, dimity, batiste and similar goods, is the new seven gored model, with a pretty demitrain, to be made up separately over a foundation skirt of exactly the same shape.

Skirts with closings at the side instead of at the back are now the most favored. If so arranged, the round waist or basque bodice can be permanently fastened to the skirt at the back, thus avoiding the time and trouble necessarily given to a waist and skirt differently laced or hooked.

White veiling or barege may be as elaborately trimmed as a white organdie. It will have as cool an effect, be nearly as comfortable on a hot day as cotton, and during a sudden change in the temperature the light wool gown will give the needed protection.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Kyrle Bellew denies the rumor that he is coming to the United States with Henry Irving.

As an instance of how the romantic drama has revived abroad, no less than six companies are touring England with "The King's Musketeer."

It is stated that Reginald De Koven has received about $75,000 from "Robin Hood." Barrie will probably take $100,000 or more from "The Little Minister."

Aubrey Boucicault, who plays the husband in "Mlle. Fifi," is said to have inherited some of his father's talent as a playwright and is now finishing two plays which may be produced next season.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 60 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

Can a Boy Forget His Mother?

Neither should he forget that he can save big money by getting his Shoes at Kidd's.

He Probably Came From Lindsay.

"What do you charge for a bath?" asked a seedy looking individual, as he entered Hall's barber shop, on Simcoe-st., yesterday. "Twenty-five cents," replied Mr. Hall, "but you can have five tickets for $1." "No," I don't want five," said the s. i. "I might not live that many years."

First Prize.

For best shoes by Kidd the shoe man, low prices too.

Board.

Good board and rooms for three or four gentlemen at 20 Queen street. Two minutes walk from Ontario Bank.

An Old Peterboronian.

Lindsay Post: "News reached town to-day of the death of Capt. John Kennedy, of Dunsford, uncle of Mr Robert Kennedy, of this town. The deceased was widely known and very highly respected. The funeral will take place tomorrow. An extended notice will appear in another issue." Capt. Kennedy was a son of the late Major Kennedy, of Peterborough, where he was born and where he spent his youth.

Granolithic Sidewalks

Are great (grate) for taking the soles off the shoes. Never mind; Kidd sells Shoes so cheap that you can afford to throw the old ones away.

Off the Bond.

The name of Mr Theodore McWiliams appeared on the bond to the town, given by Mr. Ed. Wade in connection with the sewer contract. As soon as Ald. McWilliams heard of it he had his son's name taken off the bond, so that no possible opportunity might be afforded for complaint. Ald. McWilliams don't believe in men sitting at the Council Board having interest, directly or indirectly, in corporation contracts.

On Saturday Morning Next

CRESSMAN'S BIG STORE.

Anniversary of the Establishment of the Business in Peterborough—A Magnificent Business Built Up, Which Was a Success From the Start—"Cressman's" is Now Known From One End of the District to the Other—The Name is Synonomous With the Best and Latest Goods at the Lowest Prices.

A little over a year ago Mr. A. W. Cressman opened out his dry goods establishment in Peterborough and in that comparatively short time his name has become familiar with the people of the whole midland district. The foundation of the present extensive business was properly laid by equipping the premises from cellar to roof with the latest goods which were always put on sale at popular prices. People soon became acquainted with the fact that good goods, low prices and square dealing were synonomous with the name of the store. In a short time the business expanded until it now ranks second to none in Eastern Ontario. It is a store that "never disappoints." You get what you ask for and exactly what you pay for. It is contrary to the rules to misrepresent goods in the slightest degree in order to make a sale. The motto of the store is to "get a customer and hold him," and this can only be done by treating her well and giveing her good value every time.

To give a full description Cressman's would take up too much space, so our description will necessarily be short. There are five flats, all told, filled to the doors with clean up-to-date goods.

The basement is used for storing reserve stock of dry goods, and their goods arrive and are being opened almost daily.

The first floor is where the general public always receive a warm welcome, and is filled with everything usually found in a first-class establishment of this kind. The clerks are quick, corteous and obliging, and are ever ready to show goods, whether you buy or not. The rules of the store are:

Goods bought for cash, and sold for cash only.

No misrepresentation of goods.

Money returned, if asked for.

In the second flour the extensive millinery and mantle rooms are situated. Here are displayed all the beautiful novelties in the bewitching art of millinery.

The third floor contains carpets of superb patterns and texture, unsurpassed anywhere. In addition there is also a fine stock of curtain poles, and several lines of heavy staples, such as blankets, comforters, quilts, etc.

The fourth flat contains surplus stock of smallwares, linings, etc.

There is a handsome passenger elevator taking the customer to any desired department, so that shopping in Cressman's involves no fatigue.

Mr. Cressman's aim has been to earn for his establishment the title of "The Store that Never Disappoints." He makes it a point to please his customers every time, and thus not only secures the future trade of the customer, but quite frequently his friends.

Mr. Cressman is a firm believer in advertising, and naturally attributes his great success to the judicious use of printer's ink.

While every business day brings its own harvest of satisfactory buying, Cressman's "Saturday Economist Sales" are a sort of harvest home, the climax of the full values the week has afforded. In the past they have been a splendid success. They are a fixture in Cressman's commercial calandar, and will be continued the coming year as in the past twelve months.

A Suggestion.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I take the liberty of suggesting through the columns of your valuable paper, the advisability of holding a public funeral—a double one—when the remains of the 57th Battalion and the Central Exhibition be solemnly buried out of sight. The Sons of England Band would, I am sure, assist at the obsequies without charge.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your space, I am &c.,

A MOURNER.

Flagrant Vandalism.

Mr. T. Hurley, our well known and esteemed real estate agent, complained yesterday to the Times of the disgraceful conduct of boys in breaking the windows of houses that happen to be vacant, and otherwise destroying the property. He has a house in the west end, belonging to his brother, and in a short time while empty over 50 panes of glass were broken besides other damage done to the property. This is simply disgraceful and does not reflect any credit on our police force. Mr. Hurley says that he drew the attention of the Chief of Police to the matter, but so far has heard nothing in response. Mr. Hurley, whose case is certainly one that should receive prompt attention at the hands of those whose duty it is to protect property, is not the only one. There are others almost, if not quite, as bad. That something should be done to put a stop to this species of vandalism, we think few will deny. We hope Chief Rozzel will take the matter up and punish a few of the offenders, when the evil will, we are sure, speedily cease.

Typhoid Fever.

To the Editor of the Times.

Sir,—It seems to suit the purposes of the Water Co. and its minions to make it appear that the use of well water is the cause of the typhoid fever now so prevalent, and by inference that their water is the pure, unadulterated stuff. One need but to let a sample of each kind of water stand for half an hour or so and then examine the sediment of both, when it will be found that, while the well water is mostly free from any appreciable deposit, the other will suggest valuable agricultural fertilisers. Let this be as it may, the writer is convinced that the most prevalent cause of the disease in question is the stench which proceeds from the cisterns, unless they are frequently cleaned out, which they seldom are. Only to-day one victim was carried out of a tenement on Aylmer street, where it was well known by the neighbors that the cistern was in a deplorable state, to which had been called the attention of the landlord, but who refused to remedy the evil. We have a Board of Health, on paper, but if they would see to the inspection and cleaning of the cisterns in town it would go far towards the mitigation of the evil, if not entirely remove the cause.

Yours, etc.,

SANITAS.

INVESTIGATION WILL OPEN

The preliminaries for the investigation ordered by the Town Council into the paving contracts are being attended to by Mr E B Edwards, Town Solicitor who is acting under instructions from Mayor Davis.

A Notable Gathering.

At the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's convention, held at Ottawa on Saturday last, Mr W Kavanagh, son-in-law of Mr B Shortly, who taught school here at one time, was promoted to the Superintendency of the St. John, N. B., district. Mr E W Vaughan, Assistant Superintendent, and staff, of the Peterborough district, were amongst the four hundred Canadian delegates present.

Hardware Up.

The activity in all classes of hardware still continues phenomenal and the trade journals contain little but annoucements to the effect that "screws are up five per cent," "rise of 25c. in cut nails," advance in builders' hardware," and so on, including advances in enamelled ware, axes, door knobs, chains, etc. Scotch pig iron has risen in price 35 per cent. on account of the refusal of the domestic furnaces to accept orders for pig iron until after Jan. 1. In this connection it is pleasing to note that the Peterborough Hardware Co. were heavy buyers in anticipation of the rise, and are consequently several thousands of dollars ahead.

Likes the Times.

Mr J Gordon Dalgety, who is staying for a few days at the National Hotel, put an advertisement in the three Peterborough papers, and told the Times yesterday that he had far the best results from this paper. This is the same old story, and proves the truth of the assertion that "Everybody reads the Times." Mr. Dalgety purchased 50 copies of yesterday's edition.

Not Correct.

The Montreal Star of Monday publishes a list of the battalions prepared to send contingents of good marksmen to South Africa, amongst which the names of the 57th appears. It looks to us at this writing that if Col. Bell had to raise 30 men from his battalion just now he would have a peck of trouble. The battalion is not, what it used to be.

'PHAWAT MAYOR DAVIS TOULD TO ME'

With Sundry Profound Salaams and Apoligies to Leslie's Magazine, by The Times Political Poet.

McNally and Malone were anchored at Powie Morgan's bar,
Expressing their opinion of the granolithic war,
McNally said it was a shame; he said it wasn't right;
While Pat Malone declared it was a subject for a fight.

They argued and expressed themselves from every point of view;
They emphasized their arguments until the air was blue;
They quoted great authorities in language loud and strong;
Each one declared his side was right—the other side was wrong.

McNally said Mayor Davis, didn't like his job a bit;
He said that "Al" soon would be glad to get a chance to quit,
"And furthermore," he added, as he proudly raised his head,
"'Tis me that can repate to you the words that Mayor Davis said."

"Let's hear 'em," said Sir Langford, who was standing at the bar,
"For I'm right interested in this cementless sidewalk war,
I ain't so posted on the biz, as you and Pat Malone,
For I've as much as I can do attending to me own.

McNally thus encouraged, slowly buttoned up his coat,
And in a noisy manner he began to clear his throat,
He struck a fiery attitude, and in a quite dramatic way
He said, "Now, gints, I'll tell ye both wha. Alfred had to say:

McNally paused; upon his friends he shot a searching glance;
He saw that they were much surprised; he had them in a trance.
He spoke again, in whispers low, in guarded tones said he:
"But thot's not all; Oi haven' tould phwat Davis said to me."

Malone gazed at Sir Langford, and Sir Langford at Malone;
Then both gazed at McNally, who was silent as a stone.
At last Malone, in timid tones, enquired: "Is it true
Had Mayor Mayor Davis been discussin' these affairs av state wid you?"

He said he was opposed, and would not consent to make
A lot of bad-laid sidewalks for innybody's sake,
Sez he: 'Auld Nick may take ye all, the Council's goin' that way,
An' now ye doomed Kilkerney cats, I'm goin' out to stay."

McNally looked upon the pair, a twinkle in his eye.
Thought he: "Oi'll nivir get th' drinks unless Oi make the try."
Then cautiously he whispered: "Though Oo jipardoize me head,
Oi'll tell ye for the drinks, the virry wours thot Mayor Davis said."

Malone, as quick as lightning, held a dollar in his hand;
"Th' best," he said, "McNally, now, ye have at your command."
The order that McNally gave was strictly up to date;
The others filled up quickly, so they wouldn't have to wait.

McNally sipped the tempting draught; he slowly drank it down,
While smiles of satisfaction banished every laggard frown.
Sir Langford and Malone both stood respectfully aside
And patiently awaited what McNally would confide.

At length McNally wiped his lips; a smile of sweet content
Informed Malone his dollar had been very wisely spent.
McNally stroked his chin, and in a self-important way
Said he: "Oi'll now repate to you phwat Mayor Davis had to say."

Sir Langford and Malone inclined to him an eager ear,
They craned their necks and hungrily they bent their ears to hear.
McNally watched the pair; he smiled; he knew there'd be some fun,
And hurriedly and prudently prepared himself to run.

He spoke, said he: "Twan yistherday, about th' hour av four,
Oi met his Royal Highness (J. B. was standing in the door).
Oi doffed me hat; Oi bowed to him; sez Oi. 'How do ye do?'
An' Davis sez to me," he yelled, "says Davis. 'How-de-do?'"

AND STILL NO RACE

Yachtsmen Again Disappointed on Account of Light Wind.

LIPTON'S GUESTS SCARED.

Their Steamer Ran Down a Ferry-boat in the Fog.

The Shamrock and Columbia Both Went to the Starting Line But the Dense Fog Made Sailing Very Dangerous. Another Attempt to be Made To-day.

New York, Oct. 12.—For the fifth time in succession the effort to sail the first of the international races for the America's Cup was unsuccessful. To-day's contest was called off because of the lack of wind, but the boats will make another effort to race to-morrow. The Shamrock and Columbia both went to the starting line, but the dense fog made sailing very dangerous.

The few boats that gathered about the starting line looked like phantoms, and fog horns of craft approaching each other made the yachtsmen's spirits droop effectively. The sun worked vigorously at the gray walls that made the horizon line but a mile in circumference. There would be a glimmer of real sunlight and a little puff of wind, and for an instant the curtain would drop back, but the glimmer and the breeze failed and the mist conquered again. In fact the fog was heavier than any preceding day and boats under steam proceeded with the utmost caution, whistling all the time, while the numerous stalled sailing craft, in sort of Chinese orchestra fashion, beat tin pans and blew whistles to announce their presence.

Boats Collide.

New York, Oct. 12.—The steamer William Fletcher, with the guests of Sir Thomas Lipton on board, en route to board the Erin, collided in the fog with the ferry boat West Brooklyn, just off Governor's Island soon after 8 o'clock this morning. Both boats sustained considerable injury, as the Fletcher struck bow on, carrying away her nose and making a big hole in the ferry boat's port side above the water line. The Fletcher returned to the barge office and landed her passengers There was some excitement on board both boats, but no one sustained injury.

PUBLICANS MUST PROVIDE TEA

English Magistrates Decide That They Must Do So.

London, Oct. 11.—Several cyclists having found a difficulty in obtaining tea and refreshments of a like character in some of the Northamptonshire country inns, the matter was brought under the notice of the Kettering Licensing Justices, and at the annual meeting in August they postponed the case of the landlord of the Thornhill Arms, Rushton. Yesterday the landlord appeared at the adjourned licensing sessions and asked for a renewal. The chairman said the Bench had no power to compel him to supply tea, but they could refuse the license. They did not wish to do that, but they renewed the license on the clear understanding that applicant withdraw his objection to serve tea to cyclists and others The solicitor for the landlord denied that he had any objection to supply teas, and explained that on the occasion in question two cricket teams had been to the house and eaten all the bread, and therefore the landlord was unable to meet the request that was subsequently made.

SCOTSMAN DISAPPEARS.

Captain of the Montrose Says She is no Longer to be Seen on Belle Isle.

Quebec, Oct. 12.—The S S Montrose, which arrived late last night, reports having passed within a mile of the place where the Scotsman was wrecked on Belle Isle, and although the weather was clear nothing of the wreck was visible. It is feared the vessel may have foundered during recent gales.

Submarine Dangers.

New York, Oct. 12.—The crew of the submarine boat Holland were taken from her senseless yesterday, having been overcome by gas from a leaking reservoir. The six men comprising the crew remember nothing after the signal to stop had been given. The boat after a series of submarine tests came to stop in her dock at Green Port, L. I., and as no one appeared from the inside of the vessel men on the wharf forced upon her port. Gas rushed out. Rescurers descended and brought up the unconscious crew. The men quickly recovered.

BRITAIN'S SHORT REPLY TO KRUGER' ULTIMATUM

"We Are Not Prepared to Discuss Such Terms." Transvaal Troops Now Occupy Charlestown and Ingogo in Natal.

AND A CONFLICT MAY HAVE OCCURRED ALREADY.

European Agent of the Transvaal Notifies French Government That a State of War Exists. Schreiner Appeals for Peace But Won't Sign the Treason Proclamation.

London, Oct. 12.—Right Hon. William St. John-Broderick, Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, announced in a speech at Guildford last night that the Government has made the only possible reply to the Transvaal, namely, that "We are not prepared to discuss such terms."

London, Oct. 12.—Advices from Ladysmith this afternoon state that four thousand Boers crossed Laing's Nek Pass and entered Natal yesterday. They took possession of Charlestown and Ingogo without resistance.

London, Oct. 12.—A special despatch from Ladysmith, Natal, says that the Boers occupied Laing's Nek the moment the ultimatum expired, and are now pouring into Natal. Ingogo Heights have been occupied.

London, Oct. 12.—Official confirmation of the announcement that the Orange Free State burghers have entered Natal by way of Van Reenen's Pass is at hand. It leaves no further room for doubt that acts of war have already been committed and that the campaign has begun. News of an invasion on the northern border is also generally accepted as reliable. It seems improbable, therefore, that a clash between the forces of Britain and Boers can long be delayed; if, indeed, it has not occurred already.

Paris. Oct. 12.—Secretary Van der Hoeven, of the Transvaal European agency, officially notified the French Government this morning that a state of war between the South African Republic and Great Britain exists, and has existed since last evening.

Lorenzo Marquez, Oct. 12.—Information has reached here that the Boers have mined three piers of the bridge at Komati Poort, on the Komati river.

Durban, Oct. 12.—The Imperial reserves in Natal have been called out. Everybody has left Charlestown, the last train bringing away the railway staff to Newcastle, while the exodus from Newcastle also continues.

The Fifth Dragoons arrived this morning from India, landed immediately and at once proceeded for the front.

London, Oct. 12.—Special — Advices from Durban state that the Boers will capture Newcastle to-day and then make a forward movement on Ladysmith, which is now the strongest postion in Natal. Reinforcements are being hurried there.

London, Oct. 12.—The Free State burghers according to a private message just received in the city of London, have crossed the Orange river into Cape Colony and have occupied Philipstown. Their object, it is supposed, is to cut the railway at De Aar Junction, which is considered an important strategic point.

London, Oct. 12.—Special—A Pietermaritzburg despatch says the Boers are seizing the cattle belonging to the Kaffirs in Zululand.

All Englishmen in the Transvaal are being escorted to the frontier free of charge.

Pretoria, Oct. 11.—Delayed in transmission—A declaration of martial law is momemtarily expected. More commandered gold arrived to-day under escort, and was lodged in the National Bank.

MOVE INTO ZULULAND.

London, Oct. 12.—This morning's despatches furnish ample details of the situation on the frontier and enable a clearer exposition of the military status. It now seems that the Boers intend to act in two columns, those from the Transvaal working from the north and those of the Orange Free State working from the west, with the object of keeping the British forces at Ladysmith and Dundee occupied while parties of Boers slip past to destroy the bridges along the railway forming the line of communication between the British base at Durban, Natal, the advanced base at Pietermaritzburg, and the front.

It is regarded as possible that the Boers will attempt to occupy Estcourt, where there are only a hundred men of the naval brigade, and the news that the Boers are raiding Zululand, in the neighbourhood of Eshowe.

London, Oct. 12.—Taken as a confirmation of this possibility, an easy road connects Eshowe and Estcourt, through Greytown and Pampeonnek; and from Greytown it is also an easy reach to Howick, to the south. If they bridges along the Umgeni river were destroyed, this would enormously increase the difficulty of reinforcing the British. However, it is still suspected that the entire Boer concentration on the frontiers of Natal may be merely an elaborate feint to draw off attention from Mafeking, which many experts regard as the real objective of the Boers. A successful dash there would give the Boers great prestige with the disaffected Afrikanders in Cape Colony.

British Force for Border.

A despatch from Mafeking, under to-day's date, says that Colonel Baden-Powell has just sent a strong British force from Mafeking toward the border, with field guns and ambulances, presumably with a view of occupying advantageous defensive high ground. Col. Baden-Powell's movement is held to indicate that he is not only prepared for sharp fighting but probably expects it at that point.

Despatches from Durban, Natal, confirms the report that the Orange Free State authorities seized the Natal train that was leaving Ladysmith yesterday morning for Harrismith. They also stopped a train due to leave Harrismith in the afternoon. All the rolling stock has been ordered down the country, out of reach of seizure. It is understood that telegraphic communication with the Transvaal ceased punctually at five o'clock yesterday afternoon—Transvaal time.

Thanks to English Friends.

As a pendant to his despatch to America, President Kruger has cabled the Transvaal European agent as follows from Pretoria, under date of Oct. 11th: "Please convey the heartfelt thanks of the Government of the South African Republic to their friends in England for the courageous way in which they have defended the cause of right. Whatever the outcome may be, the two Republics will always greatly bear in mind the assistance and support shown them in these critical days."

CENSORSHIP IN NATAL.

New York, Oct. 12.—The Commercial Cable Company has issued the following notice: "We are advised that the Natal Administration announces that a military censorship has been established over message to and from Natal. Telegrams in code will not be accepted without the production of the code for verification."

MASON TO CHAMPION BOERS.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—United States Senator Mason has promised to champion the cause of the Boers in South Africa on the floor of the Senate. He said he would introduce a resolution at the earliest opportunity expressing sympathy for the Boers in their struggle for the preservation of their independence. He said also that he would propose a memorial to the Queen of England in behalf of the South African Republic.

SCHREINER REFUSED TO SIGN.

Cape Town, Oct. 12.—In the Cape House of Assembly to-day the Premier, Mr. W. P. Schreiner, made an impassioned appeal to the country and the press to preserve the peace. It is asserted that Mr. Schreiner refused to sign the proclamation of the Governor of Cape Colony, Sir Alfred Milner, declaring all persons abetting the enemy in a state of war against Great Britain to be guilty of treason.

It is understood that the military authorities will immediately establish a censorship over all telegrams to and from Cape Colony, as has already been done in Natal.

MAFEKING EXPECTS AN ATTACK.

Kimberley, Oct. 12.—The authorities of Mafeking are hourly expecting an attack, in which event the wires between Mafeking and Kimberley will be cut and information entirely shut off.

The latest information regarding the number of burghers assembled along the Kimberley border is that it does not exceed 3,500.

The Boers have only four field guns. A successful attack upon Kimberley is therefore considered impossible.

OFFICIAL FROM WASHINGTON.

Washington, Oct. 12.—The following official statement was issued by the State Department to-day:—

The President has received a large number of petitions signed by many citizens of distinction, requesting him to tender the mediation of the United States to settle the differences existing between the Government of Great Britain and that of the Transvaal. He has received other petitions on the same subject, some of them desiring him to make common cause with Great Britain to redress the wrongs alleged to have been suffered by the Uitlanders, and especially by American citizens in the Transvaal, and others wishing him to assist the Boers against alleged aggression.

"It is understood that the President does not think it expedient to take action in any of these directions. As to taking sides with either party to the dispute, it is not to be thought of. As to mediation, the President has received no intimation from either of the countries interested that the mediation of the United States would be accepted, and in the absence of such intimation from both parties, there is nothing in the rules of international usage to justify an offer of mediation under the present circumstances.

"It is known that the President sincerely hopes and desires that hostilities may be avoided; but if, unfortunately, they should come to pass, the efforts of this Government will be directed—as they are at present—to seeing that neither our national interests nor those of our citizens shall suffer unnecessary injury."

BRITISH CONFIDENT.

Mafeking, Oct. 12.—Half a battery of artillery from Kimberley has just arrived.

The police at the outlying stations have been ordered to concentrate within the town limits. No one is allowed to leave either by road or train without special permission, which is not granted to any able-bodied male. Nearly all the women and children have left. Confidence in their ability to repulse the Boers is increasing among the British.

CHEERED THEMSELVES HOARSE.

London, Oct. 12.—At the Alhambra Music Hall last night General Sir Redvers Buller was present. The first bars of "Rule Britannia" brought the entire audience to its feet, and for a quarter of an hour the house resounded with the cheery choruses of national airs and cheers. The Army and Navy Club, familiarly known as "The Rag," has not for many a day seen such a gathering of campaigners as was there last night. Nor was the slowly aroused enthusiasm confined to the officers. At Wellington barracks, where a battalion of Grenadiers, which forms a portion of the first army corps, had just returned from sixteen months' service at Gibralter, the enthusiasm knew no bounds. Seldom does "Tommy Atkins" permit himself the luxury of enthusiasm, but the regiment had had a long spell of dreary garrison duty and hailed the call to active service with delight.

Underneath all, however, officers, subalterns and civilians recognize the fact that the Transvaal campaign will not be a picnic, and the sober reality of this gives a sterner note to London life than anything that has occurred since the days of Gordon and Khartoum.

Dave Conroy's Big Bluff.

Everybody knows Mr Dave Conroy, and it would take some of them a considerable time to tell all they know of him. Recently Dave was in Norwood, where he put up at his nephew's, John Conroy's, who keeps a hotel. The aforesaid John had $300 taken out of his room one night, and, strange as it may appear, Dave was not even suspected of having taken it. But there was a stranger staying at the hotel, and Dave concluded to put up a big bluff. He accused the stranger of having stolen the money and arranged with one of the servants to come forward and state that he saw him take it from John Conroy's bedroom. The fellow at first denied everything, but afterwards threw up the sponge by admitting his guilt. This is the story, just as the Times got it. Our informant did not disclose how much Dave kept (if any) for his trouble, or whether the nephew got any of it back. The chances are, judging from friend David's past record, that his trip to Norwood was not altogether lost time.

THE CABINET IN SESSION.

Head of Allan Line Confers With Government Members.

Four of the Best Steamers of the Company Have Been Chartered by British Govt. for Conveying Troops, But the Company Will Handle Mails All the Same.

Ottawa Oct. 12.—The whole talk of Parliament Hill to-day is centered on the Transvaal and the sending of a Canadian contingent.

There is very little doubt but the course pursued by the Government will be to open a special service list to permit of volunteers being enrolled for serving for a specified period in Her Majesty's Imperial army.

In special cases this action has been taken in Canada. For instance, when it was decided to send a military contingent to the Yukon, volunteers were asked for, notwithstanding the contingent was not to go outside of the Dominion.

However, these are matters that will be discussed to-day by the Cabinet and official sanction will in all probability be given to the sending of a contingent in one form or another within a very few days.

The Militia Department has the arrangements so well advanced that 500 men could be despatched on about a week's notice.

Mr Allan, of the Allan Line, was here all day yesterday to see what was being done in the way of arranging for transporting to the Transvaal. He had also an interview with Sir Richard Cartwright in respect to the British mail contract. The Allans are now in a position to give the necessary boats for carrying the mails and therefore, the contract which was awarded to them and the Dominion Line some time ago will likely be signed very soon.

Four of the best steamers of the company have been chartered by the British Government for conveying troops and provisions. The steamers are the Bavarian, Mongolian, Silician and Siberian. The Bavarian is now on her way to England.

Dr Borden, Minister of Militia had a busy day of it yesterday. He spent part of the afternoon with Lord Seymour, the administrator, and had a long interview with Sir Richard Cartwright, who came in from Kingston to be present at the Cabinet meeting, and was with [illegible] Tarte in the evening. Between [illegible] the Minister of Militia was busy in [illegible] department.

G. T. R. HALF-YEARLY MEETING.

Shareholders Approve the Agreement for the Intercolonial Extension.

London Oct. 12.—The Grand Trunk Railway Company, at its half-yearly meeting to-day, approved the agreement with the Canadian Minister of Railways for the extension of the Intercolonial Railway from Chaudiere Junction, Province of Quebec, to Montreal and the termini there.

Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, president of the company, congratulated the stockholders upon the fulfillment of his prediction that the company would be able to pay not only the half-yearly 4 per cent. dividend on the guaranteed stock, but also one per cent. of the first preference stock. The capital outlay during the half year, he said, had been kept well within bounds, principal expenditure of £333,300 being occasioned by the safety appliance act.

The shareholders were also congratulated by Sir Charles upon the completion of the Victoria Jubilee bridge, and the settlement of the laborers' difficulties, which would have been more easily settled but for the politicans. Rate wars, Sir Charles declared were the greatest obstacles to successful railway management in Canada and the United States, and it now required all the power of the officials to resist influence tending to increase expenditures and to decrease rates.

BARON FARRER IS DEAD.

Distinguished Authority on Finance Dies Suddenly.

London, Oct. 12.—Baron Thomas Henry Farrer, of Abinger Hall, one of the most distinguished British authorities on trade and finance, and at one time permanent secretary of the Board of Trade, died suddenly this morning in his 81st year.

Military Law Abolished.

Chicago, Oct. 12.—A special cable to the Chicago Tribune from Paris says:—The Cabinet to-day voted to place all French colonies under civil authority and to abolish all military administration. The reform was proposed by M Decrais, Minister of the Colonies, and is the direct outgrowth of the storm of cruelty and oppression.

POLITICAL RUMORS.

The Star says that the latest rumor in Provincial politics is that Mr. John R. Barber will be taken into the Cabinet. This is a rumor which very many men are anxious to be lieve, for certainly few men—if any—in Provincial politics could add such strength to the Liberal party.

When Mr. Bronson retired and a Minister without portfolio was under consideration it was believed that Mr. Barber would be then taken into the Cabinet, but there were other needs at that time, and Mr. Garrow was introduced.

Whether or not Mr. Barber would enter the Government is quite another question. It is understood that it was after much urging that he was prevailed upon to become a candidate at all. His business interests might interfere with a more active participation in politics.

Further than no fresh rumors, except some which are baceless and unreasonable, have been circulated in connection with Provincial politics.

The Times would be glad to see Mr. Barber enter the Cabinet. He has a reputation for being an upright, honorable gentleman and his elevation to a Cabinet position would be very acceptable to the people of eastern Ontario.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algus with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 30 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist as good natured and happy now as she wus when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer or somethin will be sp'iled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeered uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never fergit ef I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wuz only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven or eight head uv fine horses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves perticksler on, for they had been takin preminms at the fair every year since they wuz yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wusn't a funeral percession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week or ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough for me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin for the lady in less than no time.

"The team wus feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wuz a dozen or more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wusn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wus gittin anxious, though she wusn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 300 yards from the upper turn, and there wus no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heard a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wus Jim a-comin lickety spit. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wus comin after us wus like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let 'em go for all they wus wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wus fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wus comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wus.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wusn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist rared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forrerd as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there for a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wus in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wus that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wus, I'm afeerd I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I was dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wus killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hundred pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let theselves out on a spurt that wus chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wus, and so wus Mandy, for before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wus up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wus ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

"Mandy wus in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it wus only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uv a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all these golden sovereigns for so much paint!"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.

NEWS OF VICTORY.

When an excited messenger comes dashing in with glorious news of victory from a great field of battle nobody wonders at his enthusiasm. It is contagious. Every man who hears the grand tidings is ready to swing his hat and cheer and pass along the splendid story to his nearest neighbor. When a man has been through a terrible battle with sickness and at last has gained a glorious victory his first impulse is to tell the good news to others. He wants every man and woman of his acquaintance to know about the splendid remedy that brought him back from sickness and discouragement to sound and perfect health.

"I had rheumatism for three months," says Mr. James E. Crampton, of Sharpsburg, Washington Co., Md., in a recent letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y. "I couldn't walk at all. I was in business in Baltimore. I tried the best doctors I could get but they did me no good. I took three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it cured me sound.

"I came home to Sharpsburg and there were three cases of different diseases. I advised the patients to use Dr. Pierce's medicine, which they did, and all were cured. I have sold one hundred dollars' worth of your medicine by telling people how it cured me.

"You will find enclosed 31 one-cent stamps for one of your 'Medical Advisers,' cloth-bound."

This grand "Discovery" is the most perfect formula ever devised for the complete and thorough renovation of the blood from all unhealthy germs and lurking taints of every name and nature. By making pure and healthy blood free from bilious poisons it builds up strong and active manhood and blooming attractive womanhood.

If out of health, write to Dr. Pierce. He will send you good, fatherly, professional advice without charge. See his address above.

THE ENTREE AN ECONOMY.

Dulls the Eater's Appetite For the Dinner Proper.

In the French and Italian cuisine, where economy is studied far more scientifically and thoroughly than in the English or American kitchen, the entree is not considered an extravagance. On the contrary, it is looked upon rather as an attractive economy—like soup, which dulls the eater's appetite so that he partakes less heartily of the more costly meat courses that follow. On the continent the luncheon never begins, as with us, with the chief dish of substantials. There is an introduction in the shape of a soup, or a dish of eggs, or of rice, or of macaroni, or semolino prepared in appetizing mode. Upon this the luncher tries the first edge of his appetite, so to speak. The piece de resistance comes afterward.

In the same manner, at dinner, the soup is almost invariably followed by one or two entrees. In the more ambitious menus these may consist of fish or poultry, or even of meat, prepared in croquettes or rissoles, or vol-au-vent. If there are two entrees, the vegetable will come second. But when, as is the case at many tables, there is only one entree, this is nearly always a vegetable and is served directly after the soup.

It must be borne in mind that the old fashioned custom which prevailed so generally some years ago in America, and is still to be found in certain places, of serving a number of vegetables with the principal meat dish is not followed on the continent. In England it is not unusual to see half a dozen dishes of vegetables appear with the roast. There they have even less idea of variety than is common with us, for precisely the same vegetables are offered day after day until one grows weary of the very sight of them. This, of course, is not the case among those people who have made a study of dinner giving and have grafted French customs on the British stock.

On the continent, however, things are done in a different fashion. At a simple dinner, containing, let us say, five courses, the first will be soup, the second a vegetable entree, the third meat of some kind, with one, or at the most two, vegetables, and one of them rarely fails to be a salad. Then comes a sweet, and after it fruit or cheese. The vegetable that appears as an entree need not of necessity be costly or unusual. Perhaps it is only a cauliflower, served with a good white sauce, or spinach, not cooked as we see it here—the stems and leaves coarsely chopped—but minced to a powder and then put through a colander, so that it is deliciously smooth and soft before it is dressed with butter or cream and surrounded with three cornered bits of toast or friend bread, or the entree may be nothing more elegant than white turnips or young carrots cut into small pieces, stewed tender and served with a cream sauce, or celery divided into three inch lengths, fried brown and seasoned with a tomato gravy. The name of the combination is legion, but they all have one point in common—that they are comparatively inexpensive.—Harper's Bazar.

Poison Bottle Ornaments.

At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city, there is a great collection of ancient jewelry, much of it in gold richly adorned with precious stones. Jewelers in the metropolis frequently visit the museum for the purpose of obtaining suggestions. This collection at the Metropolitan museum is in fact the finest assemblage of antique objects of personal ornaments in existence. Some of them date as far back as 900 B. C. Those of them which are made of silver have been practically destroyed by oxidation, but the gold ones being cleaned are as bright and new looking as they were 2,500 or 2,600 years ago. The jewelry from Cyprus is the work of ancient Phoenicians and Greeks.

One thing very noticeable is the frequency of tiny gold bottles attached to objects of jewelry derived from those ancient times. All evidence points to the conclusion that they were employed to hold poison, for in those days life was by no means secure, and at any time an emergency might arise where a man or woman would be glad to end existence promptly to escape lifelong imprisonment or indescribable torture by the horrible means used by the ancients.

Misunderstood.

A dentist on the South Side advertises on a large scale that he pulls teeth without pain by the "animal magnetism system."

Yesterday an Irishman came into the dentist's office suffering with a toothache.

"Faith, and I must have me tooth pulled, but I'd like to see the animals first."

MORE THAN HER OWN

An Important Speech Made By British Ambassador in China.

ENGLAND HAS DONE WELL.

Sir Clude Says Many Important Results Have Been Obtained.

His Own Belief Was That the Hanging of Officials Was the Only Way of Putting an End to the Outrages Crime and Corruption.

London, Oct. 11.—Sir Claude M. Macdonald, British Minister at Pekin, speaking at a dinner given by the China Association in the Whitehall Rooms of the Hotel Metropole, said in regard to British affairs and interests in China during the past three or four years he did not think there was any necessity for the pessimistic tone adopted by a good many critics. He thought that Great Britain had decidely more than held her own. Cheers. Many important results had been obtained, and it behooved them now to do their level best to make the best of those results. Hear, hear. The results which had been achieved included the opening of the West river, of several new treaty ports, and of inland waters for steam navigation, and the granting of many important railway and mining rights to British subjects; and those results having been arrived at, it should be their policy now to develop them, and be on the vigilant outlook for more. Laughter and "Hear, hear."

Criticism had been levelled at the Chinese Government on the ground that they took away with one hand what they gave with another, or at any rate whittled down a measure so as to render it almost valueless. He regretted to say that his experience showed a certain amount of justification for that criticism. There was, however, a great deal to be said on the other side, and he believed that China was now becoming alive, in her own interests, to help those who were prepared to help her. Hear, hear.

As to outrage and crime, he was convinced that the Chinese Foreign Office were willing to put them down with a firm hand. His own belief was that the hanging of officials was the only way of putting an end to this state of things.

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grizzly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lochnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a field where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked in and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Wal, I declare, is it really you, Hank!" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fine sence you went west. They're makin' you a railroad president or suthin of that sort, ain't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Wal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out th—

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder, "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

All Roads Lead to the Dressmaker.

Mr. Hornbill—Do you know, darling, I could pick you out of a crowd of women just by your style!

Mrs. Hornbill—I don't wonder, and me with this same old dress for the last two seasons!

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, seeing his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the tanateros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the tanateros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light, they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have reascended the shaft. When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the other eye, previously open and somewhat blinded by the daylight, perceives nothing at all.

Mrs. Cadger—They tell me, Henrietta, that your husband is unkind to you.

Mrs. Howes—Yes, John is not very gentle in his manners, I must admit, but there is one thing I will say for him, he never kicks up a rug or creases a tidy.—Boston Transcript.

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the beatedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 85 cents each, but with $85 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fire department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth Is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and set to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and heavings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproars of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

Vastly Different.

As will be seen, it makes a great difference how one uses the muscular resources at one's command.

A member of an athletic club, after swimming the length of the large tank in the basement of the institution, came out puffing and blowing, apparently exhausted.

"You don't manage your breathing right," said the swimming instructor. "It ought not to tire you so. As to the upper part of your body, including your arms, you use exactly the same muscles, and in very much the same way, in swimming as in sawing wood."

"No, sir!" gasped the swimmer. "When it comes to sawing wood, I use the muscles of some other man."—Youth's Companion.

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. ARE A UNITED PEOPLE

Lord Rosebury Says the Boer Matter Touches the Nation's Prestige.

PARTY DIFFERENCES ASIDE.

He Severely Criticises the Treaty Made After Maguba Hill.

In Face of This Attack Upon the Nation, People Will Close Up Their Ranks and Relegate Party Controversies More Convenient Season.

London, Oct. 11.—Lord Roseberry, the former Premier and Liberal leader, has finally declared his position relative to the South African question. In a letter, under to-day's date, he says : "I have maintained silence because I am loath to re-enter politics. To-day, however, I can speak without touching politics, for a situation has been created which is beyond party polemics. I think there is much in the last three years of our relations with the Government of the Transvaal to criticize if not to condemn ; but that is all over for the present. It is needless to discuss how we could best have attained our simple and reasonable object of rescuing our fellow-countrymen in the Transvaal from intolerable conditions of subjection and injustice, and of securing equal rights for the white races in South Africa for an ultimatum has been addressed to Great Britain by the South African Republic, which is itself a declaration of war.

"In the face of this attack upon the nation, the people will undoubtedly close their ranks and relegate party controversies to a more convenient season.

"There is one more word to be said. Without attempting to judge the policy which concluded a peace after the reverse at Majuba Hill, I am bound to state my profound conviction that there is no conceivable Government in this country which could repeat it."

London, Oct. 11.—There was a great scene on the floor of the Stock Exchange at 3.10 to-day, the time of the expiration of the period fixed in the Boer ultimatum The brokers gathered and began singing "God Save the Queen" and "Rule Britannia" A large crowd outside took up the strains, and singing and cheering spread from point to point in the neighborhood, until the whole district was alive with enthusiasm.

London, Oct. 11.—The Foreign Office confirms the report from Washington that Great Britain has asked the United States Government to empower the United States consular authorities in the Transvaal to represent British interests there during the hostilities.

Another Yukon Claim

Montreal, Oct. 10.—There is another big claim looming up against the Government in connection with the Yukon and the nature and extent of the demand will no doubt create a great deal of interest throughout the country. It will be remembered that as soon as the Klondike rush began several of the banking institutions of the country fell over each other in their frantic rush to set up a branch at Dawson, and above all to secure the Government account. The Hon. George Cox, it is said, had been a literal subscriber to the Grit election fund in Ontario, and as his bank, the Canadian Bank of Commerce, was as good as they make them, that institution got the account in question. Now, however, they wish they hadn't, for the expected profits have turned out to be no profits at all. In fact, the huge surplus that was expected from the year's banking in the Yukon has not materialized, and a big deficit reigns in stead. The Senator, however, has a better plan for getting over deficits than had his old friend, Sir Richard Cartwright, for the proposition is to ask the Dominion Government to recoup the Canadian Bank of Commerce for the loss they have sustained. It is said, in fact, that the sum will be a handsome one.

She loved and was beloved in turn,
But, ah, she was not happy ;
Because her lover and beloved
Were not the selfsame chappy.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

'PHAWAT MAYOR DAVIS TOULD TO ME'

With Sundry Profound Salaams and Apoligies to Leslie's Magazine.
by The Times Political Poet.

McNally and Malone were anchored at Powie Morgan's bar,
Expressing their opinion of the granolithic war.
McNally said it was a shame; he said it wasn't right;
While Pat Malone declared it was a subject for a fight.

They argued and expressed themselves from every point of view;
They emphasized their arguments until the air was blue;
They quoted great authorities in language loud and strong;
Each one declared his side was right—the other side was wrong.

McNally said Mayor Davis didn't like his job a bit;
He said that "Al" soon would be glad to get a chance to quit,
"And furthermore," he added, as he proudly raised his head,
"Tis me that can repate to you the words that Mayor Davis said."

"Let's hear 'em," said Sir Langford, who was standing at the bar,
"For I'm right interested in this cementless sidewalk war,
I ain't so posted on the biz, as you and Pat Malone,
For I've as much as I can do attending to me own.

McNally thus encouraged, slowly buttoned up his coat,
And in a noisy manner he began to clear his throat,
He struck a fiery attitude, and in a quite dramatic way
He said, "Now, gints, I'll tell ye both what Alfred had to say :

McNally paused; upon his friends he shot a searching glance;
He saw that they were much surprised; he had them in a trance.
He spoke again, in whispers low, in guarded tones said he:
"But that's not all; Oi haven' tould phwat Davis said to me."

Malone gazed at Sir Langford and Sir Langford at Malone;
Then both gazed at McNally, who was silent as a stone.
At last Malone, in timid tones, enquired: "Is it true
Had Mayor Mayor Davis been discussin' these affairs av state wid you?"

He said he was opposed, and would not consent to make
A lot of bad-laid sidewalks for innybody's sake,
Sez he: 'Auld Nick may take ye all, the Council's goin' that way,
An' now ye doomed Kilkerney cats, I'm goin' out to stay."

McNally looked upon the pair, a twinkle in his eye.
Thought he: "Oi'll nivir get th' drinks unless Oi make the try."
Then cautiously he whispered: "Though Oo jipardoize me head,
Oi'll tell ye for the drinks, the virry wours thot Mayor Davis said."

Malone, as quick as lightning, held a dollar in his hand;
"Th' best," he said, "McNally, now ye have at your command."
The order that McNally gave was strictly up to date;
The others filled up quickly, so they wouldn't have to wait.

McNally sipped the tempting draught; he slowly drank it down,
While smiles of satisfaction banished every laggard frown.
Sir Langford and Malone both stood respectfully aside
And patiently awaited what McNally would confide.

At length McNally wiped his lips; a smile of sweet content
Informed Malone his dollar had been very wisely spent.
McNally stroked his chin, and in a self-important way
Said he: "Oi'll now repate to you phwat Mayor Davis had to say."

Sir Langford and Malone inclined to him an eager ear,
They craned their necks and hungrily they bent their ears to hear.
McNally watched the pair; he smiled; he knew there'd be some fun,
And hurriedly and prudently prepared himself to run.

He spoke, said he: "'Twas yistherday, about th' hour av four,
Oi met his Royal Highness (J. B. was standing in the door).
Oi doffed me hat; Oi bowed, to him; sez Oi, 'How do ye do?'
An' Davis sez to me," he yelled, "says Davis, 'How-de-do?'"

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—Youth's Companion.

HIS HAIR TURNED WHITE.

Peculiar Experience of the Man Who Dealt in High Explosives.

"Nitroglycerin, sir; high explosives accomplished it,'" said a well dressed man with a youthful face and snow white hair to a chance acquaintance at the Great Northern.

"But your face is not scarred? It would seem that an explosion"—

"An impending explosion it was. Two years ago I was the most successful well shooter in America. I could make the oil loosen up where others had failed. The secret lay in the explosives I employed. I made them myself and had the business down fine. At that time I went to New York to figure on a big blasting contract that would have made me a pile. I failed to make the arrangement, and the very day the negotiations fell through I started suddenly for England on a similar mission.

"'Is there such a thing as high explosives ripening?' asked the Englishman I was accompanying on the second day of our voyage.

"The question brought me to my feet and caused an exclamation of horror to escape from my lips. Many explosives undergo a ripening process, which adds greatly to their destructive power, at the same time decidedly increasing the danger of handling them. That made by me was this character. Indeed 25 days after it compounded it was almost certain to explode of its own volition, so to speak. On the upper shelf of the checkroom of my New York hotel I had left a large grip containing a 20 pound can of this compound, the ripening of which meant destruction and death.

"For an hour I was almost in a state of frenzy, freely denouncing myself as a multimurderer. In vain I drew an awful picture of the devastation that would overwhelm a certain New York hotel in exactly 17 days and called upon the captain to put his ship about. He promised to transfer me to a west bound steamer if an opportunity presented itself, but fortune failed me, and I was obliged to cross the ocean. On the morning of the twenty-fifth day of the life of my ripening high explosive I sprang from a carriage and rushed into the hotel.

"No reprieved murderer ever experienced greater joy than I did as I saw the last of the terrible fluid disappear in a catch basin. Ten minutes later I started back from the mirror of the hotel bar, where I had gone for a 'bracer,' in absolute dismay. My jet black hair had turned white as snow."

VETERANS UNDER FIRE.

The Reason They Don't Stoop When the Bullets Are Flying.

"The temptation to stoop when under fire is almost irresistible," said a veteran, "and that accounts for so many of the wounds received by raw troops. You see, when a man happens to be hit in a stooping posture the chances are that the bullet plows right through his body from end to end. On the other hand, if he is standing erect, the probabilities are in favor of the wound being slight, anyhow not mortal. Old soldiers are well aware of this, and while they will drop flat and hunt cover every chance they get they never stoop.

"After a soldier has been in a few engagements he learns such tricks, and, as far as the rest of it is concerned, he becomes simply a fatalist. There is nothing strange about it, for almost all his experiences appear to lend color to that doctrine. For instance, he never dodges, because he has seen men dodge and get killed when it really seemed as if they had reached for the bullet. In fact, the strangest things are continually happening, all apparently the pure whim of chance.

"I remember near Petersburg a comrade of mine, as brave a fellow as ever lived, took refuge behind a little hut. He was wornout under fire and wanted to get a moment's breathing space. Twenty feet in the rear and a little to one side was a pile of crossties full of wrought iron nails. A bullet came along, splintered a tie and drove out one of the nails at right angles. The jagged iron struck my chum in the side, penetrated his kidneys and killed him.

"That's the blind chance of war, and after getting a few such object lessons a fellow is apt to acquire a sort of sang froid that is immensely impressive to a recruit. It isn't because he has a contempt for danger; he has merely learned the folly of trying to evade it."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave three floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get saddled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"'Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my derndest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

A Big Sale of Republic Stocks

THE FAIRFAX CO., OF REPUBLIC, J. J. Brown, Pres., Willis Memaine Treas., after securing the Jim. Hill claim ajoining it on the north, sampled the ledge and W. H. Stowell reports on this cropping $16 60 in gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Texas Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,610 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorised me to place a small amount of this stock at 3½cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Hill are less than 800 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.60 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3½ cts., is a speculation. THE ENGINEER AND MAYOR.

Stranger's Idea Regarding the Manhole on Murray Street.

Yesterday an intelligent stranger, apparently from Lindsay, stood looking down Murray street. A citizen came up and he accosted him:

"What be this?" said the stranger.

"It's the Murray Street Canal," replied the citizen.

"Bless me," said the stanger, "I didn't know that air canal came through Peterborough. You must have a big pull on the government. What be them things stickin' up there?"

"They are the manholes."

"Be gosh," replied the stranger, "that reminds me of what I saw in the Rockies. There was a big cane there, up in the mountains, and one night there was a big landslide, and I'll be durned it that air cane did'nt stick out fifty feet in the morning. If I knowed you're authorities I'd suggest that the two manholes be used for pedestals for two monuments, for the Engineer and Mayor of the town, for these names should not be allowed to perish, and I'd put two images on them, like Nebucadnezzar's. Their feet would be clay, but, be gosh, their heads should be brass."

FEW LICENSES.

Local sportsmen are already making preparations for the deer hunting season. It was whispered that in consequence of certain developments at the the close of last year's season, very few license fees will be paid this year. The tax is not a very heavy one, but the exemptions allowed, and the failure to enforce penalties are responsible for a contemptuous feeling regording the Act and the local officials who are supposed to enforce it.

VILLAGE COUNCIL.

The Village Council meet on Monday evening for the despatch of business; Reeve Hull in the chair and the other memoers, with the exception of Councillor Trude, being, present.

An application for a grant of $10 towards the expenses of the civic holiday celebration committee was presented by the chairman, the Rev G Warren and acceded to.

Mr J P Strickland asked for a committee to negotiate with J G Brown re a drain through his property. This is an old cause of strife and led to some forcible remarks from Councillor Fraser. Finally the Reeve poured oil on the troubled waters, and Mr Brown, like President Kruger, is to have one more chance for an amicable settlement, Councillors Fitzgerald, and Trude, with the Reeve, being the committee.

The Finance Minister recommended payments of accounts amounting to $25.87, and they were adopted accordingly.

The Presbyterian church was granted the use of the council chamber for divine service for the two next succedding Sundays, by reason of repairs to the church being in progress.

A committee representing citizens trying to resurrect the village band, was referred to the clerk to complete arrangements for handing over the band instruments; and the council, having got through their business, promptly adjourned.

WINTER SPORTS.

Winter sports are being talked of and it is probable the hockey club will not be much in evidence this year. On the other hand it is hoped that the Lakefield Curling Club, which for the past two years somewhat fallen from it's former greatness, will this season blossom out with renewed vigor and make its power felt in the district.

Lindsay Post: Peterborough has been troubled with typhoid fever this fall, and the medical health officer states that in every case the families attacked secured their supply of drinking water from wells. Fenelon Falls Power Scheme.

The construction of the pole line between Lindsay and Fenelon Falls is being pushed with great vigor, a gang of fifteen men being at work. At the Lindsay end the poles are now in position as far as McLaren's creek, and at the other end the men are over a mile from the village, heading this way. The work in connection with the power house foundation is also well advanced, and the stone for the first story of the building is now on the way from the quarries below Bobcaygeon. Over 700 poles will be required for the line, the cost of which, exclusive of planting, will be over $2,000.—Post.

THE LATE T. G. HAZLITT, ESQ.

Yesterday morning at four o'clock, Thomas George Hazlitt for nearly half a century, a prominent and greatly respected citizen of Peterborough died at his residence, Water street, at the age of 76 years.

In the passing into life eternal of the subject of this notice, Peterborough loses one of her oldest and most sterling citizens. It may be truly said that no one in this community has been held in higher respect that the late Mr. Hazlitt; this has been evidenced not only by the constant interested inquirics which have been made concerning him during his last and somewhat lingering illness, but from time to time by the regard shown for his views in connection with all matters relating to the welfare of the town. And while he had an abhorence of anything like ostenation it was generally felt that he might be relied upon to take his part in all movements designed for the general good. It was in March 1896 that Mr. Hazlitt, when quietly discussing a business matter with his solicitor, was seized with a slight stroke of paralysis, which unfortunately through his characteristic unwillingness to give in, soon developed into so severe an illness that for several months at that time his life was despaired of and although he slowly recovered his faculties his constitution received such a shock as to permanently shatter his physical strength, thus leaving him much more susceptible to attack. Early in the month of September last when at his office, he received a chill which completely prostrated him and from that time, although occasionally giving hopes that he might rally, his strength has been gradually ebbing away until at four o'clock, a. m. on the 12th of October, 1899, his spirit quietly left his frail and emaciated body.

The late Mr. Hazlitt was born in the county of Armagh, Ireland, in the year 1823 and came to Canada in the year 1847, with his father, the late John Hazlitt, who died in August 1869. He had received a careful education at the Grammar School and had become a classical scholar of no mean attainments. Indeed, a fact not generally known or appreciated —Mr. Hazlitt was a gentleman of ripe scholarship and extensive reading; there were few subjects upon which he could not aptly quote from the greater poets of his own country as well as from the classics, and although nothing was more distasteful to him than the least semblance of pedantry, yet with such as could understood and sympathize he derived keen enjoyment from the discussion of literature. So thorough had been his training in the Old Country that shortly after his arrival in Kingston, when a mastership in the Picton Grammer School happened to be vacant, after being put through a sharp examination by the English church clergyman, who, as was usual in those days, took an active part in educational matters, he was easily able to obtain the position, which he held for some time with credit to himself and advantage to his pupils. In the year 1852 he moved to Peterborough and embarked in mercantile pursuits, which he carried on with varying success. In 1858 he married Miss Mary Ann Dickson, the eldest daughter of the late Samuel Dickson, Esq., who survives him, but although he was exceedingly found of children, who took to him in a remarkable manner, there was no child born of his own marriage. It was not until the year 1865 that Mr. Hazlitt became actively engaged in the lumber business as assistant to the late Samuel Dickson, whose tragic death in the spring of 1870 naturally transferred to Mr. Hazlitt the management of the estate, which he has carried on with so much energy and ability. It was at this time, when thrown entirely upon his own resources, having had but short experience in connection with waterpower and lumber manufacturing, that Mr. Hazlitt evinced that remarkable capacity and grasp which have enabled him to manage so successfully the large interests committed to his care. During the period since 1870, there have been many years of depression, under which few have not succumbed, but Mr. Hazlitt's courage never flagged, his ceaseless energy never failed, and while others let the reins pass from their hands he kept them well within his grasp, and was thus able not only to conserve for his wards the fine property which their father had left, but to add greatly to its value. Indeed though orphaned by the death of their father, the six daughters of the late Mr. Dickson have ever felt that in Mr. Hazlitt they had one who truly stood to them as a most affectionate parent, and those who survive mourn his death no less than if he were their real father. Not only has he been to them one of the truest of friends; but many others can testify as to the constancy and unselfishness of his friendship. He was ever slow to form an attachment, but when formed it was sure to be lasting. Than, too, in acts of unostentatious charity he was never wanting, and many would miss the kindly help received at his hand, were it not that it will be continued by her who is left. These are they who will cherish the memory of the departed for many years to come,

In 1886 a joint stock company was formed for the purpose of carrying on the business of the Dickson estate, the name "The Dickson Company, of Peterborough, Limited," being appropriately given to it. Of this company Mr. Hazlitt at once became the managing director and shortly after its president, both of which offices he has held continuously ever since; it is largely due to his skillful and energetic management that the company has become one of Peterborough's most solid corporations. Mr. Hazlitt was also the pioneer of electric lighting in Peterborough, and has been the president of the Light and Power Company since its establishment, nine years ago.

Some years ago Mr. Hazlitt was appointed a Justice of the Peace for the County of Peterborough, but he never exercised the functions pertaining to the position. He was many times urged to take part in municipal affairs, but his tastes did not lie in that direction, useful as would have been his advice at the council board, as he was always able to express himself wisely, clearly and concisely.

The only near relatives, besides his wife surviving Mr. Hazlitt, are a nephew, Mr. Thomas Geo. Hazlitt, jr., of Otonabee and seven neices, children of the late Mr. John Hazlitt, who died last winter.

In religion he was a Presbyterian, and in politics a Liberal, but in both he was entirely free from bigotry; those who sought employment from him were never questioned upon these points, nor was he influenced by the knowledge of their religious or political bent.

In conclusion it may be well said that in the death of Mr. Hazlitt, Peterborough loses one of her pioneer business men, whose solid methods bear favorable comparison with those of later date.

CRAWFORD SAWERS' SAD FATE.

Further Particulars of the Sad Event—All Hopes Abandoned.

Mr W H Moore received word yesterday from Mrs C W Sawers to the effect that all hope had been given up of seeing her son Crawford alive again. She personally inspected the boat in which he and his companions were out sailing and found that the sails were torn to shreds, whilst the side of the craft was stove in as though it had come in contact with the rocks.

A search for the bodies has been instituted along the shores of Howe Sound.

Crawford was a great favorite amongst the teachers and pupils at the Collegiate Institute before his departure with his parents to British Columbia. Mr and Mrs Sawyers have the sympathy of all in their trouble.

The following is from the Vancouver World:

"Capt. Jack Cates brought in on his steamer, the Defiance, the skiff in which the Mannion boys and Crawford Sawers attempted on Saturday last to reach Bowen Island. It had been picked up on the rocky shore with the mast still standing and sail set. One oar was also found in the boat. The boat itself was both stove in and badly racked many of the planks having been sprung. During the gale it had evidently been driven across some of the rocks in the Sound, striking so hard as to almost go to pieces. It now lies at the Evans, Coleman & Evans dock. Nothing has yet been discovered that would in any way indicate whether the boys succumbed to the waters or succeeded, as there is still much hope, in reaching one of the islands or the main shore, and as so many tides have ebbed and flowed it is very difficult matter even to conjecture where the accident may have happened, besides which the wind, in which there has been several changes, must be taken into account. The boys, who are 18 and 15 years respectively, were good sailors, but the waters are without doubt dangerous. It is but a couple of years since Captain Cates, at the imminent risk of losing his boat, the Lois, rescued Mr Mannion himself, with his daughter and the governess, from a watery grave as they clung to their upturned boat off the lighthouse.

"Crawford Sawers, too, was a boy well known about town. For some time he was employed in the office of an evening contemporary, living with his family on Robson street. His father, who is a lawyer, came some time ago from Peterborough, and is now practising in Atlin. Though but 18 years of age, he carried life insurance to the extent of $3,000 or $4,000.

ON A BED OF SAND.

The New Walks Said to be so Badly Built That They Won't Wear.

Men were yesterday put to work to rebuild the crossings for teams into yards over the recently laid granolithic walks on Water street. This necessitates the breaking up and destruction of the present crossings. The work had not proceeded far until it was discovered that under the surface of the top dressing is a bed mostly composed of sand and gravel, with not sufficient cement to make a band, and therefore not in accordance with the contract. Ald. McWilliams was notified and tested the so called pavement. He was so much impressed with its inferiority that he felt that immediate action should be taken to protect the town from loss. The Mayor is absent from town, and it requires a requisition signed by not less than five Aldermen (a majority of the Council), to secure a meeting. Ald. McWilliams was unable to procure five signatures, as will be seen by the following:

In favor of a meeting—Aldermen Sawers, Best, Denne and McWilliams.

Against—Aldermen Langford, Hall and Corkery.

Out of town—Ald. Neill.

Any one can go to where these crossings are and see for themselves the class of work that has been done.

Strike of the Machinists Compels the Company to Make a Departure From Old Rules—More Men go Out in Sympathy With Strikers.

Montreal, Oct. 13.—The Canadian Pacific Railway Company, it is reported, has placed orders for some 30 or 40 new locomotives with several of the leading locomotive manufacturers in the United States. This is the first large order for locomotives that the Canadian Pacific has placed outside Canada for many years. All the machinists in the employ of the company from Fort William to the Pacific are out on strike because the officers of the company refused to recognise their labor union. The conduct of the men in going out on strike has induced the company to depart from its policy in the past of turning out its own locomotives in Canada. With the exception of its repair shops, it is understood that the company will close all its locomotive shops, and in future order the locomotives it requires from firms in the United States.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 13.—The C. P. R. strike situation is getting more serious, the boilermakers, blacksmiths and their helpers having all quit work in sympathy with the machinists. There are now 250 men out at this point.

RELIEF FOR ARMENIANS.

Ottoman Govt. Makes Amends to Families of Those Killed in Massacres.

Constantinople, Oct. 13.—An Imperial irade has been issued abolishing all measures that prevented the free movements of Armenians. It orders the rebuilding and repairing, with Government assistance, of the churches, schools and monastries destroyed during the troubles, and payment of sums due officials or the families of officials who were expelled or killed in the massacres. In addition to these remedial measures, the irade pardons fifty-four prisoners and commutes to imprisonment for life the sentences of twenty-four prisoners condemned to death. As this action on the part of the Ottoman Government is accepted by the patriarch as satisfactory, these dignitaries will withdraw their signatures.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

OFFICERS ARE SAFE.

Captain Skrimshire, of the Scotsman, and His Aide Reach Gaspe.

Gaspe, Que., Oct. 13—Captain Skrimshire and first, second and fourth officer and steward of the ill-fated Scotsman, arrived here this morning by Government steamer La Canadienne and will proceed to Montreal Sunday night per S. S. M. Admiral and the Intercolonial Railway. They report that the hull of the Scotsman has completely disappeared since the strong gale of Sunday last. There are a few Newfoundland vessels around, but nothing can be done in the way of saving the cargo.

AND STILL NO YACHT RACE.

The Fog So Dense That Committee Call the Race Off.

New York, Oct. 13.—For the sixth time "No race." Shamrock and Columbia have been unable to get together for their first race because of the lack of wind and the density of the fog.

For a half hour after 10 o'clock this morning the wind kept up its hauling tactics until it had reached a point almost due east. With it came the great bank of fog that during the early morning hung densely over the ocean outside Sandy Hook. This fog was very dense and was almost of the consistency of heavy smoke or steam; so thick was it that the observers on the north tower of the Twin Lighthouse could not distinguish those on the south tower scarcely forty yards away.

The committee thereupon declared today's race off.

Society Woman in a Saloon.

Saginaw, Mich., Oct. 15—One down-town saloon yesterday made the remarkable announcement that between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock today a special reception would be held for ladies, at which time a musical programme would be given upon a mammoth music box.

To the surprise of all, at the hour appointed couples began to arrive, bringing some of the foremost society women of the city, and in a short time fully 100 of them had assembled. No drinks were dispensed and the large barroom was handsomely decorated. It was an odd function.

Reception to Mgr. Falconi.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—Archbishop Falconi, the Papal delegate to Canada, was given a reception in the Basilca last night. On his arrival he was driven to Archbishop Duhamel's residence. During the evening the clergy of the city marched in procession to the Basilica Archbishop Duhamel addressed the legate in Italian, and Mgr. Falconi afterwards addressed the congregation.

BOERS HAVE STRUCK THE FIRST BLOW IN WAR!

They Wrecked an Armored Train With Dynamite, and Fifteen British Soldiers Were Killed.

THE BRITISH GENERALS MOVING FORWARD.

Their Headquarters Are Now at Ladysmith in Preparation for a Boer Advance. Report That Boers Are at Laing's Nek Confirmed. Refugees Train Collides.

London, Oct. 13.—A Cape Town despatch states that to-day the Boers wrecked a British armoured train near Vryburg. The loss of life is heavy, but is not yet definitely known. The train was running from Mafeking when it was blown up and destroyed. The train had aboard the last of the refugees fleeing from the Transvaal into Cape Colony. They numbered two hundred, including women and children, besides armed guard. The news of the outrage has aroused the population to a pitch of violence.

London, Oct. 13.—The Foreign Office to-day confirmed the report that an armoured train had been blowed up by the Boers. Great crowds surround the bulletin boards, where the news of the tragedy is posted. Excitement and indignation are intense and a great clamour for vengeance is made.

London, Oct. 13.—The Evening News publishes the following despatch from Cape Town:—"An armoured train has been destroyed south of Mafeking. Fifteen British troops were killed. The Boers shelled the wreckage after the train was derailed."

London, Oct. 13.—A later Cape Town special says that it is now stated that the armoured train was acting as an escort to the train carrying refugees and none of the latter were hurt. Fifteen soldiers on armoured train, however, were killed.

Vryburg, Oct. 13.—The train from Mafeking with three hundred women and children, passed Vryburg on the way to Kimberley. All on board were well.

London, Oct. 13.—When the first news of the blowing up of the armoured train reached the metropolis intense excitement prevailed in all parts of the city. For the time business on the Stock Exchange was entirely suspended. Brokers were bitter in their denunciations of the Government for delaying sending troops to the Transvaal. They likened the policy of delay to the fatal procrastination of Gladstone in Egyptian troubles.

London, Oct. 13.—The Cabinet is now in session. It is rumored that the Government has received news from Pietermaritzburg of an important battle.

The Cabinet is also arranging detail of credit to be asked from Parliament for war expenditures.

Durban, Natal, Oct. 12.—Delayed in transmission—The Minister of Public Works, Lieut.—Col. Hime, has received a telegram confirming the report that a considerable force of Boers have entered Natal by way of Laing's Nek.

London, Oct. 13.—The military men here fear the worst at Mafeking, where a small force will be pitted against hordes of Boers. If the Boers capture Mafeking, they will immediately make a raid on the diamond mines at Kimberley.

London, Oct. 13.—A Cape Town special says that it is expected that all telegraph and railroad communication with Kimberley will be severed to-day by Orange troops at the Modder river.

London, Oct. 13.—The Boer forces with artillery, according to a despatch just received from Standerton, broke camp at Sandspruit yesterday morning, moving in the direction of Natal. The latest direct despatch from Mafeking says that, although the Boers are moving restlessly in the vicinity of their laager, there is no sign yet of an attempt to cross the border.

London, Oct. 13.—A despatch from Paris late this afternoon says:—"The Boers, with twelve guns, are preparing to assault Mafeking."

London, Oct. 13.—The Boer Government has seized all the gold in the banks at Johannesburg.

London, Oct. 13.—A Cape Town special says that President Steyn, of the Orange Free State, has issued a bombastic proclamation calling on all burghers to unite and stand as one man against the British oppressor.

President Kruger has issued a proclamation denouncing England, saying she has long coveted the Rand mines.

London, Oct. 13.—It is reported in Cape Town, though as yet the rumor is unconfirmed, that a collision has taken place between trains bearing refugees near Victoria West, Cape Colony, nine persons being killed and many others injured.

HOFMEYER'S APPEAL.

Cape Town, Oct. 13.—Mr. Hofmeyer, in his appeal issued under the auspices of the Afrikander Bund asking for subscriptions for the relief of the widows and families of burghers killed in the Transvaal, says that notwithstanding strenuous efforts to preserve peace war has been virtually declared. There are few Afrikanders not bound by ties of relationship and friendship with the inhabitants of both Republics, and natural sympathy should express itself in legitimate form, and do what can be done. To take weapons and join the work of warfare as British subjects forbids, and accordingly he appeals to each person to contribute the utmost.

TELEGRAPH WIRES CUT.

London, Oct. 13.—The second edition of the Standard says that a despatch from Ladysmith dated yesterday morning says that it is again reported that the Boers have occupied Laing's Nek, the young burghers insisting upon the occupation despite the more prudent counsels.

Telegraph wires connecting with the Free State have been cut and an immediate advance of the Boers is not anticipated.

AFFAIRS SERIOUS AT MAFEKING.

Mafeking, Cape Colony, Oct. 13.—As the Boers are in strong force threatening this place is so serious that all non-combatants have been notified that they will be taken away at the expense of the Imperial Government and housed at Cape Town. A railroad train carrying 300 women and children was escorted by a detachment of Col. Baden-Powell's force as far south as Vryburg, where the Cape railway becomes responsible for the safety of the passengers.

IRISH FUSILIERS AT DURBAN.

London, Oct. 13.—Albertina, which a despatch from Durban reported to have been seized on Thursday by the Boers, is a station in the Free State on the equipped and offered entirely by Natal troops.

Durban, advices received here say that the Royal Irish Fusiliers have arrived there, and that military headquarters are being removed to Ladysmith, whither General Sir George Stewart White, General Sir Archibald Hunter and General Symons, with their staffs, have already gone.

ANTI-BRITISH MOVEMENTS.

New York, Oct. 13.—A despatch to the World from London says:—The formation of a British flying squadron has created considerable bewilderment, it is purely a defensive measure, and inspired by the bitter hostility to England displayed by the continental press.

The Russian official organs are foremost in threats, and the German press is second only to the Russian in its denunciation of England's South African policy. Though not believing at present that these outbursts of rancor will materialize, the British Government is taking timely precautions against eventualities.

The difficulty and delay in mobilizing an army corps for South Africa is regarded as most unfortunate, and calculated to induce Britain's enemies abroad to take advantage of the present crisis to satisfy old animosities.

BRITISH CABINET MEETS.

London, Oct. 13.—The Cabinet met in Council at noon to-day. Public interest in the decisions was very keen. Lord Salisbury and Mr. Chamberlain, with other popular favorities, were cheered as they arrived. Although the latest phase of the situation in South Africa was considered, the principal business was to arrange respecting the text of the Queen's speech on the re-assembling of Parliament next Tuesday, and other preliminaries. The Council adjourned at 2 o'clock

BLOWING UP ARMOURED TRAIN.

London, Oct. 13.—The announcement that the Boers had destroyed an armoured train on the western border of to the "man in the street" the realities of war. Attempts are made to liken the occurrence to the blowing up of the United States battleship Maine in Havana harbour; but that event occurred in times of peace. The Boers were doubtless within their rights as belligerents, if they are responsible for the destruction of the train Taken in conjunction with the early announcement from Vryburg, that two thousand Boers were holding the line, it can only be inferred that the train was either destroyed by artillery or blown up by dynamite or some other powerful explosive. There is still a faint hope that the disaster befell the train not while the women and children were on board on the way to Vryburg, but while it was returning to Mafeking.

The War Office, however, fears that the worst has happend. Apart from the destruction of the armoured train, the most notable change in the position of affairs is the presence of the Boers at Maribogo, forty miles south of Mafeking, which seems to indicate that they are endeavouring to get Colonel Baden-Powell between two fires. The gravity of the Boer advance can be better estimated when it is realized that they will thereby cut railway and telegraphic communication to the north, isolating several British positions, which must be speedily relieved.

WASHINGTON NOTIFIED.

Washington, Oct. 13.—The State Department was to-day notified of the withdrawal from Pretoria of Mr. Conyngham Greene, the British diplomatic agent to the South African Republic, and the existence of a state of war between Great Britain and that Republic. Mr. Macrum, the American Consul at Pretoria, has accordingly been instructed to undertake the care of the British interests in that section during the war.

BATTALIONS REACH LADYSMITH.

Durban, Oct. 13.—The first and second battalions of the Manchester Regiment, under Lieut. Cols. Curran and Ridley, have arrived at Ladysmith.

"CRIMINAL POLICY."

Pretoria, Oct. 13.—An official manifesto has just been addressed to Afrikanders throughout South Africa, appealing to to them to resist the "unjust demand of Great Britain," accusing Lord Salisbury, Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Alfred Milner of treachery. It blames the Queen for condoning what it describes as Mr. Chamberlain's "criminal policy," and declares that "the clear desire and object of Great Britain are to deprive the Transvaal of dependence on account of the gold mines of the Rand."

Started Business in Peterboro.

Lindsay Post:—Two well-known and popular Lindsay men—Messrs. Thos. Ellis and Porter White—have joined Peterboro's business men, and under the firm name of Ellis & White will engage in the grocery trade, having purchased an old established business on George street. Mr. Ellis was in the employ of the Rathburn Co. here for some ten years as salesman, while Mr. White has served a long apprenticeship with Messrs. C. S. Blackwell & Co., grocers. Peterborough people will find them square men and good citizens, and they have the good wishes of many friends here for the success of their business.

A Correction.

An item appeared in yesterday's issue of the Times in regard to the recovery of $300.00 which was said to have been stolen from a bedroom of Conroy's Hotel, Norwood. We are quite safe in stating that the money probably would not have been recovered had it not been for the promptness of Mr. David Conroy of Peterborough, who happened to be stopping at the hotel and who made the party disgorge. The item was left in late at night and purported to have been written by our regular correspondent at Norwood but who, we discovered, had nothing to do with it. The article is taken by Mr. Conroy as casting reflections on his honesty and honour. We exceedingly regret that he views it in this light and we hasten to publish an apology for the appearance of the article, which was altogether unjustified. We acknowledge we had no right to reflect on either the honour or the honesty of Mr. Conroy and we take this earliest opportunity of apologising to him. We wholly withdraw any suggestion that may be considered to appear in the article in question, which might be deemed to reflect upon the reputation of Mr. Conroy in any manner whatever.

ROBT. WEIR THE CHOICE

OF THE PUBLIC MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT

To Nominate a Workingman's Candidate for Municipal Honors—Ex-Ald. Adam Dawson Has a Poor Opinion of the Present Town Council.

A public meeting was held in the Council Chamber last night, when a candidate was nominated to fill the vacancy on the civic board, and municipal matters lightly touched upon. A large audience was present, composed principally of workingmen, but considerable delay was experienced in securing a chairman to preside over the meeting; finally, however, Mr Robert Weir accepted the office and prefaced the evening's business with a brief address, in which he remarked that as working men were the bone and sinew of the town, they have a right to be well represented on the civic board. He briefly referred to the granolithic sidewalk difficulty and hoped to hear the matter discussed by those far more capable of grasping the situation than he.

Another citizen, whose name we withhold by request, drew attention to the wretched condition of Murray street today—the result of three months' labor—and sympathized with Engineer Hay, whom he thought had been unjustly maligned. Referring to the $600 job done at Spaulding's Bay last year, he thought the town had better pay three times that price and have such work constructed in a first class manner. He deplored the interference Engineer Hay had experienced at the hands of both citizens and Aldermen, and thought that were he left alone and given a chance he would insure to the town properly graded sidewalks. In conclusion, he thought that workingmen should be represented by two Aldermen and hoped to see a more democratic Council in the future than we have had in the past.

The Nominees.

The following gentlemen were here nominated as suitable candidates for the Aldermanic vacancy:

- Ex-Ald. Wm. White.
- Mr. Wm. Taylor.
- Mr. Samuel Clegg.
- Ex-Ald. Adam Dawson.
- Mr. Robert Weir.

Ex-Ald. Wm. White declined the nomination with thanks.

Mr Wm Taylor hadn't time just now to attend to municipal duties.

Mr S Clegg did not think he was open for municipal honors at present, and hoped the meeting would select a candidate of experience—one who in the present state of affairs would feel at home on the civic board.

Mr Weir explained that although he had been approached several times in this matter, he was not anxious for the office and would rather some gentleman of greater municipal experience than he be selected; but should any difficulty be experienced in securing a candidate, he would submit to the wishes of the meeting.

Ex-Ald. Adam Dawson in declining the nomination, explained that he had served the town in this capacity eleven years and thought that was sufficient. He further remarked that he had been the only man in the Council who had advocated 9 hours a day at $1.25 for town laborers. He is opposed to the election of nine men only on the civic board and thought that, instead of having the best business Council we ever had, as claimed by the Review and Examiner last spring, the town now is governed by the worst civic board in its experience.

The Candidate.

At this juncture Mr Weir on being pressed, accepted the nomination, when ex-Ald. Cahill, was voted into the chair and a show of hands taken, which resulted in Mr Weir's nomination being unanimously accepted.

The candidate then thanked the meeting for the honor conferred upon him, and said he would endeavor to do his duty by the electorate and particularly the working men.

Ex-Ald. Cahill expressed his confidence in Mr Weir as a friend to the cause of labor, and said that during the time they had worked together as Aldermen, he could find no fault in any of his (Mr Weir's) public actions.

Closing Remarks.

At this stage of the proceedings, Ald. McWilliams, being repeatedly called upon, gave a brief address on the questions at issue. He drew attention to the fact that the by-law reducing the number of Aldermen to nine had been almost unanimously carried, and according to law it must stand on trial of two years. He could not say that he was altogether satisfied with this system of municipal government. He referred to Engineer Hay as an honest, upright and honorable man, who had been handicapped and influenced by two members of the Council in the matter of sidewalk grades. He (the engineer) has, in fact, acted too honorable for his own welfare in some respects, by shielding certain members of the Council. He would not touch upon the granolithic sidewalk construction now, as the matter had been referred to the Judge on his resolution. He had no personal ill-feeling against Mr Sheehy. In fact, his work last year was perfectly

MUNICIPAL REFORM IN BELLEVILLE.

A good deal of attention is being directed by municipal reformers to the experiment now in progress in Belleville, which, taking advantage of the new act, has reduced the number of aldermen from 21 to 7 and elected them from the whole city, abolishing the ward system. The new administration has been tried for eight months and Major Johnson has written his opinion of the results achieved for the benefit of municipalities which are meditating the introduction of the system. He declares that the reform has been a success and adduces the following facts:—

This is the first year in which the main thoroughfares have been put in order on a comprehensive, intelligent and permanent plan. The purchase of a steam roller was effected early in the year. Previous efforts to get one were always defeated in council, although recommended by the public works committee. Seeing daily the good work being done on the streets, no one now cavils at the council's action.

We have made every member of the council, including the major, a member of every committee. This arrangement enables each one to know and be fully informed of every transaction effecting the city's interests, and, what I think is of great importance, places responsibility upon every man. No one can now say "I was not a member of the committee that did so and so, and consequently, cannot be held responsible for the action taken."

We used to spend the Thursday evening and the Friday evening before council meeting working in committees. The general committees met on Thursday evening and executive committee on Friday evening to receive their reports. Now we spend only Friday evenings in committees. All the members of the council are supposed to be present. We always have a quorum. It was often impossible to secure quorums under the old system. Each chairman takes the chair in turn, and does the business of the committee. Finally the chairman of the executive (finance) committee takes the chair, and after the executive passes the report of the other committees, it enters upon the consideration of matters that specially appertain to itself. The discussion of subjects in committee is exhaustive, and the recommendations usually prevail in council. The time occupied in council is now shorter than formerly, as a rule; although many a stirring breeze, increasing often to a gale, still blows on council night.

In my judgement the legislative reform should advance further. If, say, ten men are to be selected I think each elector should exercise his privilege, and assume with it the responsibility of voting for one man for every chair to be filled. A shareholder of a company at the annual meeting must when electing a board of directors vote a full ticket or his ballot is spoiled. The forming of cliques or rings, or caballing among any section, or in any ward, would by this arrangement be prevented.

Another desirable reform would, I think, be the election of members of the council for two years. I would have half of the number retire each year. New blood could, if necessary, be infused, while making sure that there would be at least a good sized leaven of experience retained. The short term of one year renders it impossible to have the permanence, continuity and foresight which are so desirable in the management of business of any kind.

We have no cliques in the council nor any "fixing" of the dull fellows of the tail by the astute chaps at the head. We are fortunate in Belleville in having no politics in the council. We fight as hard there as in any other place politically when the proper time comes; but when the fight for the Dominion or provincial seat is over we drop the matter. It is never seen in council. Offices and contracts are bestowed for merit alone.

In conclusion Mayor Johnson declares that there has been no dissatisfaction with the new system, and, as the result of nine years experience under the former system, he recommended all other municipalities to make the change at the earliest possible opportunity.

ASSAY OFFICE NOTES.

New Stamp Mill in North Hastings—Valuable Samples.

The statement of laboratory work done at the Ontario Government Assay Office, located at Belleville, which is conducted by the Bureau of Mines as an aid to the discovery and development of the mineral resources of the northern districts of Ontario, shows a total receipt of 238 samples sent in for examination during the month of September. Of these, 139 samples were received to be assayed for gold, 12 for gold and silver, 25 for copper and 13 for nickel.

The samples for analysis consisted of 10 iron ores mostly from Eastern Ontario for partial or complete analysis as to smelting quality, 10 samples of marl from Grey county analyzed as to value in the manufacture of the various cements and concretes of which this mineral is the basis, 2 for zinc from the Lake Superior region where zinc ores are being opened up, 1 sample of graphite from Grenville county, analyzed as to commercial value, one for arsenic and one for platinum. The determinations on samples sent in for assay or analysis aggregated 227, of which 87 were done for the Bureau of Mines on which no fees were collected, while 140 were for the public on which fees aggregating $161.55 were collected. The samples sent in for identification or preliminary examination as to probable metallic contents or commercial value numbered 34, on which fees amounting to $10.00 were collected. Samples brought to the laboratory personally will be reported on free of charge, while a nominal fee is charged for a written report of this character.

The ore samples come from all parts of the province, the richest gold ores being from North Hastings district, copper and nickel from Parry Sound and Sudbury, while a few samples carrying gold were sent in from Michipicoten, Lake Superior and Seine River districts.

The office has received the report of the first mill run and clean-up from the Boerth gold mine in Clarendon township, Frontenac county, where a 10 stamp mill, with amalgamation plates and Wilfley concentrator, is treating a gold quartz ore supposed to be refractory and treated without success by an expensive and elaborate roasting and amalgamation process, called the Eames process. The assayer at the mine, Mr. C. W. Dickson, of Kingston School of Mines, reports that 175 tons of quartz gave 350 ounces of amalgam, which yielded 85 ounces of gold bullion, worth approximately $1,700. The concentrates, running about 3 per cent. of the ore, are reported to carry over $300 in gold per ton, so that the ore is high grade and the above results of the first clean-up at the mills tends to prove that the success of the mine now depends largely on the supply of ore.

Three modern stamp mills, the other two being at the Deloro and Belmont mines, are now successfully treating gold ores in eastern Ontario, which have been tried by other processes and condemned as refactory in every way. The Belmont was tried several years ago by the Crawford amalgamation mill with no success, while the chlorination process under direction of John E. Rothwell, now the most noted chlorination expert in western United States, failed to extract profitable values from the rich arsenical gold ore at the Deloro mine. The Eames process proved an expensive failure at the Boerth mine.

A fourth stamp mill is now being erected by the Cleveland-Deloro Mining Company on the Gatling property at Deloro under the supervision of W. A. Hungerford. This is an arsenical ore carrying high values in gold on which much capital was spent several years ago in an attempt to extract the gold by the processes then in vogue.

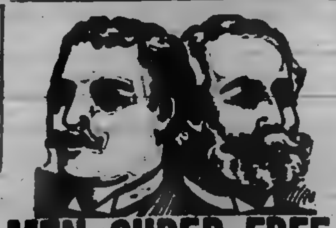
The following mining men have called at the office recently: Wm. Fitzgerald, who is interested in corundum lands in Carlow township, North Hastings; J. McGlatchey, mica dealer, Sydenham who reports the demand for mica of good quality for electrical purposes to be greater than the present supply; Editor Young, of Trenton Courier; Paul Kingston, Tichbourne; Wm. Kelly, Marmora; D. E. K. Stewart, Madoc; A. W. Hawley, Trenton; W. P. Paton, Dryden, and others.

Jas. Lasby, Moneymore, has given the office a fine collection of crystals of calcite or dog tooth spar.

DESERVED HONORS.

Mr J B Grafton Fills the Vacancy Caused by the Death of Senator Sanford.

The Dundas Banner says: The death of Senator Sanford left a vacancy in the the Board of Regents of Victoria University. The other day at a meeting of the Board to arrange for the Twentieth Century Fund, the honour of being a member of the Board of Regents was conferred on James Beaty Grafton, of Dundas. Mr Grafton is known to be a generous contributor to all church and charitable affairs and enjoys the respect and esteem of his fellow-citizens in a very high degree. He is one of the oldest residents of Dundas, and a patriarch of local Methodism, and no member of that body could be more deserving of honour which has been conferred upon him. His many friends throughout the country will join in congratulating him upon being made a member of the Board of Regents of Victoria University.



MEN CURED FREE.

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness, such as impotency, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions, premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The Doctor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt giving the various ingredients to be used so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the receipt free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L.W. Knapp, M.D. 1011 Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer, and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

THE GOLD LAKE HUNTERS.

and Feelings of the Settlers in the Neighborhood of Gold Lake
When the Snowden-Ray-
Dumble-Rutherford-Hunting Party is on the Wing

(By the Times' Sporting Poet.)

Oh, we're getting under cover, for Sam Ray is on the way—
Pockets bulge with ammunition, and he's coming here to stay;
All his cartridges are loaded and his trigger's on the "half."
And he'll bore the thing that rustles, from a deer to Jersey calf.
He will shoot the foaming rapids, and he'll shoot the yearling bull,
And the farmer in the bushes—why, he'll fairly get pumped full.
For friend Snowden is in earnest, he is coming here to kill—Shoot you first, and then inquire if he hurt you—yes he will!—
For the average city feller he has big game on the "brake."
And imagines in October there is lots at old Gold Lake.
Therefore, some absorbed old farmer, cutting corn or pulling beans,
Gets most mightily astonished with a bullet in his jeans.
So, oh, neighbor, scoot for cover, or get out your armor band—
Dumble's got his little rifle and is swooping o'er the land,
Oh, we're learning, yes, we're learning, and I'll warn you now, my son,
If you really mean to bore us you must bring a bigger gun.
For the farmers have decided they will take no further chance,
For progressive Galway farmers carry armor-plated pants—
Carry shirts of chain plate metal, lines of coats all bullet proof;
And the helmets they are selling beat a Knight of Malta's "roof."
So I reckon that the farmers can proceed to get their crops,
Yes, and chuckle while the bullets raps their trouser seats and stops;
And the hissing double-B shot, as they criss-cross the "raging main,"
Will excite no more attention than the patter of the rain.
And the calf will fly a signal and the Jersey bull a sign,
And the horse a painted banner, reading, "Hoss; Don't Shoot; He's Mine!"
And every fowl who wanders from the safety of the pen
Will be taught to cackle shrilly, "Please don't plug me; I'm a hen."
Now with all these due precautions we are ready for the gang.
We'll endure the harmless tumult of the rifle's crack and bang.
For we're glad to have you with us—shoot the landscape full of holes—
We will back our brand new armor for to save our precious souls.
Oh, you feller in the city, these 'ere woods is full of fun,
We've got on our iron trousers—so, come up and bring your gun!

FACTS WORTH CONSIDERING.

Paine's Celery Compound Is Your Only Hope if You Would Banish Sickness and Disease.

At this time we simply give a few facts in connection with the use of Paine's Celery Compound that should prove interesting to all who are looking for new health and vigorous strength.

Paine's Celery Compound encourages and strengthens the kidneys, and enables them to cleanse the blood of waste and poisonous matters that are the direct cause of drowsiness, melancholia, depression of spirits, wasting sicknesses, blood diseases, headaches and that general "run down" condition that opens the door to organic diseases of the heart, kidneys and stomach.

Paine's Celery Compound makes the blood a bright red color, increases its volume in the arteries, and quickens its circulation, enabling a nerve-tired person to sleep eight or nine hours at a stretch.

Paine's Celery Compound is preeminently capable of doing all that it promises, and does a work that no other medicine can accomplish.

If you, dear reader, have failed in the past with other medicines, take immediate advantage of the virtues of Paine's Celery Compound that has proved such a blessing to tens of thousands in the past.

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

CANUCKS WILL FIGHT

A Contingent of 500 Can be Ready for Service in a Week.

THE CABINET IN SESSION.

Head of Allan Line Confers With Government Members.

Four of the Best Steamers of the Company Have Been Chartered by British Govt. for Conveying Troops, But the Company Will Handle Mails All the Same.

Ottawa Oct. 12.—The whole talk of Parliament Hill to-day is centered on the Transvaal and the sending of a Canadian contingent.

There is very little doubt but the course pursued by the Government will be to open a special service list to permit of volunteers being enrolled for serving for a specified period in Her Majesty's Imperial army.

In special cases this action has been taken in Canada. For instance, when it was decided to send a military contingent to the Yukon, volunteers were asked for, notwithstanding the contingent was not to go outside of the Dominion.

However, these are matters that will be discussed to-day by the Cabinet and official sanction will in all probability be given to the sending of a contingent in one form or another within a very few days.

The Militia Department has the arrangements so well advanced that 500 men could be despatched on about a week's notice.

Mr Allan, of the Allan Line, was here all day yesterday to see what was being done it the way of arranging for transporting to the Transvaal. He had also an interview with Sir Richard Cartwright in respect to the British mail contract. The Allans are now in a position to give the necessary boats for carrying the mails and therefore, the contract which was awarded to them and the Dominion Line some time ago will likely be signed very soon.

Four of the best steamers of the company have been chartered by the British Government for conveying troops and provisions. The steamers are the Bavarian, Mongolian, Silician and Siberian. The Bavarian is now on her way to England.

Dr Borden, Minister of Militia had a busy day of it yesterday. He spent part of the afternoon with Lord Seymour, the administrator, and had a long interview with Sir Richard Cartwright, who came in from Kingston to be present at to-day's Cabinet meeting, and was with Hon. I. I. Tarte in the evening. Between times the Minister of Militia was busy in his department.

SCOTSMAN DISAPPEARS.

Captain of the Montrose Says She is no Longer to be Seen on Belle Isle.

Quebec, Oct. 12.—The S S Montrose, which arrived late last night, reports having passed within a mile of the place where the Scotsman was wrecked on Belle Isle, and although the weather was clear nothing of the wreck was visible. It is feared the vessel may have foundered during recent gales.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my dernedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

PUBLICANS MUST PROVIDE TEA

English Magistrates Decide That They Must Do So.

London, Oct. 11.—Several cyclists having found a difficulty in obtaining tea and refreshments of a like character in some of the Northamptonshire country inns, the matter was brought under the notice of the Kettering Licensing Justices, and at the annual meeting in August they postponed the case of the landlord of the Thornhill Arms, Rushton. Yesterday the landlord appeared at the adjourned licensing sessions and asked for a renewal. The chairman said the Bench had no power to compel him to supply tea, but they could refuse the license. They did not wish to do that, but they renewed the license on the clear understanding that applicant withdraw his objection to serve tea to cyclists and others. The solicitor for the landlord denied that he had any objection to supply teas, and explained that on the occasion in question two cricket teams had been to the house and eaten all the bread, and therefore the landlord was unable to meet the request that was subsequently made.

Submarine Dangers.

New York, Oct. 12.—The crew of the submarine boat Holland were taken from her senseless yesterday, having been overcome by gas from a leaking reservoir. The six men comprising the crew remember nothing after the signal to stop had been given. The boat after a series of submarine tests came to stop in her dock at Green Port, L. I., and as no one appeared from the inside of the vessel men on the wharf forced upon her port. Gas rushed out. Rescurers descended and brought up the unconscious crew. The men quickly recovered.

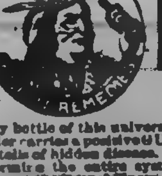
VIVID HEALTH

Nothing so rare as charity, easily impaired and often lost—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is—vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of sickness in the gain of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the altering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the fire of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and so Death gathers in his cheques.



CO BO

Stimulants and Purgatives cannot cure you, but The GREAT INDIAN BLOOD MEDICINE must and will.

Every bottle of this universal blood-maker and flesh builder carries a positive GUARANTEE. Evident signs tell tale of hidden disease. A deranged stomach will undermine the entire system. CO BO, in its direct action on the liver, kidneys and stomach, cures every phase of mal-nutrition, makes blood and carries food and strength to every tissue, and gives back health when once lurked death. CURTAIN RAISERS.

England has eight "Little Minister companies.

"The Belle of New York" has registered its four hundredth performance at the Shaftesbury in London.

John Kernell will star next season in a new comedy, "The Crooked Mr. Straight," a satire of the family physician.

Emperor William is to have a play produced. It remains to be seen whether his pen is mightier than his sword.

Three dramatists are on the list of the 40 French immortals, Anatole France, Francois Coppee and Henri Lavedan.

Miss Janette Steer, an English actress, appeared with success lately at a Birmingham theater in the role of Hamlet.

General Lew Wallace says the dramatization of his book, "Ben-Hur," will be produced only in Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Chicago

A Pittsburg minister lately invited by public advertisement the management, company and patrons of a city theater to visit his church during Sunday services.

English players are less hesitant than Americans to appeal to the public when impoverished. The latest example is Jolly Nash, the one time leading music hall singer.

In a play projected for production in New York the author tries to hold the mirror up to truth by making the villains in the piece lawyers, policemen and court officers.

Mme. Patti now earns about $50,000 a year, but has made as much as $350,000. Melba's income when fully engaged is $150,000, and Sarah Bernhardt has for years averaged $70,000.

Miss Nethersole's next season will begin early in October and will be specially interesting for the reason that she will for a time abandon her repertory and appear in one play, Clyde Fitch's "Sapho," which he is now preparing for her from Alphonse

The Prevalence of Appendicitis.

Surgeons admit that 75 per cent of all cases of appendicitis will recover without operation, but claim that 98 per cent could be saved by operating promptly on every case as soon as discovered. This discloses a debate of great significance, for physicians are disinclined to turn all cases to the surgeon. Morris has estimated that there are 200,000 new cases of appendicitis discovered each year in the United States. If this is true and the surgeons are right, 46,000 of them would be ruthlessly sacrificed under medical treatment. But physicians assert (and I wish I knew whether truly or not) that autopsies upon subjects that have died from other diseases than appendicitis show old inflammatory processes about the appendix in one third of the cases, just as old tuberculous cicatrices are found in the lungs where tuberculosis has never been suspected. In other words, one-third of all coming to the autopsy table and by inference a large proportion of the population have got well spontaneously from an unsuspected trouble which would have subjected them to a life endangering operation had they fallen into the hands of a surgeon of sufficient skill to make the diagnosis.

When surgeons extol the skill necessary to make diagnosis in doubtful cases, physicians retort that these are the cases in which diagnosis would better not be made. Obviously the subject has not crystallized and is in process of evolution, but even the laity clamor for an operation when there is recognized tumor and poisoning from pus absorption.

Early Impressions.

Memory plays queer antics at times. As our ideas of things develop and make progress the relation to ourselves, as we were of a remembered place or incident, keeps pace with the advance. When we were in youth, we thought the house in which we lived in those days a veritable mansion and the yard was as large and commodious as a park now seems to us. Our memory keeps them thus, although we have long outgrown our little selves.

But when we again visit the haunts of the early years we find that the mansion has diminished to a cottage and the yard seems miserably small. We have outgrown them. There seems to be a self adjusting lens that, as we fare farther from the scenes and surroundings we once knew well, keeps magnifying them so that they are always the same to us.

And it must be so of incidents and people as well. Memory is kind and throws a mantle of softening mist over whatever comes into her realm. And when we go back and find the old neighborhood or see again our long remembered friends we must not put all the blame of changing upon them. It is we who have changed, perhaps far more than have they, or if we do not stop to realize the fact.—Exchange.

OUTWITTING AN ELEPHANT.

A Hunter Saved by His Knowledge of the Beast's Habits.

Only those familiar with the "manners and customs" of the elephant have any idea what a nimble creature it really is. Massive and slow footed as it looks, it is capable, when roused, of feats that would be difficult for much fleeter animals. Especially is this the case with African elephants, which, though taller, are generally lighter than their Asiatic brethren. Moreover, accustomed for ages to lead a wild life and often depending on their alertness and speed of foot for their very existence, they have acquired a skill in gymnastics which has occasionally taken even old elephant hunters by surprise.

In illustration of this fact we are reminded of a story told by one of the sportsmen in Africa. He was out after elephants" and had just fired at and wounded a magnificent specimen. Unfortunately for him, he had only succeeded in slightly wounding it, when, infuriated by the attack, it turned and charged him. It was a terrifying sight. With its enormous ears spread out like sails and emitting shrill notes of rage, it came thundering over the ground like a runaway locomotive. The hunter fired another shot, but missed. His nerve was shaken, and, throwing down his "express" rifle, he sought safety in flight. Near at hand was a steep hill, and to this he directed his steps, for, being but slightly acquainted with the climbing powers of the elephant, he thought his pursuer might be baffled by the steepness of the ascent.

It was a terrible disappointment to find that the elephant could climb a hill just as quickly as the hunter, nimble runner as he was. The fugitive, indeed, would have soon been overtaken if he had not thought of a really ingenious ruse. He knew that elephants never run, or even walk, down a steep incline, but always crouch down, gather their feet together, lean well back and slide down. Just as the ferocious animal had got within a few yards of him, therefore, the wily hunter suddenly doubled and ran down the hill again.

Quick as a flash the elephant turned, gathered himself together and, trumpeting with baffled rage, slid down after his victim. The hunter had just time to spring out of the way as the great beast came "tobogganing" after him, smashing trees and shrubs and carrying everything before it like an avalanche. Then once more the hunter dashed to the top of the hill, while the elephant, unable to stop itself, went careering down to the very foot, where, apparently feeling very sore and disappointed, it rose and walked wearily back to its native woods.—Chums.

Odd Disasters.

In an English coal mine a few years ago a callous youth viciously pricked a pony with his penknife. The wounded animal kicked out furiously, overturning and breaking several safety lamps. The naked flames fed the foul gases in the air and created an appalling explosion, which wrought the death of over a hundred miners.

Sun rays, shining through a decanter of water on to the cartridge of a loaded rifle, slew a sleeping man on a lounge near by. The innocent owner of the rifle was arraigned for the supposed crime and was sentenced to death, when the testimony of a shrewd detective solved the mystery and secured his reprieve.

A German family, seven in number, lost their lives by a somewhat unique accident. They slept in one large apartment, lighted by gas. Before retiring the father hung his overcoat above the gas burner. During the night this garment slipped and fell on the tap, turning the gas full on and so suffocating the slumbering inmates.

Where the Pot of Gold Is Buried.

How many women are fretting and struggling along on a very little money when a good sized yard or adjoining patch of ground is going to waste! Yet that very piece of ground may contain all sorts of possibilities—clothes, furniture, books, medicines, luxuries and even necessities otherwise impossible.

Clear, plow, fertilize and plant. This done, the great beginning is made, and perseverance and attention will secure the rest. Onions, tomatoes, cabbages, celery, a small poultry farm, a violet or rose farm—any one of these may add several hundred dollars to one's purse every year. Small fruits, hops, tuberoses and grapes are also very profitable. With some intelligence a blooming garden can always be made a paying one. Make it a principle to have no more waste in the garden than in the kitchen.

If there is only a very small place and just enough raised for one's own family, try, after the table is supplied, to prepare what vegetables and fruits are left over for sale for winter use. There is always a demand for good homemade canning and preserving. Do not let a valuable scrap of ground be idle.—Annetta Halliday-Antona in Woman's Home Companion.

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally see served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 25 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally contained 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians, probably through the Phoenicians.

G. T. R. HALF-YEARLY MEETING.

Shareholders Approve the Agreement for the Intercolonial Extension.

London Oct. 12.—The Grand Trunk Railway Company, at its half-yearly meeting to-day, approved the agreement with the Canadian Minister of Railways for the extension of the Intercolonial Railway from Chaudiere Junction, Province of Quebec, to Montreal and the termini there.

Sir Bharles Rivers Wilson, president of the company, congratulated the stockholders upon the fulfillment of his prediction that the company would be able to pay not only the half-yearly 4 per cent. dividend on the guaranteed stock, but also one per cent. of the first preference stock. The capital outlay during the half year, he said, had been kept well within bounds, principal expenditure of £333,300 being occasioned by the safety appliance act.

The shareholders were also congratulated by Sir Charles upon the completion of the Victoria Jubilee bridge, and the settlement of the laborers' difficulties, which would have been more easily settled but for the politicans. Rate wars, Sir Charles declared were the greatest obstacles to successful railway management in Canada and the Tnited States, and it now required all the power of the officials to resist influence tending to increase expenditures and to decrease rates.

They Keep Moving.

The religion of a Bedouin tribe seems to be to "move onward." Having once begun the nomadic life, it becomes almost necessary for them to keep it up. In the first place, they don't want to settle down, and they wouldn't have any place to stop if they wanted to. Sometimes it becomes expedient that they make great haste in these long journeys. Wandering around over the plains are other tribes whose only occupation is "moving on." There is frequently enmity between two of these Arabian families, and should one pursue the other it behooves the pursued to hasten onward with all the speed their animals are capable of. Or it may be that the springs of water are so widely separated that hard travel is necessary to make the distance from one to the other in a day.

When either of these contingencies arises, they cook and eat while on the march. They don't eat much. Two or three dinners such as American boys and girls are used to every day and something extra for Sundays and company are supposed not to agree with Bedouin children's stomachs. When on the road, bread is their chief food. This is baked while riding. One woman will mix the coarse flour which is carried in a sack on the back of her camel, another will roll and shape the dough, which is brought to her in small quantities, and a third will make a fire in an earthen vessel and attend to the baking. Women or boys on foot run along from one cook to the other and carry the material, and when the feast is ready they distribute it among the various members of the tribe.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Cultivate the young orchard thoroughly early in the season.

In selecting trees, take those with smooth, healthy looking bark.

Ground bone is good for small fruit plants, grapevines and bearing apple orchards.

The deeper the culture the larger the reserve of moisture for the roots in time of drought. To secure quick growth prepare the soil deeply.

Bone dust for raspberries and blackberries may be simply scattered broadcast over the ground, as the necessary cultivation will work it sufficiently in with the soil.

While peach seedlings are usually healthier and last longer than budded trees, one is never sure what kind of fruit a seedling will produce when it comes into bearing.—Exchange.

No Ring In the Dark.

"How can you account for the well known fact that a cigar when smoked in the dark loses much of its flavor?" was asked of an alleged philosopher.

"The reason is," said the philosopher, "that when all the senses are active each sense is more active than it would be if it were doing duty alone. So that when the eye ceases to work the palate and nose become dulled. To express it figuratively, the eye is endowed with a rudimentary power of smell and in the dark loses not only its sight, but its contributing power of smell."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Cost Her Her Reason

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Mentone, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."

A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, king of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush on this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an assistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot, when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his blood by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $50 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of undecision he drew $579 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $500. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down four aces and a five spot.

"With a look of horror and a Samoan wail of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was thus allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

It acts directly on the organs affected and is at the same time a general tonic for the whole system. It cures female complaint right in the privacy of home. It makes unnecessary the disagreeable questioning, examinations and local treatment so universally insisted upon by doctors, and so abhorrent to every modest woman.

J. S. Everritt, of Hagerman, Washington Co., Florida, writes: "For five years my wife was in an almost helpless condition, suffering from female weakness. Last September I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and his 'Favorite Prescription.' I am now a happy man, whereas I thought for four years that I would be left in this unfriendly world without a companion. Dr Pierce's medicines are truly worth a thousand times the money they cost and every suffering woman in the world should try them."

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

Contamination of air may readily be determined by liquefaction. Professor Dewar recently exhibited before the Royal Institution two samples of liquid air in glass tubes. The other was made by condensing the air of the lecture-room in which the audience was assembled, and and was an opaque, blackish fluid resembling soup in appearance.

A despatch was received yesterday announcing the death at Orillia of Mr Maxwell Hall, which occurred early yesterday morning. Deceased was a brother of Mr Geo W Hall, of town, and was well and favorably known to most of our citizens. HOW TO MAKE NERVOUS PEOPLE

"America has become a land of nervous emotionalists, largely owing to our sins against the dietetic health laws of nature.

Only outdoor exercise in a cold climate would enable vigorous individuals of our species to digest the viands forced upon alimentary organs enfeebled by sedentary occupations." writes Dr. Felix Oswald.

Brain workers must have different food than day laborers, because brain work uses up parts of the brain and nerve centres, while physical labor uses up other parts of the body. A food for brain workers has been prepared by scientific food makers and called Grape-Nuts. It is a pure, natural food made from select parts of field grains known to contain the natural phosphate of potash and other elements used by the system in rebuilding and repairing the brain and nerve centres. This food is skillfully cooked at the factory and is ready to be served instantly either cold with cream, or as a hot breakfast dish, with hot milk or cream poured over it. All first-class grocers sell Grape-Nuts, and the Postum Co., at Battle Creek, Mich., manufacture the food.

AN APPARENT MYSTERY FULLY EXPLAINED

There are thousands of people in Canada with very limited resourses who are always well and neatly dressed, but never in debt for the new dress, costume, cape, jacket, suit or overcoat.

The question with many is," How can men and women dress well when small incomes are barely sufficient to pay rent and living expenses?"

The explanation is simple, but true nevertheless. Wise, economical women call to their aid the magical powers of Diamond Dyes when new creations are needed in wearing apparel for the mother, daughter, father or son. The soiled or dingy dress or costume worn a year or two ago, or it may be a faded and rusty cape, jacket, suit or overcoat that has done service in the past—all are made to look like new at a trifling cost by the use of Diamond Dyes.

The Diamond Dyes supply the newest, most fashionable and most becoming colors for the different seasons. This is one of the great advantages that Diamond Dyes offer to the ladies of Canada. No other package dyes are so strong, fast and brilliant as Diamond Dyes, and so others so easy to use. All economical and thrifty women use the reliable Diamond Dyes.

satisfactory, and he (the speaker) had been pleased at his getting the contract this year; but in face of the strange reports going around town he had felt it his duty to institute an investigation. In conclusion, he believed in nine hours a day at a dollar and a quarter for the laboring man, and was opposed to town improvements being given out under contract; he would advocate such work being done by the day, for the benefit of the workingmen, whose interests he would always do all in his power to advance should he continue to be a representative on the civic board.

The meeting then adjourned.

Trading Stamp Case.

In the Divisional Court yesterday E. W. Langley and B. C. Hubbell, of Brockville, proprietors of the Dominion Trading Stamp Company, are applying for a rule visi to quash a conviction by the police magistrate of Brockville. The company was fined for not having a transient trader's lisence, the magistrate holding that the gifts transferred for trading stamps really amounted to a sale of the goods.

Orillia Young Men.

The Orillia News-Letter says that a number of young people attended a dance at Longford on Monday night. The driver of one of the teams was unfortunate enough to drive against a large stone on the side of the road, and wrecked the rig badly. The male occupants were considerably alarmed and yelled lustily for help, but the ladies displayed admirable pluck. Nobody was hurt, and another conveyance was borrowed to bring the party home.

Silent the Anvil.

Orillia News-Letter:—Owing to the raise in the price of iron the blacksmiths of Orillia and vicinity closed their shops on Thursday last, met and decided to raise the price of all blacksmithing and horseshoeing on and after Nov. 1. This action is justified by the fact that the raise in iron all round has been about 40 per cent. in the past couple of months, and the anvil men found themselves in the position of working for little or nothing. Inasmuch as they are giving the public about three weeks notice there is not likely to be many complaints.

For the Farmer.

An Ottawa man has invented a self acting pump, intended for pasture fields, and it is said to be an article of positive utility. The difficulty of supplying water to live stock in many pastures is well understood and where there is no spring many persons decline to send their horses out to grass in summer. The inventor claims to have overcome the difficulty by having his pump, a new automatic working invention, set on a platform, upon which the thirsty animal must stand, and as each walks into the enclosure and steps upon the plank, fresh water is brought up from the well and falls into the drinking trough.

Loyal to the Core.

Dr Fred H Brennan, formerly Major of the 57th Battalion, wrote Col. Bell from Johannesburg asking the latter to forward to the Dominion Government the Major's application to be attached to a Canadian force in case one should be organized for service to the Transvaal. Col Bell sent the request to the Militia Department and was notified that it had been received and would be considered in case of the emergency suggested. This morning Col. Bell received a cablegram from Major Brennan at Durban with a quest to "push application." Major Brennan is evidently very anxious to take his part in the war and evidently believes that a Canadian corps is the proper place. In case he is not attached to the Canadian force Major Brennan will apply to the War Office at London. His knowledge of military tactics and of life in South Africa would make him a most valuable addition to those who will leave from Canada.

ANOTHER ARMORED TRAIN IS DESTROYED

The Train Dashes Into a Culvert That Had Been Blown Up, and Boers Open Fire on the Wreck With Artillery.

FIGHTING IS REPORTED AT MANY POINTS.

Colonel Powell and His Garrison Cut Off and Hemmed in by the Boers and Great Anxiety is Felt at His Perilous Position.

Kimberley, Oct. 14.—Official confirmation has been received of the report that fighting has taken place at Kraaipan, between Mafeking and Vryburg.

London, Oct. 14.—Further details are at hand regarding the destruction of the armoured train at Kraaipan. These show that Captain Nesbitt, who was in command of the train, was warned at Maribogo that the Boers held the line. He replied that he was bound to proceed. On nearing Kraaipan the train dashed into a culvert that had been blown up by the Boers who were lying in wait for the train. The Boer artillery immediately opened fire, and a desperate one-sided fight appears to have ensued, lasting four hours. The precise details are uncertain. It seems, however, that a police patrol, attracted by the firing, approached within about two thousand yards of Kraapan, saw the train ditched, with the Boer artillery still pounding at it, but noticed no response. The Boers seemed afraid to approach until the wreckage was complete; and the police patrol feared, as there was no signs of life near the train, that the entire force had perished in a desperate attempt to get the train back to Mafeking where they knew it was anxiously awaited with its load of gun and ammunition. It is reported that the Boers lost heavily, but there is no means of verifying this. Two miles of rails were torn up.

London, Oct. 14.—A Cape Town despatch states that five thousand Boers under Cronje attacked Mafeking Thursday night. They had ten guns, several of them Krupps and Creusots. Col. Baden-Powell was well entrenched, but the greatest anxiety is felt regarding the result of the fight. Telegraph communication is cut off. Cronje shelled entrenchments and town.

Camp Glencoe, Natal, Oct. 13.—The Boers have occupied Spitzkop, near Newcastle.

London, Oct. 14.—The Exchange Telegraph Company has received a despatch from Cape Town, dated this morning, saying that the Boers have blown up another armoured train, carrying operators from Mafeking.

Durban, Oct 13.—Authentic news has reached here that 3,000 Boers encamped on the Ingogo battlefield last evening.

London, Oct. 14.—According to despatches from the front, the Boers have made several attacks upon Mafeking, all of which have been repulsed.

London, Oct. 14.—The Boers, it is reported, have seized the railway station north of Fourteen Streams, between Vryburg and Kimberley, after fighting which is still continuing in the neighbor-

London, Oct. 14.—The Echo publishes a report that a battle has occurred near near Ladysmith, in which 2,000 Boers were killed. The British sustained slight losses. It is reported that Commander Cronje made two attacks on Mafeking, but both were repulsed with loss. The War Office discredits the report of a fight between the forces of General White and the Boers in Natal.

London, Oct. 14.—The following despatch from Ladysmith has been received by the War Office:—Gen. Sir George Stewart White went in the direction of Van Reenen's Pass at 3 o'clock a.m. yesterday, but failed to draw the Boers to the pass. He returned to Ladysmith, where he now is. No engagement occurred.

London, Oct. 14.—Ladysmith reports have reached here that 12,000 Boers have crossed the border into Natal from the Orange Free State.

Rome, Oct. 14.—European complications are about to arise if the Transvaal war is prolonged. It is stated that Russia has urged Spain to persuade Portugal to close Delagoa Bay against the English, notwithstanding the alleged treaty of its cession. If England insists on fighting, Russia and France will protest.

London, Oct. 14.—A scene of tremendous enthusiasm took place at the Waterloo station to-day when General Sir Redvers Buller and staff left for Southampton, where they embarked later for South Africa with a contingent of troops. The streets about the station were crowded so thick with people that they could hardly breathe. The Prince of Wales and Duke of Connaught saw the General off. Roaring cheers were given both for the warrior and the heir to the throne, and the National Anthem was intoned with deep feeling by the multitude.

London, Oct. 14.—It is stated here that the Government of the Transvaal has placed a price of $25,000 upon the head of Cecil Rhodes who is held by the Boers to be one of those primarily responsible for the trouble with Great Britain. The money will be paid to any Boer who will bring Rhodes in dead or alive.

London, Oct. 14.—General Sir Redvers Buller, who will have the chief command in South Africa, accompanied by his staff, left Waterloo station, London, this afternoon for Southampton to go on board the Dunottan Castle.

ACTIVE FIGHTING IN PROGRESS.

London, Oct. 14.—Those who have been anxious for more stirring news from the seat of war are getting it to the full this morning, as, according to the despatches, shooting must have been nearly continuous along the entire borders of the Boer republics, while pitched battles have occurred, or are occurring, at at various points in Natal and British Bechuanaland.

Most of these reports, however, remained unconfirmed. As Mafeking is cut off telegraphically, the storied from that point are generally of Kaffir origin and must be regarded with suspicion. While there is every probability that General Cronje's big commando has begun the assault upon Mafeking, reliable details must still be awaited.

BLOW FOR MAFEKING.

London, Oct. 14.In connection with the rumoured attack upon Mafeking a disquieting report comes from Pretoria to the effect that the Rustenburg and Marico commandos have crossed the border and entered the Rooigrond territory, between Lichtenburg and Mafeking blowing up the gridge over the Malopo river and destroying a train load of dynamite and the track.

CONFLICT IN NATAL.

There is no authoritative confirmation of the report that a battle has been fought in Natal between General Sir George Stewart White and the Orange Free State troops, although there is no question that the Boers have crossed the frontier at several points. They are said to have 18 guns; but if, as is reported, the engagement began before the Boers had formed a laager and thrown up earthworks the British cavalry and artillery are liable to have had the better of the fighting.

It is even reported that the British have gained a great victory, that two thousand Boers were killed, and that the British loss was very slight; but this may be without foundation as another report has been published to the effect that Lord Rothschild was in receipt of news of a great British victory, but, when the Associated Press representative questioned him regarding the alleged despatch, he replied: "I am sorry that I have not received anything of the sort." The probability seems to be that there has not been any fighting as yet in Natal.

HEAVY FIGHTING IN NATAL.

Montreal, Oct. 14.—Senator Forget's stock broking office received the following private cable from London this morning about the war as follows:

"Heavy fighting in Natal officially confirmed. No definite news as to result, but rumour says favourable."

SERIOUS PRAIRIE FIRES.

Farmers of the Dauphin District Will Need Government Assistance.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 14.—Enormous damages from prairie fires is reported from the Dauphin district. During the heavy wind of a few days ago a district nearly one hundred miles square was burned over and nearly all the farmers have lost hay, while many are left without horses and stables. The Government will have to give assistance to some of the settlers, several of whom are left with nothing but the clothes on their backs The heavy rainfall of this week has fortunately checked the flame

SPORTING ITEMS.

Football.

The Rugby team played the return match with the Port Hope club in that town on Saturday and nearly struck away. Two weeks ago they easily defeated the lake shore men by 30 to 0, and expecting to meet the same team, took down a team over half juniors. At the last minute three of the team were unable to get off, and only one substitute could be found in time, so the boys had to play 13 to Port Hope's 15. When they got there they found that the home club had strengthened their team with four heavy foundry hands, and in strength, size and age completely outclassed the Peterborough boys. In spite of these odds the local players stuck grittily to their work, and in the second half had decidedly the best of it. Port Hope scored a safety touch in the first half, counting 2 points, and Peterborough got two rouges in the second half, thus tieing the score. Peterborough also scored twice by kicking the ball over the dead ball line, but the referee did not know there was such a thing in the game and would not allow it. Neither referee or umpire understood their business, and the former was also decidedly partial, giving Port Hope 44 free kicks and the visitors none.

The play was not particularly good, owing to the rain and the difficulty of handling the ball in grass a foot high. Hal Burnham did some good kicking, and Bell, McLeod and McClellan did a lot of hard and effective work. The scrimmage held their own, though up against opponents averaging more than six years older. Capt McWilliams ran against the hardest of the foundry men and had a rough time of it, but he followed up very fast and forced both of the rouges, which netted Peterborough's only points. For Port Hope McLean on the half line, "Kitten" Henderson on the wing and the quarter were the most effective. Some of the Port Hope team indulged in rough and dirty play, but the High School boys are a very good set of players and the Peterboroughs would be glad to have a purely junior match with them. The game showed that the local club has a number of young boys who would make a splendid junior team, and the manager is trying to arrange a game for them with Trinity College School. The Peterborough team was composed of back (nobody); halves, H Burnham, McLeod; Al White, quarter and Bell, Scrimmage, F Burnham, Brandrette, H Munro; wings, R McWilliams (capt.), A Collins, G Burnham, McClellan, Campbell, Lundy.

Golf.

Last Friday afternoon was an ideal day for the match between Mr Burnham and Mr Francis, for the President's medal. Mr Dennistoun is to be sincerely congratulated on the excitement that was aroused over the finals in his competition. It was a struggle for the supremacy of the links the two players were aroused to the highest pitch of enthusiasm to do their best to win. It was all the more interesting the fact that the two contestants had never played with one another before, either in a club competition or otherwise. Mr McHarrie and Mr Hamilton acted as umpires of the match, and their interest in the play was fully equal to that of the participants themselves. The game came up to all expectations although the result would tend to show that it was rather one sided. At three o'clock play began, Mr Francis driving off first. The first hole was halved, as were the second, third, fourth and fifth; the sixth, seventh and eighth were won by Mr Burnham; the ninth was a tie—the score at the end of the first round being, Mr Burnham 3 up and 9 to play. In the second round the first two holes, Mr Burnham holed out first, the next was won by Mr Francis, the thirteenth was halved, and the fourteenth was won by Mr Burnham giving him the victory, the score being 5 holes up and 4 to play. The president and Mr Sam Ray were intrested spectators of the whole play.

REMARKS.

Sam Ray wished to carry the victor from the field but the umpires objected, as they could not recall any precedent.

As the new rules governing umpires as suggested at a recent committee meeting, did not come into force until the following day, their duties were not quite as onerous as they might have been.

THE MOLSONS BANK

Annual Meeting of the Shareholders Held Yesterday.

SATISFACTORY REPORT.

Shareholders Pleased With Year's Business—Capital Stock to be Increased—Directors Re-Elected.

The forty-fourth annual general meeting of the Shareholders of the Molsons Bank was held in the Board Room of that institution at 3 o'clock yesterday. The President, Mr. W. M. Macpherson (Quebec), occupied the chair, and among those present were: Messrs. S. H. Ewing, vice-president; Henry Archibald, J. P. Cleghorn, W. M. Ramsay, Samuel Finley, H. Markland Molson, directors; John Crawford, George Durnford, Dr. G. W. Lovejoy, C. E. Spragge, J. Try-Davies, John W. Molson, A. F. Gault, Henry Hogan, R. W. Shepherd, David Crawford, James Wilson, Daniel Wilson, E. H. Copland, J. X. Perrault, E. J. Barbeau, Mrs. Nora Evans, and others.

The President having called the meeting to order, requested Mr. James Elliot to act as secretary, and after that gentleman had read the advertisement convening the meeting, the President named Messrs. J. Try-Davies and R. W. Shepherd to act as scrutineers.

REPORT OF THE DIRECTORS.

The Secretary then read the annual report of the Directors, as follows:

Montreal, 9th October, 1899.

Gentlemen:—

The Directors beg to submit to the Shareholders the forty-fourth annual report of the Molsons Bank, being for the year ending 30th September last.

The net earnings for the year, after making full provision for bad and doubtful debts amounted to $339,888.52 From this two semi-annual dividends at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum, and a bonus of 1 per cent. equal to $180,000, have been paid, leaving $159,888.52, which, added to the amount carried over from last year, $31,020.95, makes a sum of $190,909.47 appropriated as follows:

Transferred to Rest Account	$125,000.00
Written off Bank Premises	50,000.00
Carried over at credit of Profit & Loss Account	15,909.47

To avail ourselves of the increased prosperity in the country, and in order to retain business, the Directors, since our last annual meeting, have opened new branches at the following places: Alvinston, Chesterville, Fraserville, Hensall, Kingsville, Knowlton, Port Arthur, Valleyfield, Victoriaville, and so far as we can judge the results promise to be satisfactory.

The business of the different branches of the Bank for the past year has been increasing and profitable, and your Directors are pleased to testify to the continued faithfulness and zeal of the officers as a body.

You will see by the addition to Bank Premises Account an appropriation of $50,000 for the same, that the Directors have been acquiring our own buildings wherever it could be profitably done. In order to establish the Bank in British Columbia a fine building has been erected in Vancouver, which affords us safe and handsome quarters, and brings in a fair revenue.

At our last annual meeting reference was made to the robbery of $[illegible] from the treasury of our Winnipeg branch. We are pleased to be able to say that the bulk of the stolen money is now lodged in our vault, and that a former junior clerk at Winnipeg Branch, accused of the robbery, is now in goal, awaiting his trial, which takes place about the first of next month in Winnipeg.

You will see by the notice calling this meeting that the Directors consider the time has arrived for increasing the Bank's capital, and a by-law to that effect will be submitted for your approval.

(Signed).
W. MOLSON MACPHERSON,
President.

THE MOLSONS BANK, Head office, Montreal 2nd October, 1899.

THE DISCUSSION.

The President then said: "I think the report is a very full one, it speaks for itself. The business of the Bank during the past year has been most prosperous, and there is every indication of a continuance of it. The increase of capital, concerning which we shall submit to you a by-law to vote upon, has recommended itself to us on account of the prosperity of the country, and the large increase of business generally. But, in addition to that, the circulation of the bank is such that under the powers given us we would urge very strongly that the capital be increased. I have, therefore, much pleasure in moving the adoption of the report.

The motion was seconded by Mr. S. H. Ewing, vice-president.

Mr. E. J. Barbeau remarked that as far as he could see, the statement was an admirable one, and he was sure that the shareholders were all proud of the splendid results that had been achieved by the management during the past year. The only question he would moot would be that of the new stock to be issued. He would like to know the opinion of the board as to the terms upon which they wished to issue it. Some conversation had had taken place pretty generally among the shareholders, and the public about the matter. If the stock was to be issued at the high premium that was generally understood, he supposed that it must be so; but he had so much confidence in the board that he would not think of dividing the meeting upon it. At the same time, the shareholders had been connected with the bank for a very long time, and he thought that if there was any little advantage to be given, it should be given to the shareholders by issuing the stock on fair terms. The reserve now considerably exceeded 75 per cent. He was sure that if the issue were made in the way he had intimated it would be a very nice way of recognizing those who had been connected with the bank for many years. On these grounds he would like to have an expression from the board as to what they intended to do and on what terms they intended to issue the stock.

Mr. John Crawford considered that the report and financial statement were such that there was no one present who would not raise both hands in commendation of them. They were the most satisfactory that had been received for many years. Speaking of the proposed issue of new stock, he said that it was of very great importance to him to know whether it

THE MOLSONS BANK.

Elsewhere appears a report of the proceedings of the forty-fourth annual meeting of the shareholders of the Molsons Bank, which took place at the head office of the institution, Montreal, on the 9th instant.

The result of the year's operations reflect great credit on the management. The net earnings for the year, after making full provisions for bad and doubtful debts amounts to $280,888.53. From this two half-yearly dividends at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum were paid, and a bonus of one per cent., equal to $120,000 have been paid, leaving $160,888.53, which, added to the amount carried over from last year, $31,020.96, makes a sum of $190,909.47, appropriated as follows: Transferred to Rest, $125,000; written off bank premises, $50,000; carried to profit and loss, $15,909.47.

The above speaks for itself, and needs no eulogy from the press to indicate how well the bank has done.

Several new branches have been opened, which will greatly extend the business of the bank in localities where substantial profits may be reasonably looked for.

It was decided to increase the stock by the sum of $500,000, divided into 10,000 shares of $50 each. The remarks of the general manager in regard to the Vancouver premises, cannot be otherwise than satisfactory.

The Molsons Bank has become one of the foremost financial institutions of the country, and one that our country has just reason to be proud.

THEY SEE THE TRENT CANAL LOOMING UP

The Canadian Government with its "wasteful expenditure," has frightened the United States, who see their commerce slipping away. New York State, particularly, is apprehensive. At a session of the State Commerce Convention in Utica, ex-Senator Sloan, in a resolution, recommended that the work of canal improvement should be continued. The resolutions recite that the Canadian Government, by its canal system from the great lakes to Montreal, and other contemplated waterways, has increased the importance of Montreal and other Canadian ports in such a way as to seriously threaten United States ports. The material improvement of the canals was necessary to maintain the commercial supremacy of the State and the prosperity of its people.

London Truth prints a statement of the fighting strength of the two South African republics, derived from the best authority. The war strength of the Transvaal is fixed at 26,500 burghers liable to serve, of whom 14,300 are between eighteen and thirty-four years of age. The number liable to service in the Orange Free State is 20,000, and the only permanent troops maintained by this republic are a force of eight field artillerymen. The gross total on paper comes to 46,500 for the two states, of whom probably about 35,000 are able-bodied men in the prime of life.

A Large Tree.

The Bobcaygeon Independent says:—The clearing out of a timber limit seems to be an unending process. Of course in a properly managed limit it would be unending, for only certain trees would be cut each year, and all available spots would be annually replanted. However, the process in the past had been to denude the limits in the shortest possible time, to clean them out, leave nothing, and have no thought of the future. The Gilmour limits in North Harvey and Galway, were supposed to be cut out and were practically abandoned years ago, as far as pine was concerned. Owing to the great change in the lumber markets, the firm this season has commenced to cut all kinds of wood, and take every tree on the limits. Accordingly men have been sent in, and last week, within five hundred yards of the old depot, a pine tree was cut that made ten saw logs of as fine timber as ever came from the woods. Two butt logs were taken each 36 inches the one 12 ft. and the other 16 ft. Then the tree forked into three branches, and eight logs were taken from those three forks, the smallest of the eight being 17 in. at the top end. The ten logs by actual measurement scaled 4,976 feet. The tree stood in a rough piece of ground on the face of a cliff, but there will be no great difficulty in getting the logs to water.

Canadian Poetry.

The Historical Society of Peterborough in pursuit of their laudable efforts to raise funds for the erection of a suitable monument to the memory of Miss Isabella Valancy Crawford, have been fortunate enough to secure the services of the well-known lecturer, Mr. O'Hagan, who has promised to give his lecturer on "Canadian Poetry." Dr. O'Hagan is in warm sympathy with the financial object of the lecture and although a professional lecturer, has generously offered his assistance free of charge. The entertainment will be under the united auspices of the Historical Society and the Fortnightly Club, and it is hoped that the citizens of Peterborough will show their appreciation of both the lecturer and its object by attending in large numbers.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $600 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

POLITICAL QUIPS.

The presidential bees have gathered very little honey thus far in the campaign. —Los Angeles Express.

It is coming to pass in this country that it is almost libelous for a newspaper to call a man a politician. It is the imputation that he is guilty of things criminal.—Binghamton Herald.

If Princeton wants a professor of politics to be a professor of politics, she will not experiment with Grover Cleveland, but go straight to Dick Croker or Matt Quay.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THE C. P. R. ORDERS LOCOMOTIVES IN THE U. S.

Strike of the Machinists Compels the Company to Make a Departure From Old Rules—More Men go Out in Sympathy With Strikers.

Montreal, Oct. 13.—The Canadian Pacific Railway Company, it is reported, has placed orders for some 30 or 40 new locomotives with several of the leading locomotive manufacturers in the United States. This is the first large order for locomotives that the Canadian Pacific has placed outside Canada for many years. All the machinists in the employ of the company from Fort William to the Pacific are out on strike because the officers of the company refused to recognize their labor union. The conduct of the men in going out on strike has induced the company to depart from its policy in the past of turning out its own locomotives in Canada. With the exception of its repair shops, it is understood that the company will close all its locomotive shops, and in future order the locomotives it requires from firms in the United States.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 13.—The C. P. R. strike situation is getting more serious, the boilermakers, blacksmiths and their helpers having all quit work in sympathy with the machinists. There are now 250 men out at this point.

HIS HAIR TURNED WHITE.

Peculiar Experience of the Man Who Dealt in High Explosives.

"Nitroglycerin, sir; high explosives accomplished it," said a well dressed man with a youthful face and snow white hair to a chance acquaintance at the Grand Northern.

"But your face is not scarred? It would seem that an explosion"—

"An impending explosion it was. Two years ago I was the most successful well shooter in America. I could make the oil loosen up where others had failed. The secret lay in the explosives I employed. I made them myself and had the business down fine. At that time I went to New York to figure on a big blasting contract that would have made me a pile. I failed to make the arrangement, and the very day the negotiations fell through I started suddenly for England on a similar mission.

"'Is there such a thing as high explosives ripening?' asked the Englishman I was accompanying on the second day of our voyage.

"The question brought me to my feet and caused an exclamation of horror to escape from my lips. Many explosives undergo a ripening process, which adds greatly to their destructive power, at the same time decidedly increasing the danger of handling them. That made by me was of this character. Indeed 25 days after it was compounded it was almost certain to explode of its own volition, so to speak. And on the upper shelf of the checkroom of my New York hotel I had left a large grip containing a 20 pound can of this compound, the ripening of which meant destruction and death.

"For an hour I was almost in a state of frenzy, freely denouncing myself as a multimurderer. In vain I drew an awful picture of the devastation that would overwhelm a certain New York hotel in exactly 17 days and called upon the captain to put his ship about. He promised to transfer me to a west bound steamer if an opportunity presented itself, but fortune failed me, and I was obliged to cross the ocean. On the morning of the twenty-fifth day of the life of my ripening high explosive I sprang from a carriage and rushed into the hotel.

"No reprieved murderer ever experienced greater joy than I did as I saw the last of the terrible fluid disappear in a catch basin. Ten minutes later I started back from the mirror of the hotel bar, where I had gone for a 'bracer,' in absolute dismay. My jet black hair had turned white as snow."

VETERANS UNDER FIRE.

The Reason They Don't Stoop When the Bullets Are Flying.

"The temptation to stoop when under fire is almost irresistible," said a veteran, "and that accounts for so many of the wounds received by raw troops. You see, when a man happens to be hit in a stooping posture the chances are that the bullet plows right through his body from end to end. On the other hand, if he is standing erect, the probabilities are in favor of the wound being slight, anyhow not mortal. Old soldiers are well aware of this, and while they will drop flat and hunt cover every chance they get they never stoop.

"After a soldier has been in a few engagements he learns such tricks, and, as far as the rest of it is concerned, he becomes simply a fatalist. There is nothing strange about it, for almost all his experiences appear to lend color to that doctrine. For instance, he never dodges, because he has seen men dodge and get killed when it really seemed as if they had reached for the bullet. In fact, the strangest things are continually happening, all apparently the pure whim of chance.

"I remember near Petersburg a comrade of mine, as brave a fellow as ever lived, took refuge behind a little hut. He was wornout under fire and wanted to get a moment's breathing space. Twenty feet in the rear and a little to one side was a pile of crossties full of wrought iron nails. A bullet came along, splintered a tie and drove out one of the nails at right angles. The jagged iron struck my chum in the side, penetrated his kidneys and killed him.

"That's the blind chance of war, and after getting a few such object lessons a fellow is apt to acquire a sort of sang froid that is immensely impressive to a recruit. It isn't because he has a contempt for danger; he has merely learned the folly of trying to evade it."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

The Unattainable One.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algus with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 50 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist as good natured and happy now as she wus when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer or somethin will be sp'iled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeered uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never forgit if I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I was only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven or eight head uv fine horses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4 year-olds that we prided ourselves particler on, for they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wus yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wusn't a funeral percession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week or ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough fer me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin for the lady in less than no time.

"The team wus feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wus a dozen or more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wusn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wus gittin anxious, though she wusn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 200 yards from the upper turn, and there wuz no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heerd a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wus Jim a-comin lickety spit. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wus comin after us wus like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let 'em go for all they wus wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wus fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wus comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wuz.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wusn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist rared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forrerd as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there fer a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wus in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wus that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wuz, I'm afeerd I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I was dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wus killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hundred pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let theselves out on a spurt that wus chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wus, and so wus Mandy, for before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wus up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wus ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

"Mandy wus in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it wus only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uv a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all these golden sovereigns for so much paint!"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.

RELIEF FOR ARMENIANS.

Ottoman Govt. Makes Amends to Families of Those Killed in Massacres.

Constantinople, Oct. 13.—An Imperial irade has been issued abolishing all measures that prevented the free movements of Armenians. It orders the rebuilding and repairing, with Government assistance, of the churches, schools and monastries destroyed during the troubles, and payment of sums due officials or the families of officials who were expelled or killed in the massacres. In addition to these remedial measures, the irade pardons fifty-four prisoners and commutes to imprisonment for life the sentences of twenty-four prisoners condemned to death. As this action on the part of the Ottoman Government is accepted by the patriarch as satisfactory, these dignitaries will withdraw their signatures.

England has eight "Little Minister" companies.

"The Belle of New York" has registered its four hundredth performance at the Shaftesbury in London.

John Kernell will star next season in a new comedy, "The Crooked Mr. Straight," a satire of the family physician.

Emperor William is to have a play produced. It remains to be seen whether his pen is mightier than his sword.

Three dramatists are on the list of the 40 French immortals, Anatole France, Francois Coppee and Henri Lavedan.

Miss Janette Steer, an English actress, appeared with success lately at a Birmingham theater in the role of Hamlet.

General Lew Wallace says the dramatization of his book, "Ben-Hur," will be produced only in Philadelphia, New York, Boston and Chicago.

A Pittsburg minister lately invited by public advertisement the management, company and patrons of a city theater to visit his church during Sunday services.

English players are less hesitant than Americans to appeal to the public when impoverished. The latest example is Jolly Nash, the one time leading music hall singer.

In a play projected for production in New York the author tries to hold the mirror up to truth by making the villains in the piece lawyers, policemen and court officers.

Mme. Patti now earns about $80,000 a year, but has made as much as $350,000. Melba's income when fully engaged is $150,000, and Sarah Bernhardt has for years averaged $70,000.

Miss Nethersole's next season will begin early in October and will be specially interesting for the reason that she will for a time abandon her repertory and appear in one play, Clyde Fitch's "Sapho," which he is now preparing for her from Alphonse

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice or any sound. Thus it is constantly an always new [illegible] and its charm is ever fresh. AND STILL NO YACHT RACE.

The Fog So Dense That Committee Call the Race Off.

New York, Oct. 13.—For the sixth time "No race." Shamrock and Columbia have been unable to get together for their first race because of the lack of wind and the density of the fog.

For a half hour after 10 o'clock this morning the wind kept up its hauling tactics until it had reached a point almost due east. With it came the great bank of fog that during the early morning hung densely over the ocean outside Sandy Hook. This fog was very dense and was almost of the consistency of heavy smoke or steam; so thick was it that the observers on the north tower of the Twin Lighthouse could not distinguish those on the south tower scarcely forty yards away.

The committee thereupon declared today's race off.

A CLEVER RUSE.

The Auctioneer Was Quick Witted and Finally Made a Sale.

An auctioneer on East Washington street—one of those redoubtable individuals commonly termed "slick"—was the cause of a farcical scene recently that would have done credit to a burlesque show. He had been talking industriously for a long time to a crowd of interested but enthusiastic listeners.

The affable auctioneer conscientiously went through his repertory from beginning to end, but somehow the crowd did not "warm up" to him—to quote his own language. Finally, with a dark look that bordered on despair, he grabbed up a well known pasteboard hatbox containing about 50 spools of silk thread of different colors. With the grace of a conjurer he extracted five of the spools, and, arraying them in a tempting semicircle on the counter, announced that they were "to go at any price."

But the audience, while admitting with nods of approval that they were good spools of thread, displayed no marked inclination to become excited over them. Not a bid was offered.

"I'll sell 'em for 10 cents," suggested the auctioneer timidly. It was plain from the tone of his voice that he was losing faith in himself and in all the world. There were no takers. The man of the red flag added three more spools to the semicircle. "All for 10 cents," he declared. But thread stock was far below par. The auctioneer caught up all the spools from the counter and flung them into the box with an impressive gesture. The light of inspiration flashed from his eyes.

"The whole blamed box for 10 cents!" he cried.

"I'll take it," was the prompt response, and a little man in a washed out overcoat and wearer of red chin whiskers stepped out from the crowd with a dirty 10 cent piece in his upraised hand. The auctioneer clutched the money feverishly, and, turning the box upside down so that all the spools dropped into a basket on the counter, he handed the worthless piece of ancient pasteboard to the anxious customer. A roar of hilarious laughter rose from the crowd that was heard throughout that neighborhood.

"I don't want your blamed old box!" wailed the unfortunate purchaser.

"You said you'd take it," replied the auctioneer. "I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came in a strong chorus from the delighted audience.

"I bought the spools!"

"No, you didn't! You bought the box! I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came the answer again, stronger than ever. The red whiskered man stalked indignantly from the place with the box under his arm.

"What you going to do with it?" yelled the crowd.

"That's what!" cried the [illegible] as he held the pasteboard box in both hands, football fashion, and kicked it vigorously into the middle of Washington street.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Write for catalogue No. 30 to the COLUMBIA PHONOGRAPH COMPANY, No. 313 Main street Buffalo, N. Y.

London, Oct. 13.—A Cape Town special says that it is expected that all telegraph and railroad communication with Kimberley will be severed to-day by Orange troops at the Modder river.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Straight, full skirts continue to be used in making up sheer transparent summer textiles for slender waists.

The new corded taffeta silks in a great variety of summer colorings and effects are in favor for making up dressy shirt waists.

The black and white striped fabrics in silk or silk and wool effects, which impart length and slenderness to the figure, are uncommonly handsome and varied in design this year.

The pretty Tudor sleeve, cut off at the top and finished above the deep upward point with a small gathered cap of fabric matching the yoke or guimpe, is a model used on costumes and toilets of every sort.

On many of the costumes of foulard, figured taffeta or surah, drap de chine, drap d'ete, summer costume cloth, etc., the waist is belted at the back and on the sides, but in front is in jacket style, with tabbed ends falling below the waist line.

One of the most graceful summer models for a rather full figure, to use in making up organdie muslin, dimity, batiste and similar goods, is the new seven gored model, with a pretty demitrain, to be made up separately over a foundation skirt of exactly the same shape.

Skirts with closings at the side instead of at the back are now the most favored. If so arranged, the round waist or basque bodice can be permanently fastened to the skirt at the back, thus avoiding the time and trouble necessarily given to a waist and skirt differently laced or hooked.

White veiling or barege may be as elaborately trimmed as a white organdie. It will have as cool an effect, be nearly as comfortable on a hot day as cotton, and during a sudden change in the temperature the light wool gown will give the needed protection.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Kyrle Bellew denies the rumor that he is coming to the United States with Henry Irving.

Rose Coghlan, who plays in "Mlle. Fifi," has patented a sunshade for use at the seashore.

A dramatization of "The Hidden Hand," by Mrs. Southworth, was recently produced in Chicago.

Digby Bell is to be seen in "Arizona." Next season he will be in one of Charles Frohman's companies.

Phoebe Davies has a belt made from Mauser shells found on dead Spaniards after the fight on San Juan hill.

Since Calve has her tombstone and Sarah Bernhardt her coffin, why do not certain would be players go and bury themselves!

At the Filipino theaters of Manila it is the custom to show appreciation by tossing coins on the stage in lieu of bouquets.

The German emperor's play, "Eisenzahn," means "The Iron Tooth," and, with his imperial pull, it should draw well.

Venie Bennett, sister to the late Alice Atherton and widow of the comedian John A. Mackey, will appear in the vaudeville theaters.

As an instance of how the romantic drama has revived abroad, no less than six companies are touring England with "The King's Musketeer."

It is stated that Reginald De Koven has received about $75,000 from "Robin Hood." Barrie will probably take $100,000 or more from "The Little Minister."

Aubrey Boucicault, who plays the husband in "Mlle. Fifi," is said to have inherited some of his father's talent as a playwright and is now finishing two plays which may be produced next season.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A folding stepladder has recently come into use in which the legs and step supports are hinged at the center to close up when not in use, allowing the ladder to be stored in about half the space of the old ladder.

A carving knife sharpener and fork guard are combined in a Pennsylvanian's patent, the upper portion of the guard having two disks carried on spindles to rotate as the edge of the knife is drawn between them.

In a new bicycle tire the resiliency is obtained by hollowing the face of the rim deeply and stretching a strip of fabric across the face, with a ring of rubber or other flexible material suspended in the center of the fabric.

A pneumatic axle bearing for vehicles has been patented to take the place of inflated tires on road wagons, being less liable to puncture, the weight being carried by pneumatic rings placed inside drums surrounding the axle.

THE BOOKMAKERS.

Margaret Deland says she reads economics, history and the newspapers for instruction and novels only for entertainment.

R. W. Chambers, when not writing books, gives his time to many fads. He collects butterflies, designs uniforms and keeps up his painting.

Max Pemberton, the author, is also a good business man and combines with his literary labors the London agency for an American publishing house. His home in West Hempstead is an ideal place.

Dr. Conan Doyle, it is reported, intends to contest a seat in parliament. Meanwhile he is turning into a playwright. He has just brought out a play (a domestic drama called "Halves") in Scotland and is about to produce another.

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and set to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a lump of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and heavings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproars of the world all jammed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang, and the demons, king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall, flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

Society Women in a Saloon.

Saginaw, Mich., Oct. 13—One down-town saloon yesterday made the remarkable announcement that between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock today a special reception would be held for ladies, at which time a musical programme would be given upon a mammoth music box.

To the surprise of all, at the hour appointed couples began to arrive, bringing some of the foremost society women of the city, and in a short time fully 100 of them had assembled. No drinks were dispensed and the large barroom was handsomely decorated. It was an odd function.

Reception to Mgr. Falconi.

Ottawa, Oct. 13.—Archbishop Falconi, the Papal delegate to Canada, was given a reception in the Basilica last night. On his arrival he was driven to Archbishop Duhamel's residence. During the evening the clergy of the city marched in procession to the Basilica Archbishop Duhamel addressed the legate in Italian, and Mgr. Falconi afterwards addressed the congregation.

No Ring In the Dark.

"How can you account for the well known fact that a cigar when smoked in the dark loses much of its flavor?" was asked of an alleged philosopher.

"The reason is," said the philosopher, "that when all the senses are active each sense is more active than it would be if it were doing duty alone. So that when the eye ceases to work the palate and nose become dulled. To express it figuratively, the eye is endowed with a rudimentary power of smell and in the dark loses not only its sight, but its contributing power of smell."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Cost Her Her Reason

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Mentone, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

"I tell you," said Sammy Snaggs, "that man talked straight from the shoulder."

Nothing so rare as charity, easily impaired and often lost—the envy of all and the greatest jewel in the crown of life is vivid health. Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Steveds, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

So Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the heatedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shoe silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 25 cents each, but with $85 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth Is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heerd so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be purty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.—

Mrs. Cadger—They tell me, Henrietta, that your husband is unkind to you.

Mrs. Howes—Yes, John is not very gentle in his manners, I must admit, but there is one thing I will say for him, he never kicks up a rug or creases a tidy—

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made alone in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

Fact Versus Fiction.

"Talk about the seven sleepers," muttered the angry traveler; "I'll bet there are 7,000 of them between Albany and New York."

SWEEPING THE BLOOD.

Would any housekeeper ever allow a brood of strange black ugly creatures of devilish aspect to accumulate and choke up by their foul presence the best living rooms in her house? No. Out they would go promptly with a broom and her strong arm behind it.

A scrofulous taint in the human system is no less foul and fearful than a brood of devils accumulating in the blood springing up here, there and everywhere; causing a hundred mysterious and apparently incurable symptoms in all parts of the body.

A terrible case of chronic scrofula is described by an Iowa lady, Mrs. James Murphy, of Fonda, Pocahontas Co., in a noteworthy letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of No. 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I will forever thank you for the advice you gave me," she says. "Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has cured me of chronic scrofula of twenty years' standing. I had doctored for the trouble until I was completely discouraged. I also had chronic diarrhea for twelve years. I am in good health now—better than I ever was in my life, owing to Dr. Pierce's 'Discovery.' I return thanks and it is with pleasure I send you my name to publish."

A life-time of practical experience has qualified Dr. Pierce to deal with obstinate chronic diseases more successfully than probably any other physician of his time. Do not be discouraged however severe your case may be, but write to him. Your letter will be treated in strictest confidence, and he will send, in a plain sealed envelope, without charge, the best professional advice to be obtained in this country.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

KILLED AT MUD LAKE.

Michael James Flaherty, of Ennismore, Accidently Killed.

On Saturday morning about 11 o'clock, while Mr Michael J Flaherty, of Ennismore, was driving a load of lumber over the floating bridge at Chemong Lake, the horses took fright at the discharge of a gun by some Indians who were duck shooting, and ran away when about half way across the bridge. They collided with a wagon that was standing on one of the crossing platforms, throwing Mr Flaherty off the top of the load. The unfortunate man struck his head against one of the posts so violently that his neck was broken and his skull fractured. He died in about 15 minutes, while being taken to his home.

Mr Flaherty was a man of about 70 years of age, and was an old resident of the township and leaves a grown up family.

LAID AT REST.

Funeral of the Late Mr Hazlitt on Saturday Last.

The funeral of the late Mr. Thomas George Hazlitt took place on Saturday afternoon from the family residence, Water street. A short service was conducted at the house by Rev. Dr. Torrance, assisted by Rev. S. J. Shorey and Rev. Mr. Bennett. Dr. Torrance, in feeling terms, referred to the deceased, who had been a most worthy citizen, a fond and devoted husband, and an upright business man. The best eulogy he could pronounce was the feeling of those with whom he had been most intimately associated all his life.

During Friday and Saturday large numbers of citizens, amongst whom were scores of the old employees of the Dickson Company, by whom he was held in high esteem, paid their last respects at the coffin's side and gazed for the last time at the face they all knew so well and so fondly revered.

The funeral was one of the largest ever seen in Peterborough, the pall bearers being Messrs Dickson Hall, Dickson Davidson, T G Hazlitt, Roger Davidson, Samuel Munro and W R Johnston. Amongst those who attended from a distance were Messrs Lefavire, North Tonawanda. N Y; Hugh Munro, Oliver Lumber Co., Toronto; John Wanless, C P R, Toronto; Hon Geo A Cox, Toronto, and C McGill. As the immense cortege passed through the streets on its way to the Little Lake Cemetery, it was viewed by hundreds who were unable to attend, but who desired to give expression to the very high regard in which they held the deceased.

THE MINISTER'S COFFEE.

Hurt Him Worse Than the Devil Did.

"I used the old-fashioned coffee from my babyhood, and like many others thought I could not live without it. Was in the army four years during the Rebellion and came out very much broken in health. I was compelled to quit the active work of the ministry for more than a year at a time, suffering terribly from stomach and intestinal troubles and torpid liver, with the consequent nervous headache and prostration, lumbago and rheumatism.

"Four years ago, being confined to bed with these troubles and ulceration of the liver, my physician positively forbade the use of coffee and brought me some Postum Cereal Food Coffee. Since that time, myself and family have used no other coffee. All my intestinal trouble has been greatly relieved, and I no longer suffer from rheumatism and very little from torpid liver or biliousness.

"I am fully convinced that coffee is very largely responsible for the greater part of all stomach, intestinal and liver troubles from which people suffer. I am now 58 years old, and my health has been so much improved that I do as much work as I ever did, and with about as much comfort. I can conscientiously attribute it chiefly to the use of Postum Cereal Food Coffee. There are several friends who have had valuable experience with the leaving off of coffee and the use of Postum Food Coffee. It gives me pleasure to add my testimony to help humanity to understand that the very general cause of sickness is, I consider, largely attributable to mistakes in the use of food and drink." Rev. J. A. Flickinger, Pastor of the Lutheran Church, Ray's Hill, Pa. Grocers sell Postum Coffee, and Postum Cereal Co., Ltd. make it at Battle Creek, Mich.

THE CENTRAL EXHIBITION.

The President Says That a Meeting Will be Held Soon.

President Fitzgerald, of the West Peterborough Agricultural Society, was seen by the Times on Saturday and in reply to questions, stated that the affairs of the Association were in a bad way. He stated that he did not propose to borrow money on his personal bond to pay the debts of the society, and he for one, would not put his name to a note for that purpose. He said the affairs of the Association were badly tangled up, and he did not see how matters would be straightened. He would, however, call a meeting of the members, friends and creditors, including the prize-winners of the Association in about two weeks, and would have a statement of the affairs prepared by Secretary Green, and read. They could then take such action as they deemed best, or hold a public funeral, as suggested by a writer of the Times.

Mr Fitzgerald feels that the Association has not had the support from the people that it should have had, and deplores the present unhappy condition of affairs.

A CHANGE IN REGULATIONS

Governing Candidates for Teacher's Certificates Next Year.

The Minister of Education has issued an important circular which is of special interest to those who are preparing for a teacher's certificate after next year. It reads:

The courses for the examinations for Junior and Senior Leaving Standing for 1901 and 1902 will be the same as those prescribed for 1900, except that the following will be the requirements for Part II, Junior Leaving Standing: English Grammar and Rhetoric, English Composition, English Literature, Ancient History, Arithmetic and Mensuration, Algebra, Geometry, Physics (of the High School Course, Forms II and III), Latin and one of these subjects: (a) Greek, (b) French, (c) German, (d) Chemistry.

There will be no separate written examinations in the Physics of Form II, but the examination paper in Physics, while mainly confined to the course in that subject as outlined for Form III, will also assume that the candidate possesses a competent knowledge of the Physics of Form II. As already provided the Physics of Form II may be taught in that Form or in Form III at the option of the Principal.

All candidates, irrespective of any former regulations, must comply with the requirements herein prescribed for the examinations of Junior Leaving, and Senior Leaving Standing. In other words, the special privileges allowed certain candidates for several years to write under the provisions of the regulations in force before 1896 will not be continued after 1900.

THE MOLSONS BANK.

would be issued at a high premium, a low premium, or no premium at all. He would like to have an expression of opinion from the Directors on this point, in order to enable the Shareholders to vote discreetly and wisely. He had listened to a great many opinions on the street, and elsewhere, and the opinion seemed to be almost unanimous that it should be issued at not above 50 per cent. premium; but Mr. Wolferstan Thomas, on behalf of the board, had very strong feelings that there should be as large a premium as possible. He had very great esteem for Mr. Thomas, and under these circumstances, he would be willing to vote up to the extent of, say 60 per cent. premium.

Mr. A. F. Gault considered that Mr. Crawford's remarks were not in order; it should be left to the Board of Directors as to the rate at which the stock should be issued.

Mr. Crawford said that if the stock was issued at par, it would give a rest of 65 per cent., issued at 50 per cent., it would give a rest of about 75 per cent.; and issued at 75 per cent., it would give a rest of 78. It was generally considered that 50 per cent. was ample for any bank for a rest, and he was of opinion that the Molson was able to get along with as small rest as any bank.

The President—We are very pleased to hear the views of the shareholders. That is the chief reason why we purpose now submitting the by-law for the increased capital. We thought that the best time to submit it was at the annual meeting, when you would be anxious to be present. It really would be assuming a great deal on our part to state that we had decided at what price to issue the new stock, because we have not decided. I cannot say we have not discussed it, but we have not made up our minds. We are pleased to hear your views, and I have no doubt we shall be largely guided by what we shall subsequently hear. The by-law will be proposed, and if there is anything further from the shareholders, we shall be glad to hear it. Meanwhile, the motion for the adoption of the report is before you.

Mr. John Crawford suggested that as the directors had not made up their minds yet as to whether the stock should be issued at 50 or 100 per cent. premium, it might be desirable to postpone the consideration of the subject for three months—there was really no hurry—and by that time they would have come to a conclusion as to what the price should be.

The President—After you vote for increasing the capital, it has to be submitted to the Treasury Board, and it will take fully a month or more before we can do anything. I don't think it is necessary to postpone the vote on the by-law until then.

The motion for the adoption of the directors' report was then carried unanimously, after which Mr. A. F. Gault moved the following:

"Resolved, that the following by-law of the bank be adopted:

"By-law (n). Whereas it is expedient that the capital stock of the bank should be increased, be it therefore enacted by the shareholders of the Molsons Bank assembled at the annual general meeting of the said Bank:

"1. That the capital stock of The Molsons Bank be, and the same is hereby increased by the sum of $500,000, divided into 10,000 shares of $50 each.

"2. That the said increased stock shall, when the Directors so determine, be allotted to the then Shareholders of the Bank pro rata, at such rate as is fixed by the Directors, but no fraction of a share shall be allotted, and the allotment of the said shares shall be subject in all respects to the provisions of the Bank Act.

"3. Any allotted stock which is not taken up by the Shareholder to whom such allotment has been made within 6 months from the time that the notice of the allotment shall be mailed to his address, or which he declines to accept, and also any shares which shall not be alloted by the Directors by reason of the prohibition contained in the Bank Act, against the allotment of fractions of a share may be offered for subscription to the public, and on such terms as the Directors may prescribe."

Mr. Gault said that he had much pleasure in moving the resolution, and he was quite satisfied to leave it in the hands of the Directors, as to the premium at which the stock should be issued. He felt confident that the Directors would be quite willing to leave the matter in their hands.

The motion for the adoption of the by-law was seconded by Mr. James Wilson, who re-echoed Mr. Gault's remarks.

THE GENERAL MANAGER.

After a little further discussion, the by-law was unanimously adopted, and following this the General Manager said: I may just say, as several gentlemen have remarked upon what they consider their rights, that is, that they should have a considerable sum placed to their credit, you might say, by the premium at which the stock is issued being so much less than what they suppose it should be issued at. It has generally been spoken of as being issued at 75 per cent. Since the dividend was paid, stock has sold at 207 3-4. Take 210 and it would give you $120,000 of advantage, which is not a very bad thing, considering you have participated for forty-four years in the dividends of this stock, and they have shown a dividend of $7.80 per cent. There is scarcely a business in this country that will show that. There is a reserve of $1,635,- and besides this there are bank premises. There are premises at Vancouver that cost $124,000. You may say that is a large sum to invest in buildings. We thought so, but we were labouring under a difficulty. There are advantages I suppose, I know there are disadvantages in having a bank called after the name of an individual. It is to the interest of any bank to have a territorial attachment as the name, or else some such title as the Bank of Montreal, the Dominion Bank, the Imperial Bank, the Bank of Commerce. I may tell you this as absolute fact, that when I came here thirty years ago—I will say, en passant, that I have served every president of this bank, and there is no director at the meeting to-day who was with me when I came here—when I came here, the first thing that struck me forcibly that there was no vitality in the old Bank, and the reason was there was no life-blood. You were concentrated in Montreal. The other banks have drawn their life-blood from places scattered over the country. When I went to London, where we open first of all, the bills were placed there. It was well-known that Molsons were splendid brewers of beer, and people used to come in and ask if it was the Molson brewery. I had to say that it was not, but that the bankers were a very respectable body of men, and that the institution was carried on under banking laws. If I had to explain that only 400 or 500 miles away from home, you can imagine the difficulty it would be at Vancouver. So we thought we must, like the insurance companies erect a big building. The Sun Life, the Standard, have big buildings; they give an idea of solidty to the public, who come and view them, and say, "that's all right." So we thought it would be desirable when we opened in Vancouver, to put up good banking premises there; and we did so at a cost of $124,000. We were late in finishing them this year, we shall have about $7,000 return from them. I believe it is the best banking building in the city of Vancouver to-day. If you just look, you have got to-day your discounts—we hope they are pretty good—$13,783,000. When I came here they were $1,000,000. I don't attribute that to myself, but to the fact that you opened branches at different places, thus enabling you to lend your money to advantage. As to the rate of issuing the new stock, the Government protects you, and says that new stock cannot be issued at a higher rate than the reserve shows. Your reserve shows 82, and if the Directors were to listen to me, but they won't, I would put it at 82. As to paying, I don't know whether the act provides it or not, but we have generally accustomed ourselves to thinking that 10 per cent. of the new stock and 10 per cent of the premium should be paid monthly. The stock can be paid in whole at any time, and it will receive the dividend of the year.

Mr John Crawford then moved:

"That the thanks of the Shareholders are due and are hereby tendered to the President, Vice-president, and Directors of the Bank for their attention to its interests during the year just closed."

In making the motion he paid a tribute to the General Manager, and asked to be allowed to include his name in the resolution, which was granted.

The motion was seconded by Mr. Daniel Wilson, and was unanimously concurred in, after which it was duly acknowledged by the President.

Mr. John Crawford called attention to the fact that a revision of the Banking Act would take place before the next annual meeting, and he would like to know what amendments, if any, the Directors proposed making.

The President—The General Manager is a member of the Bankers' Association. The matter has been considered by them, but nothing has been brought before the Board for consideration.

The meeting then proceeded to the election of Directors, and the scrutineers soon reported that the old Board had been re-elected, viz.: Messrs. Henry Archibald, J. P. Cleghorn, S. H. Ewing, S. Finley, W. M. Macpherson, H. Markland Molson and W. M. Ramsay.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors Mr. W. M. Macpherson was re-elected President, and Mr. S. H. Ewing, Vice-President.

Ward Colby's Sentence.

Ward Colby who has repeatedly of late figured in the police court in connection with various thefts was Saturday morning sentenced to an indefinite period in the Mimico Industrial School. Young Colby is well known to the local police and has time and again figured in connection with petty thefts his last act however, was that of stealing a horse and buggy. He has been given every chance by Magistrate Dumble.

Nomination To Day.

The nomination of a candidate to fill the vacancy in the Council will take place to-day. Mr. Robert Weir has consented to stand, and will, we trust, be elected without opposition. Mr. Weir is a worthy citizen, and will make a thoroughly conscientious and reliable representative. He has the advantage of being familiar with municipal work, having sat in the Council previously. It would not therefore be wise, we think, to put the town to the expense of holding an election.

Police Court.

Wm Nicholls was charged with non-support of his child at the police court on Saturday. Mrs Nicholls was in court with the child. Mr Stone, who was present for the accused, stated that Mr Nicholls denied being the father of the child. It was also claimed that Mrs Nicholls went off with other men. Mrs Nicholls affirmed that whoever said this was a liar. Nicholls finally agreed to pay $1.50 per week towards the support of the young one.

Gil. Peak was charged with vagrancy. He was allowed to go.

A CANADIAN BRIGADE

Important Change Effected in Regard to the Contingent.

CANADA'S OFFER ACCEPTED

The Government Receives a Cable From Mr. Chamberlain.

After an Urgent Appeal the War Office Has Consented to Canada Sending a Contingent to Be Regarded as a Canadian Brigade—Col. Otter to Command.

Star Special.

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—When the Government gave out its official announcement on Friday last in regard to the Canadian contingent, it was stated therein that the arrangements of the Imperial authorities were not altogether satisfactory, as Canada would like to be represented by a regiment of its own with a Canadian officer in command.

The Government have been in communication with the Colonial Office, and have made some progress in that direction. The despatch that appears in the papers this morning from Mr Chamberlain is a circular that was sent out to all the colonies, and it is only after an urgent appeal that the War Office has now consented to Canada sending a contingent to be regarded as a Canadian brigade.

In reference to the question of pay, the offer of New Zealand to furnish pay during the service in South Africa, in addition to the cost of transportation, was refused, as Lord Lansdowne, Secretary of State for War, "is of the opinion that the same conditions should be applied in the case of each colony." The original suggestion for the contribution of troops from the colonies was as follows :—

New Zealand 250.
Queensland 200.
New South Wales 250.
South Australia 125.
Canada 500.
Total, 1575.

It will, therefore, be seen that Canada is doing far more than its share. And that the Canadian contingent will be regarded as a brigade every one ought to be satisfied, except those who are turning the matter into political campaign material

Col. Otter has been selected to command the contingent.

OFFER ACCEPTED.

The Government Receives a Cable From Great Britain.

Star Special.

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—The following cable was received this afternoon from Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State of the Colonies :

London, 16th October.

Her Majesty's Government have received with much pleasure your telegram of 13th October, conveying generous offer of one thousand troops, which they gratefully accept.

COLUMBIA WINS FIRST RACE.

The Defenders Beat the Shamrock in To-day's Race by About a Mile.

Long Beach, 2.35 p.m.—The Associated Press Despatch Boat Albett H Ellis, now off this point is flying the signal that the Columbia was ahead when she left the course.

Despatch Boat Ellis—The Columbia turned the outer mark at 1.48 50, and the Shamrock at 1 59.35. These times are unofficial. The Columbia is in the lead by about 1½ miles.

Associated Press Boat Vamoose, off Long Beach—The official times on turning the outter mark were as follows The Columbia 1.48.19; the Shamrock 1.58.06.

Associated Press Boat Vamoos—On the beat down to the outer mark, the Columbia outpointed and outfooted the Shamrock, and gained on every track. She turned the stake boat 9 min. 47 sec. ahead of the Shamrock by the official time.

Cable Boat, 3.4 p.m.—The Columbia is in sight about 5½ miles from the finish line. The Shamrock is not yet in sight.

Associated Press Boat Wanda, off Long Beach, 2.30 p.m.—The Columbia had a lead of a good mile, and had made about 5 miles on her run back from the outer mark. She did not seem to gain much before the wind, but it was very apparent that she was losing nothing. Both boats broke out spinnakers and set balloon jibs as soon as the mark was turned, and were running home before a fairly steady 8-knot breeze. If the wind holds they should finish by 3 45.

Cable Boat, 3.34.—TheColsmbia is now about 4½ miles from the finish mark, but the wind still appears to be losing strength. The Shamrock is also in sight, about 5½ miles from the finishing line.

Coble Boat 3.40—Both yachts are under a perfect cloud of canvas. They will finish in about 25 min.

Columbia finishes 3.54, unofficial.

THE CAPE COLONY MINISTRY RESIGNS!

Premier Schreiner Refused to Call for Volunteers at Request of Imperial Authorities, and the Cabinet Resigns.

DETAILS OF THE WRECKING OF TRAIN BY BOERS

The Engineer and One Native Alone Escaped, Remaindar Are Either Killed or Made Prisoners. Transvaal Flag Hoisted Near Natal. Cape Town May Have Martial Law.

London, Oct. 16.—A Cape Town despatch says the Schreiner Ministry has refused to call out the volunteers at the request of the Imperial authorities, and has resigned.

London, Oct. 16.—A Cape Town despatch says that an attack on Dundee is expected to-day. The place cannot be defended successfully.

London, Oct. 16.—The Cape Town correspondent of the Morning Leader, telegraphing Sunday night, says: "It is reported that fighting began at Kimberley this morning. The railway has been cut at Belmont."

London, Oct. 16.—A special despatch, filed at Dundee, Natal, Sunday afternoon reports that Commandant Viljoens' force has left Newcastle for Dannhauser, where the Transvaal flag has been hoisted over the Town Hall.

Cape Town, Oct. 16.—The Orange Free State troops have cut the telegraph wires and destroyed the railway track at Norval's Point, just across the Free State southern border.

Cape Town, Oct. 16.—As the refugees in Cape Town threaten to become troublesome, and have hooted and mobbed a number of leading Dutchmen, there is some expectation that martial law will be proclaimed.

London, Oct. 16.—Cork District Council and other Nationalist bodies in Ireland have passed resolutions expressing the hope that the British may be defeated in the Boer war.

WAR OFFICE BULLETIN.

London, Oct. 16.—The War Office issued the following note this afternoon with respect to the situation in South Africa. "The despatches received do not point to any material change in the military situation. Small bodies of Boers are reported to have crossed the Natal frontier at various points, and entrenchments are said to have been thrown up at Van Reenen's Pass."

BOERS AT NEWCASTLE.

Durban, Oct. 15.—The Boers who occupied Newcastle after its abandonment by the British, consist of Transvaal and Free State troops and 400 Hollanders.

General Joubert, commander-in-chief of the Transvaal forces, is believed to be at Laing's Nek, which he is fortifying. Fifteen refugees from Harrismith have reached Ladyamith. Among them is the gaurd of the Natal train which was commandered by the Orange Free State. He says that the English driver and fireman were detained to work the train, which is used in carrying Free State troops to Van Reenan's Pass, where earthworks have been thrown up and two guns have been placed in position.

KRUGER TENT GAURDS.

Cape Town, Oct. 15.—Mr. Conyngham Greene, British agent at Pretoria, received every civility on his journey from the Transvaal capitol. President Kruger's body gaurd accompanied Mr. Greene to the border of the Free State, and he received the same courteous treatment in the Free State.

The news of fighting at Modder River is not confirmed. The station master at Modder River, near Kimberley, telegraphs that Boers from the north and south have taken Gangershat, which they are fortifying.

JOING THE BOERS.

Durban, Oct. 16.—Two extraordinary Gazettes have been issued. The first proclaims martial law in the Newcastle, Dundee, Klip River, Unsiga and Upper Tugila divisions. The reason given is that Natal subjects have joined the invading Boers and assisted the enemy.

The other Gazette reminds British subjects of their obligations to the Queen, and warns them to abstain from intercourse and trade with the Transvaal and the Orange Free State.

LITTLE NEWS OBTAINABLE.

London, Oct. 16.—The gradual cutting off of outlying points at the scene of hostilities in South Africa from telegraphic communication reduces the accurate news obtainable to a minimum. Thus far, however, no reliable information has been received of any actual fighting outside the affair at Kraaipan and occasional exchanges of shots at various outposts. There is no lack of circumstantial stories regarding fighting at various points, but these are scarcely published before they are denied. The only salient facts in this morning's telegrams are that the Boers have advanced beyond Newcastle and formed a laager near Hannhauser, about twelve miles north of Dundee, and that Kimberley is isolated and probably invested.

Kimberley has thus become the immediate centre of interest. The last news from Kimberley prior to the cutting of the telegraph and railway by the Boers said: "All the troops at Kimberley are well."

KIMBERLEY IS SAFE.

As there are three thousand troops there, there is little anxiety for the safety of the town, especially as the Boer force is said to be only of about the same strength. Many stories of brisk fighting at that point are in circulation, but, although the forces are likely to have come into contact all alleged details must be regarded as premature and speculative, especially if the report be true that the Orange Free State troops are now in complete possession of the railway from Kimberley to Orange River, seventy miles away. The alleged virulence of the Boer attacks upon Mafeking and Kimberley can readily be understood when it is realized that Bechuanaland is to the Boers what Alsace-Lorraine is to France. It is therefore probable that both towns will be forced to undergo a long and dreary investment before the British are in a position to send a relieving column. On the other side of the country the Boers are closing around the British outposts and have already come into touch with them and exchanged shots. Therefore more stirring news is expected.

BOERS TO SURROUND DUNDEE.

Cape Town, Oct. 16.—A despatch from Dundee, Natal, says that a Boer commando, estimated at two thousand men with sixteen field guns, has reached Dannhauser, north-east of Dundee, with the probable intention of surrounding Dundee and cutting off the garrison from communication with Glencoe and Ladysmith. It is supposed that this force is commanded by Viljoen, and comprises the German gunners. The rest of the Boer force from Newcastle is believed to be marching around Glencoe to sever its connection with Ladysmith.

GENERAL BULLER'S GUESS.

Chicago, Oct. 16.—Horace Townsend, the Record's London correspondent cables: "I shall be back in time to see the next Derby run," said General Sir Redvers Buller at the United Service Club, when saying good-bye to some of his old cromadoes.

Some consternation was excited by the idea that the close of the war could be even so long delayed as that—a feeling which was increased when Gen. Buller further remarked that he did not expect the advance of the whole force upon Pretoria would take place earlier than February. Indeed, uneasiness regarding the conduct of the campaign is beginning to be generally prevalent in this community. It is suspected that the military authorities are perhaps proceeding on the false assumption that the Boers will not exhibit an aggressive attitude until the bulk of the English forces are landed, while the supine attitude of the British leaders in regard to Laing's Nek and other passes is not understood.

FIGHTING FORCES.

London, Oct. 16.—The force for South Africa will be increased to 70,000 men. The war is expected to last at least until April, and the cost is estimated at two hundred million dollars. The Government will ask Parliament for a credit of $51,000,000 or $75,000,000 immediately.

A Capetown despatch says that about 2,000 Dutchmen from Cape Colony have already joined the Orange Free State forces.

Beginning next Friday six transports will leave Southampton daily. This means the despatch of over 50,000 troops in six days. It would be beyond the power of any other European country, for the troops will carry with them everything necessary for a lengthy campaign.

Cape Town, Oct. 16.—Gen. Sir George Stewart White's forces are still in entrenchments near Ladysmith waiting for the advance of the Orange Free State Boers.

London, Oct. 16.—The following official despatch in regard to the destruction of the armoured train at Kraaipan has been received here.—The engine driver and one native escaped from the armoured train. The former was wounded in the hand. He reports that Capt. Nesbitt was slightly wounded, and that the party in the train, whose number he does not know, was captured by the Boers. He believes that the prisoners were unharmed. The armoured train that was sent to Vryburg from Kimberley with the two seven-pounders has returned to Kimberley in safety, having transferred the guns from the train that was destroyed.

The Kraaipan Scrap.

The British on the train were in command of Captain Nesbitt, and when he saw a Boer battery commanding the track he determined to run the gauntlet and ordered the engineer to go ahead at full speed. The Boer artillery opened fire, and at the same time a mine was exploded under the track and the train was derailed. Capt. Nesbitt and his men returned the Boer fire. The Boers pounded the train with shells. The fight lasted four hours.

Flowerdew, the engine-driver of Captain Nesbitt's train, which was derailed and bombarded by the Boers, states that if the train had returned when warning was received that the Boers held the line it could easily have made its way back to Maribogo, but Captain Nesbitt insisted upon an endeavour being made to reach Mafeking.

"When the pilot engine was derailed," said Flowerdew, "we spent a half hour trying to replace it on the track. Then the Boers commenced firing, and several men were wounded. The firing was kept up all night, but without effect. The Boers were careful to concentrate their fire upon the engines so as to save the armoured carriage and ammunition trucks. At dawn they commenced to bombard the cars. I escaped by crawling a mile and a half on my belly in the sand. When both engines were destroyed Captain Nesbitt exhibited flags of truce, but the Boers continued their firing, for another quarter of an hour.

"There is no doubt that all the others on the train are prisoners, and that the carriage and the ammunition intact fell into the hands of the Boers."

Cape Town, Oct. 15.—A Kaffir brought to Vryburg by the returning hospital train says he passed the scene of the recent armoured train disaster, and saw several bodies of white men lying there.

BODY OF AN UNKNOWN MAN.

It is Discovered on the C P R Tracks Near Monkland.

Toronto, Oct. 16.—The remains of an unknown man were found early yesterday morning on the C P R tracks, about one and a half miles from Monkland, a station on the C P R main line east, 68 miles this side of Montreal. The body was discovered by the crew of the up special which passed through at 7 o'clock. The cause of death is as yet a mystery, as is the identity of the man. Two seaman's certificates of discharge were found in the pockets of the deceased One read "Wm. Marsh, aged 20; 'Alcides,' at Glasgow, Aug. 18, '99; signed, Wm Still, master." The other was as follows: "Michael Marsh, aged 17, born London, Eng.; discharged from ship 'Mount Royal,' at London, Sept. 18, 99. Signed, T Morgan, master." The deceased was thin, with light brown hair and smooth face. He was about 5 feet 3 inches in height, and his weight was around 130 pounds. The body is now awaiting identification.

Insurgents are Masters.

Paris, Oct. 16.—A despatch from Caracas, Venezuela, says that President Andrade is preparing to leave the city and that the insurgent commander General Irpriano Castro, is master of the situation.

A Large Collection.

New York, Oct. 16.—Sixty eight thousand dollars was raised in Carnegie Hall for the heathen yesterday by Rev A B Simpson. So spirited was the desire to contribute that women threw in valuable jewellery and men coats and vests.

THE NEW SHUFFLE

Premier Hardy is to Quit the Provincial Cabinet.

MR. ROSS AS PREMIER

And Mr. Stratton to be Given Charge of Crown Lands Dept.

A State That Would "Knock Your Eye Out"—It is Thought by the Government That West Peterborough Can Be Opened With Comparative Safety.

The Times has been advised, from a source it considers thoroughly reliable and trustworthy, that a cabinet shuffle is about to take place by which the Hon. Mr. Hardy will retire and his post taken by Hon. Mr. Ross, minister of Education.

For some time past rumors of the Premier's retirement have been rife, but nothing authentic has been ascertained. In view of the approaching bye-elections, and the state of feeling throughout the coun in regard to the recent election scandals, it is thought that the reorganization of the cabinet, and the importation of new blood, would infuse fresh life and restore confidence in the administration.

Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P. for West Peterborough, will become commissioner of Crown Lands, a position which he has long been promised and which he is well qualified to fill. It is thought by the Government that West Peterborough can be opened with comparative safety, and that the majority of 1000 which Mr. Stratton obtained at the last general elections cannot be overcome. Besides, it is well known that certain conservatives who have friends and relatives employed on the Trent Valley Canal as well as in other ways by the Dominion Government, will give Mr. Stratton a quiet support, and discourage any attempt to bring out a candidate in opposition. If the election is brought on at once, it is thought that the prestige of carrying West Peterboro'—the first bye-election since the overthrow of Preston's "machine"—will be of immense service in other ridings that are now open. With Mr. Ross, who is regarded as a most honourable and upright gentleman, as premier, and the prestige of a victory by acclamation in West Peterboro, it is thought that all the other constituences which are now open can be carried for the Government.

As regards West Peterborough, the Times is of opinion that it will not be allowed to go by default, notwithstanding that some of the local party leaders amongst the Conservatives may so desire it. A prominent Conservative told the Times that the strongest effort will be put forward to redeem the riding, and in view of what has recently developed through the election courts, and the state of public opinion generally, he thought this would not be a difficult matter.

ARMY IN PHILIPPINES.

Total Military and Naval Force of 70,000 Men to Subdue the Natives.

Washington, Oct. 16.—When all the troops and ships under orders have reached Manila the army will have 63,872 fighting men and 500 non-combatants, and the navy 45 ships, 4,997 blue jackets and 1,184 marines.

NATIVES NOT IN HARMONY.

Manila, Oct. 16.—At Iloilo there is great tension between the Visayans and Tagalos growing out of the Tagalo holding Araneta, a leader of the Visayans, a prisoner since the threatened Visayan revolt against Tagalo domination a month ago. The Visayans are incensed to the point of rebellion. While the Tagalos nominally control only the military organization of the so-called Filipino Republic, they have crowded out the Visayans from the civil branch, whereat there is great discontent.

NATIVES TO ATTACK.

Manila, Oct. 16.—At Santa Barbara the natives have 12,000 men and three or four thousand rifles and plan to attack the suburbs of Iloilo, carrying the city and slaughter the Americans.

Died at a Pumping Match.

Picton, Oct. 16.—Richard Potter, aged 27, living near Demorestville, while taking part in a pumping match on Saturday, burst a blood vessel and died almost immediately.

Hats for Fall

The shapes of hats this fall are a little more graceful, and the colors a little more beatuiful than they have ever been.

Particular men will find our Special Stiff Hat the acme of style, and our "Fedora" shape very graceful and becoming. An air of advanced season distinguishes them.

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 11, 1899

SOUTH AFRICA'S NATIVE POPULATION

In the event of hostilities in South Africa the conflict is likely to have a percentage added to it by the natives who may break beyond control and do a little slaying on their own account.

Numerically speaking, the natives could easily swamp the present white population of South Africa, as the following figures show:

In the Cape Colony there are 300,000 Europeans and 1,250,000 natives. For protection against these the Cape Colony has a force of 900 Cape Police, 900 Cape Mounted Rifles, and approximately, 6,000 volunteers.

In Basutoland, the natives of which are sworn foes of the Orange Free State, we find 250,000 blacks as against 600 Europeans. In the adjacent Free State there are 130,000 natives and 80,000 whites. Transvaal white population numbers over 150,000 Europeans and 650,000 natives. In Natal, which now includes the province of Zululand, there are 60,000 whites, 60,000 coolies, or Indian laborers, whose fighting capacity is nil, and 700,000 blacks. It will thus be seen that the natives preponderate in every State, especially in Natal, where they are in the proportion of over ten to one. Totalling these figures we obtain 700,000 as the European population of South Africa, and 2,650,000 as the total black population.

In the Transvaal itself, the natives are to be found mostly in the northern districts, and it is somewhat of a platitude to say they disrespect the Boer. They hate him with an undying hatred, for he made slaves of them till the Sand River Convention of 1852 nominally stopped it—nominally, for the state of bondage continues to the present day on many Boer farms. In fact, it may be said that the whole of the South African natives cordially detest the Boer, and the latter reciprocate, con amore. Let it be remembered, too, by those who adhere to the tenets of Mr. Morley's school, that it was in great measure due to the threatening attitude of Cetewayo towards the Boers that England fought to bring the Zulu monarch to his senses, despite the fact that the Boers had forcibly robbed him of an extensive tract of land between the Buffalo and Pongola Rivers. This feudal enmity was not diminished when, after Cetewayo's death, sundry Boer free lances "annexed" 3,000 square miles in the northwest of Zululand, the "legality" of which was magnanimously recognized by the English government in 1886.

Coming to Natal, its natives who consist of many tribes with no common purpose or will, have a profound contempt for the Boer, generated by personal experience of his brutality and accentuated by the humane and considerate treatment meted out to them by the Britisher. But it has ever been a source of perplexity and wonderment to the natives of Natal and the other States why the people of the "Great White Queen," acknowledged themselves beaten in 1881; for the native takes no cognizance of socalled diplomacy and magnanimity.

In fact one reason why England cannot afford to give way in South Africa is because of the influence such a back down would have on her native subjects. As long as the natives feel that a superior race, an all powerful race, controls them they will remain peaceful, but let them once get into their heads the idea that England is a weak or a cowardly nation and South Africa will inevitably be visited by a series of native uprisings accompanied by the usual atrocities that would cost England much in men and treasure to subdue. England cannot afford to show the white feather when the brown man watches her so closely.

OUTWITTING AN ELEPHANT.

A Hunter Saved by His Knowledge of the Beast's Habits.

Only those familiar with the "manners and customs" of the elephant have any idea what a nimble creature it really is. Massive and slow footed as it looks, it is capable, when roused, of feats that would be difficult for much fleeter animals. Especially is this the case with African elephants, which, though taller, are generally lighter than their Asiatic brethren. Moreover, accustomed for ages to lead a wild life and often depending on their alertness and speed of foot for their very existence, they have acquired a skill in gymnastics which has occasionally taken even old elephant hunters by surprise.

In illustration of this fact we are reminded of a story told by one of the sportsmen in Africa. He was "out after elephants" and had just fired at and wounded a magnificent specimen. Unfortunately for him, he had only succeeded in slightly wounding it, when, infuriated by the attack, it turned and charged him. It was a terrifying sight. With its enormous ears spread out like sails and emitting shrill notes of rage, it came thundering over the ground like a runaway locomotive. The hunter fired another shot, but missed. His nerve was shaken, and, throwing down his "express" rifle, he sought safety in flight. Near at hand was a steep hill, and to this he directed his steps, for, being but slightly acquainted with the climbing powers of the elephant, he thought his pursuer might be baffled by the steepness of the ascent.

It was a terrible disappointment to find that the elephant could climb a hill just as quickly as the hunter, nimble runner as he was. The fugitive, indeed, would have soon been overtaken if he had not thought of a really ingenious ruse. He knew that elephants never run, or even walk, down a steep incline, but always crouch down, gather their feet together, lean well back and slide down. Just as the ferocious animal had got within a few yards of him, therefore, the wily hunter suddenly doubled and ran down the hill again.

Quick as a flash the elephant turned, gathered himself together and, trumpeting with baffled rage, slid down after his victim. The hunter had just time to spring out of the way as the great beast came "tobogganing" after him, smashing trees and shrubs and carrying everything before it like an avalanche. Then once more the hunter dashed to the top of the hill, while the elephant, unable to stop itself, went careering down to the very foot, where, apparently feeling very sore and disappointed, it rose and walked wearily back to its native woods.—Chums.

Odd Disasters.

In an English coal mine a few years ago a callous youth viciously pricked a pony with his penknife. The wounded animal kicked out furiously, overturning and breaking several safety lamps. The naked flames fed the foul gases in the air and created an appalling explosion, which wrought the death of over a hundred miners.

Sun rays, shining through a decanter of water on to the cartridge of a loaded rifle, slew a sleeping man on a lounge near by. The innocent owner of the rifle was arraigned for the supposed crime and was sentenced to death, when the testimony of a shrewd detective solved the mystery and secured his reprieve.

A German family, seven in number, lost their lives by a somewhat unique accident. They slept in one large apartment, lighted by gas. Before retiring the father hung his overcoat above the gas burner. During the night this garment slipped and fell on the tap, turning the gas full on and so suffocating the slumbering inmates.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
—"2, Henry VI.," 1, [illegible].
—"Poet's Lore."

MEN CURED FREE.

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness, such as impotency, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions, premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The Doctor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt giving the various ingredients to be used so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the receipt free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L.W. Knapp, M.D. 1011 Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer, and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

After a good soaking shower is the best time for hand weeding

A good plan is to keep the growing orchard in cultivation until it comes into bearing well and then seed to clover.

Increased sunlight among the trees brings increased growth and blossom and decreases the tendency to mold and rot.

Peach, cherry and pear trees will bear very little forcing, and on this account wood ashes are better for them than ground bone.

Fruits, especially the apple, are largely controlled in character by soil and climate. Get varieties that are adapted to your locality.

Scraping the moss and old dead bark off the mature trees in the orchard and washing the trunks with some alkaline liquid can always be recommended.—Exchange.

Knew When to Quit

"I suppose you made your money through your holdings in stock."

"Well," said the financier, "they had something to do with it, but the really important considerations weren't my holdings so much as my let goings."—Washington Star.

A Sudden Start.

"You used to go to school with Coppers the new millionaire, didn't you?"

"I did. Fact is, I gave him his first start in life."

"How?"

"With a bent pin."

"When a person says he is going to retire," said the statesman's small son, "he means he is going to sleep."

"No," was the answer. "Your father is going to retire from congress, my boy, and if he doesn't desire to lose his grip he will have to keep wider awake than ever."

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors. The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post

Fact Versus Fiction.

"Talk about the seven sleepers," [illegible] the angry tragedian. "I'll bet there are 1,000 of them between Albany and New York."

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the heatedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 55 cents each, but with $85 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fish department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth Is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—Youth's Companion.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and specially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black rocks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and I was at the windlass, he heard the bell. It was clear as any bell and seemed right over a [illegible], where we knew there was no living being [illegible] days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and [illegible] over. It was [illegible] and that made the thing all the worse, [illegible] is true. We stood it [illegible] and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I [illegible] we had a good thing, [illegible] was too many for us. [illegible] to think about it [illegible]."

They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly [illegible] years. When he died, he left nearly [illegible],000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

Mrs. Hornbill—I don't wonder, and me with this same old dress for the last two years!

Shopgirl's Hard Lot.

Persons complain that shopgirls do not jump actively to wait upon them when they enter a store. Why not? The other day I saw a girl approach a respectably dressed woman of middle age—that's 35—and heard her ask, over the counter, "What would you like ma'am?"

To this polite attention I was shocked to hear the woman reply: "You shut up! Don't you talk to me! I can ask for what I want, and I don't want any impudence from clerks!"

A few rebuffs from such creatures are quite enough to cool the ardor of any shopgirl.

A Good Reason.

Aunt Sophia—And is Tommy a good little boy at school?

Tommy—Yes, auntie.

Aunt Sophia—And why is Tommy a good little boy?

Tommy—'Cause it's better fun to see the other boys get a licking than to get one yourself.

ANOTHER ARMORED TRAIN IS DESTROYED

The Train Dashes Into a Culvert That Had Been Blown Up, and Boers Open Fire on the Wreck With Artillery.

FIGHTING IS REPORTED AT MANY POINTS.

Colonel Powell and His Garrison Cut Off and Hemmed in by the Boers and Great Anxiety is Felt at His Perilous Position.

Kimberley, Oct. 14.—Official confirmation has been received of the report that fighting has taken place at Kraalpan, between Mafeking and Vryburg.

London, Oct. 14.—Further details are at hand regarding the destruction of the armoured train at Kraaipan. These show that Captain Nesbitt, who was in command of the train, was warned at Maribogo that the Boers held the line. He replied that he was bound to proceed. On nearing Kraaipan the train dashed into a culvert that had been blown up by the Boers, who were lying in wait for the train. The Boer artillery immediately opened fire, and a desperate one-sided fight appears to have ensued, lasting four hours. The precise details are uncertain. It seems, however, that a police patrol, attracted by the firing, approached within about two thousand yards of Kraapan, saw the train ditched, with the Boer artillery still pounding at it, but noticed no response. The Boers seemed afraid to approach until the wreckage was complete; and the police patrol feared, as there was no signs of life near the train, that the entire force had perished in a desperate attempt to get the train back to Mafeking where they knew it was anxiously awaited with its load of gun and ammunition. It is reported that the Boers lost heavily, but there is no means of verifying this. Two miles of rails were torn up.

London, Oct. 14.—A Cape Town despatch states that five thousand Boers under Cronje attacked Mafeking Thursday night. They had ten guns, several of them Krupps and Creusots. Col. Baden-Powell was well entrenched, but the gravest anxiety is felt regarding the result of the fight. Telegraph communication is cut off. Cronje shelled entrenchments and town.

Camp Glencoe, Natal, Oct. 13.—The Boers have occupied Spitzkop, near Newcastle.

London, Oct. 14.—The Exchange Telegraph Company has received a despatch from Cape Town, dated this morning, saying that the Boers have blown up another armoured train, carrying operators from Mafeking.

Durban, Oct 13.—Authentic news has reached here that 3,000 Boers encamped on the Ingogo battlefield last evening.

London, Oct. 14.—According to despatches from the front, the Boers have made several attacks upon Mafeking, all of which have been repulsed.

London, Oct. 14.—The Boers, it is reported, have seized the railway station north of Fourteen Streams, between Vryburg and Kimberley, after fighting which is still continuing in the neighbor-

London, Oct. 14.—The Echo publishes a report that a battle has occurred near near Ladysmith, in which 2,000 Boers were killed. The British sustained slight losses. It is reported that Commander Cronje made two attacks on Mafeking, but both were repulsed with loss. The War Office discredits the report of a fight between the forces of General White and the Boers in Natal.

London, Oct. 14.—The following despatch from Ladysmith has been received by the War Office:—Gen. Sir George Stewart White went in the direction of Van Reenen's Pass at 3 o'clock a.m. yesterday, but failed to draw the Boers to the pass. He returned to Ladysmith, where he now is. No engagement occurred.

London, Oct. 14.—Ladysmith reports have reached here that 12,000 Boers have crossed the border into Natal from the Orange Free State.

Rome, Oct. 14.—European complications are about to arise if the Transvaal war is prolonged. It is stated that Russia has urged Spain to persuade Portugal to close Delagoa Bay against the English, notwithstanding the alleged treaty of its cession. If England insists on fighting, Russia and France will protest.

London, Oct. 14.—A scene of tremendous enthusiasm took place at the Waterloo station to-day when General Sir Redvers Buller and staff left for Southampton, where they embarked later for South Africa with a contingent of troops. The streets about the station were crowded so thick with people that they could hardly breathe. The Prince of Wales and Duke of Connaught saw the General off. Roaring cheers were given both for the warrior and the heir to the throne, and the National Anthem was intoned with deep feeling by the multitude.

London, Oct. 14.—It is stated here that the Government of the Transvaal has placed a price of $25,000 upon the head of Cecil Rhodes who is held by the Boers to be one of those primarily responsible for the trouble with Great Britain. The money will be paid to any Boer who will bring Rhodes in dead or alive.

London, Oct. 14.—General Sir Redvers Buller, who will have the chief command in South Africa, accompanied by his staff, left Waterloo station, London, this afternoon for Southampton to go on board the Dunottan Castle.

ACTIVE FIGHTING IN PROGRESS.

London, Oct. 14.—Those who have been anxious for more stirring news from the seat of war are getting it to the full this morning, as, according to the despatches, shooting must have been nearly continuous along the entire borders of the Boer republics, while pitched battles have occurred or are occurring, at at various points in Natal and British Bechuanaland.

Most of these reports, however, remained unconfirmed. As Mafeking is cut off telegraphically, the stories from that point are generally of Kaffir origin and must be regarded with suspicion. While there is every probability that General Cronje's big commando has begun the assault upon Mafeking, reliable details must still be awaited.

BLOW FOR MAFEKING.

London, Oct. 14.In connection with the rumoured attack upon Mafeking a disquieting report comes from Pretoria to the effect that the Rustenburg and Marico commandos have crossed the border and entered the Rooigrond territory, between Lichtenburg and Mafeking blowing up the bridge over the Malopo river and destroying a train load of dynamite and the track.

CONFLICT IN NATAL.

There is no authoritative confirmation of the report that a battle has been fought in Natal between General Sir George Stewart White and the Orange Free State troops, although there is no question that the Boers have crossed the frontier at several points. They are said to have 18 guns; but if, as is reported, the engagement began before the Boers had formed a laager and thrown up earthworks, the British cavalry and artillery are liable to have had the better of the fighting.

It is even reported that the British have gained a great victory, that two thousand Boers were killed, and that the British loss was very slight; but this may be without foundation as another report has been published to the effect that Lord Rothschild was in receipt of news of a great British victory, but, when the Associated Press representative questioned him regarding the alleged despatch, he replied: "I am sorry that I have not received anything of the sort." The probability seems to be that there has not been any fighting as yet in Natal.

HEAVY FIGHTING IN NATAL.

Montreal, Oct. 14.—Senator Forget's stock broking office received the following private cable from London this morning about the war as follows:

"Heavy fighting in Natal officially confirmed. No definite news as to result, but rumour says favourable."

SERIOUS PRAIRIE FIRES.

Farmers of the Dauphin District Will Need Government Assistance.

Winnipeg, Man., Oct. 14.—Enormous damages from prairie fires is reported from the Dauphin district. During the heavy wind of a few days ago a district nearly one hundred miles square was burned over and nearly all the farmers have lost hay, while many are left without horses and stables. The Government will have to give assistance to some of the settlers, several of whom are left with nothing but the clothes on their backs. The heavy rainfall of this week has fortunately checked the flame.

VIVID HEALTH

Nothing so rare as clearly, easily impaired and often lost—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of sickness in the main of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the altering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the fire of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and so Death gathers in his cheques.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

A new comedy called "Wheels Within Wheels" is expected to go the rounds.

Robert Drouet will play John Storm in "The Christian" with Miss Allen next season.

"Annie Rooney" is undergoing a revival in Paris to the temporary eclipsing of Dreyfus.

Richard Mansfield is reputed to have taken out a life insurance policy for $100,000 recently.

David Belasco has completed an original play which will be produced early in the season with a specially selected company.

An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth" will be the feature of Frederick Warde's repertory next season.

It is unofficially announced that Rudyard Kipling is to write the fairy play to be produced at the London Lyceum next season.

Some German statistician has discovered that stage dancing is conducive to longevity. Taglioni lived to be 80 and Fanny Elssler to be 74.

Rose Coghlan has been re-engaged for her original role of "Mlle. Fifi" for next season, the piece to open its tour in August in Chicago.

Emma Calve's much talked of monument represents her as Ophelia, and the sculptor has promised to exhibit it at the Paris exposition.

Minnie Seligman will appear in the vaudeville houses in a one act play called "Theresa," which has been done in Europe by Sarah Bernhardt.

In a play called "Wine, Women and Song," recently produced at the Princess theater, London, two demimondaines, armed with butchers' knives, fight to the death in a beautiful setting profusely decorated with flowers.

George Bernard Shaw submitted his new play, "Cæsar and Cleopatra," to Richard Mansfield, but as Shaw had required a 56-year-old baldheaded Cæsar to make love to a 16-year-old Cleopatra the manuscript was returned.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

Vastly Different.

As will be seen, it makes a great difference how one uses the muscular resources at one's command.

A member of an athletic club, after swimming the length of the large tank in the basement of the institution, came out puffing and blowing, apparently exhausted.

"You don't manage your breathing right," said the swimming instructor. "It ought not to tire you so. As to the upper part of your body, including your arms, you use exactly the same muscles, and in very much the same way, in swimming as in sawing wood."

"No, sir!" gasped the swimmer. "When it comes to sawing wood, I use the muscles of some other man."—Youth's Companion.

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grizzly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Loohnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a fold where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 25 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mine and 60 mines to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians probably through the Phœnicians.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave them floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get mixed up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my derndest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

LOVE-CHARMS.

The love-charm still lingers, the last link to the old days of ignorance and superstition when charms were believed to be powerful to cure disease and defeat death. The day of charms is gone, although some sweet miss now and again procures a love charm, not knowing that the greatest love charm of all is the beauty of perfect health. And this charm is in reach of every woman. When from the drains caused by feminine disorders girls lose the beauty of form and fairness of face which men admire, they may cure the trouble and renew strength and beauty by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It overcomes all the ills peculiar to women. It imparts strength to delicate organs, stops the drains that sap vitality, restores the color to the cheek and roundness to the form. It brings health back and health itself is beauty. It is impossible for the face to be fair or the figure shapely if there are pains, irregularities, displacements, drains, or weakness in the organs of womanhood.

"I had female weakness very badly," writes Mrs. O. S. Adams, of Fargo, Cass Co., N. Dak. "I had to be in bed part of the time. I was tired all the time, could not do my housework; had fainting spells, nervous headache, backache and pain in my left side, when I would lie down; had pains and aches all over. I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and had not taken two bottles when I was able to be around again and to do my work, with no pain. I am now feeling better than for many years."

Don't you want a reliable doctor book? By sending 31 one-cent stamps to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

OBITUARY.

Death of Rev. V. Clementi, B.A.

Yesterday morning the Rev. Vincent Clementi, B.A., passed away from earth at the advanced age of 87 years. The deceased had been in poor health during the past few months, although he attended service at St. John and All Saints churches on Sunday a week ago, and was up town as usual on Tuesday last. On Saturday he was taken ill with an attack of pneumonia, and his advanced years caused serious fears at once that he would be unable to withstand the disease. The worst fears were realized, as he failed to rally and passed quietly away as above. By his death Peterborough loses one of its oldest and most respected citizens.

As a clergyman he was held in the highest among the clergy of this diocese, and his zeal and fidelity to the Church of England was evidenced on several occasions in recent times when, despite his years and rather feeble health, he was present to assist in the celebration of special services in the local churches. His life was one which was broad in its field of action, and his sphere of usefulness was not limited by the bounds of the Church of which he was a priest or by the organizations connected with that denomination.

Rev. Vincent Clementi, B.A., was the son of the celebrated composer, Clementi, his mother was a Gisborne. He was educated for the Church, and was a graduate of Trinty College, Cambridge. He was ordained deacon of the Church of England on December 17th, 1837, by the Bishop of London, Eng., and priest on February 24th, 1838, by the Archbishop of Canterbury. He became actively engaged in parish work, and was curate of Thatcham for a number of years, manifesting a deep and sympathetic interest in the temporal as well as spirtual welfare of the people that endeared him to all his parishers, of whose love and esteem he had many evidences, among them being a handsome service of plate presented to him by them in 1848. In England he was married to Miss Banks, and to this union two sons were born, the late Mutius and Theodore Clementi. His wife died during his residence in England, and with his two sons he came to Canada in 1856, coming direct to Peterborough. Here he resided until 1863 when on October 14th he was appointed incumbent of the parish of Lakefield by the late Bishop Strachan, of Toronto. He remained in charge of the Lakefield parish for eleven years, and during this time he erected the handsome church in the village which stands to-day as a monument of his good works and his devotion and fidelity to the Church of which he was a priest. The Lakefield church was erected with money largely subscribed by his former parishioners in England. In 1873 he returned to reside in Peterborough and in 1881 he was inducted as Rector at Lindsay, an office he continued to hold for a few years until he was succeeded by the Rev. Mr. Jones. Since that time he has not been in active church work but had frequently rendered cheerful and valued assistance to the local clergymen in the parishes of Peterborough and St. Luke's.

After coming to Peterborough the deceased wedded Mrs. Geo. Toker, daughter of the late Capt. Rubidge, who preceded him to the other land in 1890. No children were born to this union.

He had been President of the District Rifle Association, President of the Cemetery company, President of the County Horticultural Society, President of the Peterborough Boating club, President of the Cricket club, member of the Dominion and Provincial Rifle Association and First Vice-President of the Provincial Agricultural and Arts Association and the Mechanics' Institute. Many of these offices he held for several consecutive years, and during later years was Honorary President of several of them or the societies that succeeded them. Especially did he lend his encouragement to art, of which he was a great admirer, and he was a leading member of the Royal Canadian Society of Arts at the time of its organization.

He was a member of the Masonic body and had held many positions of high honor to the craft. He was a member and Past Master of Corinthian lodge, No. 101, and was chaplain of that lodge at the time of his death. He was a member of the Provincial Grand lodge before the organization of the Grand lodge of Canada. He was Past Grand Prelate of the Grand Priory of Knights Templars, Past Grand Chaplain of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch Masons and Past Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodge of Canada. The interment will take place with Masonic honors.

The nearest relatives who survive him are his grand-daughter, Miss Clementi, and his grandsons, Messrs. F. V Clementi, H. H. Clementi and O. V. Clementi. Besides these are several neices and nephews and more distant relatives left to mourn his loss. His nephew Rev. V. Clementi Smith was here a short time ago on a visit from England. The community as a whole will unite with the relatives in mourning the loss of such a citizen, while his death will be particularly felt among the clergy and members of St. John's, St. Luke's and All Saints' churches.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock from his late residence and proceed to Little Lake cemetery.

The Times Leads.

As an evidence of how the Times is regarded by the big financial concerns of the country, it is only necessary to point to the fact that all the leading banks use the paper in advertising their annual meetings. Yesterday we published the annual report of the Molsons Bank, one of the great financial institutions of the country. The Times, being a morning paper, has a circulation not confined to Peterborough, and this is known to the far-sighted managers of their banks.

A Spring Day in Autumn.

(By the Times Poet.)

Still—still the gardens are abloom, and birds are on the wing; (Shut every door in every room—I hear a blizzard sing!)
The meadow dreams of violets—there's sunshine in your soul.
(I'd best increase that order to Rathbun for some coal.)

Oh, the delicious season, when rapture rules the breast!
(I do not like that icy wind that rumbles in the west.)
Is not this spring in winter? Is that the thrush's note?
(Go, bring to me my snowshoes, likewise my overcoat.)

A RAILWAY TO BOBCAYGEON.

The Construction of a Line From C. P. R. at Pontypool, via Lindsay.

From the Lindsay Post we learn that the promoters of the Pontypool, Lindsay & Bobcaygeon Railway have been quietly, but actively pressing the claims of the company upon the various municipalities interested for the necessary aid to assure the construction of the road. They have everywhere met with the greatest encouragement, many prominent men who opposed granting any bonus, when the scheme was last before the people, being now among the strongest supporters. The necessity for the road is so obvious, and all the conditions so favorable to secure speedy completition of the same that this change of opinion on the part of past opponents is scarcely to be wondered at. It is hoped that all preliminary steps will be taken by the different municipalities that will ensure the submission of the various by-laws to the people on the first Monday in January—the date of the municipal elections—so as to save the cost and trouble of a special vote being taken. If the result of the vote proves favorable, it is expected that construction will begin immediately, and that trains will be running over the line from Pontypool Junction on the C. P. R., to Lindsay and Bobcaygeon, by the fall of next year.

The following are the amounts the different municipalities will be asked to vote:

Manvers...	$10,000
Cartwright...	8,000
Ops...	11,000
Fenlon, (South)... ...	1,500
Lindsay...	25,000
Verulam...	14,000
Bobcaygeon...	11,000
Harvey......	5,000
Total...	$87,500

It was contemplated to ask North Emily for a small bonus, but the idea has since been abandoned.

While the total amount asked seems large, the sum that each municipality will be expected to give is certainly moderate, and the very smallest sum the promoters could accept and guarantee the construction of the road.

Bobcaygeon being the terminus, will reap special advantages on that account, and for the extra amount asked from Lindsay, it will be proposed to build the repair shops and running sheds at that point.

The growing time of Canada has awakened the people of this district to the necessity of rapid and cheap transportation, and all classes will joyfully hail the completion of the P. L. & B. R. R., giving us direct connection with the C. P. R., Canada's and America's greatest highway.

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to-date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surroundiug villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

BRITISH LION, BEWARE!

Foreign Powers Seek to Profit by Britain's Trouble in South Africa.

FRANCE AND RUSSIA CONFER

And a Franco-German Understanding May Also Result From the War.

Germany Must be Strong Enough to Meet Britain and the United States—Russian and French Foreign Ministers Meet—Italian Press Favor Transvaal.

Paris, Oct. 17.—In some quarters in Paris it is believed that a Franco-German understanding will be one of the results of the war in Africa. Several of the leading continental journals outside of France develop the same idea, the reason given being that the Germans must be strong enough to meet the United States and England, "who could easily destroy the German navy."

The fear keeps growing stronger here that a complicated diplomatic situation is likely to arise in the course of the war.

M. Valfredy, the well known foreign editor of Le Figaro, points out that the Kaiser shares largely in the responsibility for the trouble now besetting the Boers. "He first proclaimed their independence, regardless of the treaties and conventions which England uses to-day against them. He gave them to understand that if ever their independence was threatened they would find outside support. If it had not been for the famous telegram of Jan. 2, 1896, the Transvaal would have been in a good moral situation to treat directly with England, at that time humiliated and in a difficult position, and to obtain perhaps a few years of repose and security."

RUSSIA AND FRANCE CONFER.

New York, Oct. 17.—A despatch to the Herald from Berlin says:—The Berlinger Tageblatt learns from a diplomatic source in London that the purpose of the visit of Count Muravieff to Paris was to seek with M. Delcasse, an opportunity of profiting by England's embarrassment in South Africa. M. Delcasse wants to produce in the Palais Bourbon the exact text of the Russian alliance, in order to take revenge for the Fashoda question. Therefore it is not intervention in favor of the Boers, but the boiling of the Franco-Russian soup on the Boer fire.

FRIENDLY TO THE BOERS.

Rome. Oct. 17.—The press of Rome is unanimously friendly to the Transvaal. There is considerable popular agitation of the question of raising recruits in the Boers' aid, but the Government has assured Great Britain that no volunteers will be permitted to depart for the Transvaal. The Italian Uitlanders in the Rand are neutral.

ARMORED TRAINS FIGHT WITH BOER COMMANDOS

Engagements Took Place Yesterday Morning Near Kimberley and Mafeking in Which Six Boers Were Killed.

BOER FORCES HAVE RETIRED ON INGAGANI.

Their Advance Into Natal Does Not Prove a Very Formidable One. The Commissariat is Insufficient. Several Attacks on Mafeking Have Been Repulsed.

Kimberley, Oct. 16.—An armored train while reconnoitering near Spytfontein, engaged the Boers, killing five and wounding seven. The British had no losses. Spytfontein is a few miles south of Kimberley on the border between Cape Colony and the Orange Free State and on the main line from Cape Town to Bulawayo, running along the borders of both the hostile republics.

Cape Town, Oct. 17.—It is reported here that the Boers have had an engagement with another armoured train from Rhodesia.

FIGHTING NEAR MAFEKING.

Pretoria, Oct. 14.—Delayed in transmission—Heavy fighting took place this morning north of Mafeking. An armored train sent to repair the railway line opened fire on the Boer commando. One burgher was killed and two were wounded.

A second engagement followed, in which nine British were wounded. Then while General Cronje's troops were near the broken railway bridge, nine miles north of Mafeking, an approaching train, loaded with dynamite, was fired upon and blown up. There were no casualties on the Transvaal side.

REPULSED AT MAFEKING.

Lorenzo Marques, Oct. 17.—Two refugees who have just arrived here from the Transvaal, report that the Boers have attacked Mafeking on the western border of the Transvaal, but have been repulsed with heavy losses by the gallant Colonel Baden-Powell and his force.

MORE BURGERS KILLED.

Pretoria, Oct. 15.—Delayed in transmission—Further despatches received by the Government say that fighting continues north of Mafeking. The British, after the second engagement, retired in the direction of the town, but they resumed the attack shortly afterwards, two burghers being killed and three wounded. The commando engaged was impeded owing to the want of heavy artillery, which was subsequently obtained from General Cronje.

AT THE MERCY OF BOERS.

London, Oct. 17.—Belated despatches from the scene of action in South Africa throw little fresh light upon the situation. The Boers appear to be strengthening their position in Natal and biding their own time for attack. The Orange Free State Burghers are apparently threatening to invade Cape Colony, by way of Norval's Pont, on the southern border and Aliwal North about 80 miles away to the east, both of which are at their mercy, if they possess artillery. So far as is known the only British force stationed at Aliwal North is a detachment of the Royal Berkshire regiment.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE.

London, Oct. 17.—A special despatch from Cape Town says that three hundred Boers and eighteen British have been killed in a battle at Mafeking. The report is not confirmed and bears all the signs of inaccuracy.

TO BE SHOT AT SIGHT.

Pretoria, Oct. 16.—Delayed in transmission—As it has been discovered that attempts are being made to tamper with the railways, the landrosts, or police, have been authorized to shoot on sight all persons found near railways with dynamite.

COYMMENT UPON THE DESPATCHES.

London, Oct. 17.—To-day's news from the western border probably reduces the alleged heavy fighting at Mafeking to ordinary proportions. Apparently the earlier sensational stories originated in the skirmishes between the armored train and small detachments of Boers, although since then much may have happened to the little garrison. It is difficult to understand how refugees arriving at Lorenzo Marques should have come into possession of news of serious Boer losses at Mafeking. At the same time it must be remembered that much news from the Transvaal is likely to come by way of Delagoa Bay, as most other channels are strictly censured.

BOERS RETIRE ON INGAGAIN.

London, Oct. 17.—Further particulars respecting the Boer invasion of Natal show that it took place at dawn on October 12, in three columns, one entering the colony by Laing's Nek, another by Bothas Pass, leading from the Orange Free State, and the third by Wakkerstroom in the Transvaal. Refugees from Dundee estimate the number of the invaders at 16,000, but this is probably a great exaggeration. Several thousand natives who were flying from the Rand were utilized by the Boers to carry heavy guns through Laing's Nek. The British are preparing to defend Pietermaritzburg and Durban, in Natal, on the chance that the Boers may elude the forces at Ladysmith and Dundee and make a raid on those places. Large quantities of coal are on the way from India, so that the British will not be affected by the closing of the Natal coal mines, as the Boers hoped.

Boers Fall Back.

A further despatch from Glencoe Camp sent at 3.35 on Monday afternoon says that the Boer commandos which invaded Natal through Laing's Nek and after occupying Newcastle, advanced to Tannhauser, retired on Ingagane, midway between Newcastle and Tannhauser, yesterrday evening, their transport service being reported defective. This will delay indefinitely the anticipated and hoped-for assault on the strong British position at Glencoe.

It is reported that the Boers are attacking Vryburg, midway between Kimberley and Mafeking.

The Queen's speech at the opening of Parliament to-day makes special reference to the Transvaal crisis, and states that it has rendered necessary the early session of Parliament. The Irish leaders are certain to move an amendment condemning the Government policy, though their following in a division is likely to be very small.

At a meeting convened by the Lord Mayor of London and held in the Guild Hall the business men of London, amid scenes of immense enthusiasm, approved of the Government policy in South Africa, marching to the place of meeting singing the National Hymn and carrying flags.

Natives are Desperate.

The Colonial Office issued last evening the correspondence between Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Alfred Milner, British High Commissioner in South Africa, respecting the Transvaal controversy, from September 8 to October 12. The salient points of the principal despatches, however, have already been published.

Some of the telegrams, treating of side issues, are interesting. For instance, the Governor of Natal, Sir Walter Francis Hely-Hutchinson, wired Mr. Chamberlain on October 2 as follows: "Dinuzulu reports that the natives in the Vryburg district of the Transvaal are becoming desperate, and it is feared that they will not remain quite much longer. The Boers are seizing their cattle, and the chief implores the British Government to intervene. I have replied that it is best for the Zulus to remain quiet. My opinion is, however, that the natives in the Vryburg district will very probably rise against the Boers in case of war. They will not much longer submit to the treatment they have had at the hands of the Boers."

On Sept. 29 Mr. Chamberlain sent the following to the British High Commissioner: "I think that if the Government of the South African Republic commence hostilities it would be well for you to warn President Kruger that in view of the persistent rumors that have reached her Majesty's Government as to threats to murder British subjects he and his Government are expected to protect the lives and property of all peaceable persons, British subjects and others, and will be held responsible by her Majesty's Government for any acts committed contrary to the usages of civilized people."

KIMBERLEY CAN HOLD OUT.

London, Oct. 17.—Parliament will meet to-day, with every indication that the two main parties will unite in voting the supplies for the war without controversy or partisan bickerings. A small group of Irish members may offer opposition, but public opinion is strongly in favor of a vigorous prosecution of the war and a loyal support of the Government. This was shown by the enthusiastic meetings which were held at Guild Hall yesterday, when the business men all rallied to support Mr. Chamberlain's general policy.

Meagre Information.

Journalists are beside themselves from want of news from South Africa. The official statement from the War Department shows that nothing definite is reported from the Natal-Transvaal frontier, and as communication is cut off from Mafeking and Kimberley, there can be no news from the Bechuanaland and Orange Free State borders.

Kimberley and Mafeking.

The latest news before the cutting of the wires states that Kimberley, which the Boers are declared to be especially anxious to take in order to make Cecial Rhodes a prisoner, is now strongly fortified, and no fears are entertained of the garrison's ability to withstand all attacks. At Mafeking also the garrison is reported to be sanguine, though no word has come as to whether Baden-Powell has yet been reinforced. Persistent rumors reach Cape Town of sharp fighting near Kimberley. These are traceable to native informants, and may not be accepted unreservedly, but those familiar with South Africa know with what amazing swiftness, and often accuracy, strings of natives, like a human telegraph system, can flash tidings. A cable from Aliwal North states that the Boer commando at Beest Kraal has shifted its quarters to a point near Aliwal North. This place is a centre for a partially disaffected Dutch community, whose attitude depends on the result of the first serious engagements.

BOERS APPEAL FOR AID.

Aliwal, North, Natal, Oct. 17.—The Boers of the Transvaal have issued an appeal to their brethren in the colony of Natal to aid them against England.

What effect this appeal may have is as yet in doubt, but it is certain any rising of the colonial Dutch would send the colonial British into the field in full strength.

If there is a Dutch rising in sympathy with the Orange Free State, it will begin at Burgersdorp, a town of 2,000 inhabitants, and the birthplace of the Afrikander Bund, on November 9, when the Boers hold their annual wappenschouwing, or rifle contest.

The Transvaal agents are doing their upmost to provoke rebellion, but really all depends on the result of the first few weeks' fighting.

Many Transkei Kaffirs have passed through here, owing to the closing of the mines at Johannesburg. They were treated with the greatest brutality by the Boers. They were flogged to the railway station, and robbed of their wages. Even the women were searched for money with the grossest indecency.

AT BALFOUR'S HOUSE.

London, Oct. 17.—The Cabinet met this morning at the residence of Mr. Arthur J. Balfour, First Lord of the Treasury and Government leader in the House of Commons, instead of at the Foreign Office. It being the first time during the existence of the present Ministry when this has occurred.

THE PRINCE INTERESTED.

London, Oct. 17.—Prior to the meeting of Parliament the Prince of Wales visited the Premier, the Marquis of Salisbury at the Foreign Office.

Crippling Traffic.

New York, Oct. 17.—The World says: The British Government is seriously crippling the trans-Atlantic carying business by snapping up vessels to be used as transports.

Seventy-five ocean carriers, including 32 trans-Atlantic liners, have already been chartered.

The paper then goes on to rehash a list of about a dozen boats already published and adds that if "necessary, the Cunard Co. must turn over the Lucania, Campania, Umbria, and Etruria to be converted into armored cruisers." The fact that warships cannot possibly be used to fight the Boers renders it necessary to state that the steamers are not likely to be chartered.

Artillery Wants to Go.

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—An effort is being made to get a company of artillery to form part of the Canadian contingent. It is doubtful, however if this can be done.

American Help Needed

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—The Government has suspended for the remainder of the season the section of the coasting laws which prevents American vessels from carrying freight from any port on the upper lakes to any other port in the Dominion. The reason is that there are about 4,000,000 bushels of wheat at Fort William awaiting shipment, and it would be impossible for Canadian vessels to fill the demand.

SIR RICH. CARTWRIGHT

It is Said That He Will Run in West Peterborough

AGAINST MR. KENDRY.

A Quiet "Feeler" Has Been Put Out With the Idea of Bringing Sir Richard Here.

The Chances Are That the Gallant Knight Will Accept Nomination if Tendered Him—A Prediction as to Date of Next General Elections

The Times has been advised that a quiet "feeler" has been put out in order to ascertain what chance Sir Richard Cartwright, Minister of Trade and Commerce, would have in West Peterborough should he consent to run and should the nomination be tendered him at the approaching general elections for the Commons. As a matter of fact the Times was consulted by a prominent Liberal, as to what it thought of the matter. Our informant argues this way: "Peterborough Liberals haven't a local man that they can put in the field against the present member, Mr. Kendry, with any hope of redeeming the riding. Mr. Richard Hall, the only man available, who would have any show, will not, it is believed, consent to make another try. In addition to his present extensive business, he will in all probability have to take charge of the Dickson's Company's affairs, which would preclude any chance of his going into politics. Sir Richard Cartwright, who is known to be the brains of the Cabinet, would be welcomed by many Conservatives, as well as by all Liberals, who would feel it an honor to be represented in Parliament by such a man."

The Times is satisfied that if Sir Richard comes to West Peterborough, he will make things decidely interesting for his opponent, whoever that opponent may be, and if the riding is retained by the Conservatives it will be by a superhuman effort and the expenditure of considerable money. Not only would the West Riding likely go Liberal, but the effect and influence of Sir Richard's canditature here will effect the East Riding as well as South Victoria, and practically assure the return of Messrs. Lang and McHugh.

The Times is also of opinion that the elections will take place in the near future—probably before January 15th.

CRIPPLED AT THE START.

Shamrock Disabled And Columbia Continuing Over the Course Under Reduced Sails.

10.35.00 a.m.—The course as signalled makes the first leg a beat to windward, then two broad reaches.

11.00.00 a.m.—Starting gun fired; Shamrock leads across.

11.04.00 a.m.—Columbia has set her baby jib topsail. Shamrock has an almost imperceptible lead, a quarter of a mile from line.

11.07 45 a.m.—Columbia is rapidly drawing away from Shamrock.

11.18.00 a.m.—First leg is a beat to windward, Columbia heading up better than Shamrock; boats have now made two miles without tacking.

11.28.00 a.m.—Shamrock disabled. Her topmast carried away.

11.29.00 a.m.—Wind was but about nine miles an hour when accident occurred. It was apparently caused by her jumping in heavy sea.

11.48.00 a.m.—Columbia will have won the second race as soon as she has sailed over the course.

11.46.00 a.m.—Shamrock's topmast broken clean off close down to the mainmast.

11.48.00 a.m.—At time of accident Shamrock had a slight advantage.

12.36.00 p.m.—Columbia rounded the first mark.

2.25.00 p.m.—Columbia about 2½ miles from finish.

2.36.25—Columbia crossed the finishing line.

CAPT. HOGARTH FEELS BAD.

When the Associated Press flagship Wanda ran alongside of the Shamrock the sailors had brought the topmast and sail to deck and were busy removing the club. Captain Hogarth said:—"We are glad to say that no one was hurt. It was most unfortunate. We purposely did not raise our baby jib to avoid the strain, and I cannot understand it."

At 11.55 the Shamrock lowered her mainsail and jib, and taking a line from her tender started up for the city with her topmast broken close to her lower masthead.

Hats for Fall

The shapes of hats this fall are a little more graceful, and the colors a little more beatuiful than they have ever been.

Particular men will find our Special Stiff Hat the acme of style, and our "Fedora" shape very graceful and becoming. An air of advanced season distinguishes them.

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 18, 1899

WIPE OUT THE TITLE.

One way, and the only way, to abolish the absurdies incidental to the creation of Queen's Council in Ontario would be to out the title, says the Toronto Telegram.

Why should the State create artificial distinctions between lawyers any more than between doctors or ministers or merchants?

True the State has an official relationship to lawyers, but the State has also an artificial relationship to doctors. Lawyers should be left free to distinguish themselves by learning, ability and length of service, andt hat the Crown should cease trying to distinguish a lot of party fovourities with titles which are no longer either useful or ornamental.

This will be a modern Boer hunt.

While performing a reckless feat of lion-baiting in South Africa, Oom Paul, an old man, put his head into the lion's mouth. The lion was afterwards observed pleasantly manipulating a tooth-pick.

A contribution of a very practical nature is made by a New York woman to the discussion started by Judge Baldwin relative to assist people to die when in their judgement death is inevitable. Mrs. Catherine Ketterer, aged 43 years, was told by her doctor that she was suffering from enlargement of the heart, that her lungs and liver were diseased and that she had a tumor. Regarding her case as hopeless, she committed suicide. An autopsy then revealed that her heart, lungs and liver were entirely healthy, that she had no tumor, and that in all probability had she not killed herself she would have lived to a good old age.

The Dominion Statistical Year Book for 1898 comes to hand in its usual comprehensive and intelligible shape, on which Mr. George Johnson is to be congratulated. The estimate for population for 1898 is 5,248,315. Canada is getting to be a big boy and ought to do more for the British family than it does.

•• • ••

Among the best Canada could send to South Africa would be a few hundred of the Northwest Mounted Police, if they could be spared. They are precisely the hardened mounted soldiers who would be useful on the South African plains.

A Phenomenon.

Those who have a desire to witness some grand celestial phenomena will have an opportunity, should the weather prove favorable, on the 13 and 14th of November. That will be the time for the great shower of so-called falling stars. About the 13th of November every year there is an unusual fall of these brilliant meteors, but every 33 years the display is wonderfully grand. In 1866 the scene as witnessed here was very beautiful; one meteor seemed to the naked eye nearly as large as the moon. In 1833 on the night of the 13th of November these bodies fell all over North America and far out on the Atlantic. The negroes on the southern plantations thought that the end of all things was at hand and thousands of them fell on their knees praying for mercy. Many white people were badly frightened thinking the world was about to be burned.

THE FASHION PLATE.

Straight, full skirts continue to be used in making up sheer transparent summer textiles for slender waists.

The new corded taffeta silks in a great variety of summer colorings and effects are in favor for making up dressy shirt waists.

The black and white striped fabrics in silk or silk and wool effects, which impart length and slenderness to the figure, are uncommonly handsome and varied in design this year.

The pretty Tudor sleeve, cut off at the top and finished above the deep upward point with a small gathered cap of fabric matching the yoke or guimpe, is a model used on costumes and toilets of every sort.

On many of the costumes of foulard, figured taffeta or surah, drap de chine, drap d'ete, summer costume cloth, etc., the waist is bailed at the back and on the sides, but in front is in jacket style, with tabbed ends falling below the waist line.

One of the most graceful summer models for a rather full figure, to use in making up organdie muslin, dimity, batiste and similar goods, is the new seven gored model, with a pretty demitrain, to be made up separately over a foundation skirt of exactly the same shape.

Skirts with closings at the side instead of at the back are now the most favored. If so arranged, the round waist or basque bodice can be permanently fastened to the skirt at the back, thus avoiding the time and trouble necessarily given to a waist and skirt differently laced or hooked.

White veiling or barege may be as elaborately trimmed as a white organdie. It will have as cool an effect, be nearly as comfortable on a hot day as cotton, and during a sudden change in the temperature the light wool gown will give the needed protection.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Kyrle Bellew denies the rumor that he is coming to the United States with Henry Irving.

Rose Coghlan, who plays in "Mlle. Fifi," has patented a sunshade for use at the seashore.

A dramatization of "The Hidden Hand," by Mrs. Southworth, was recently produced in Chicago.

Digby Bell is to be seen in "Arizona." Next season he will be in one of Charles Frohman's companies.

Phoebe Davies has a belt made from Mauser shells found on dead Spaniards after the fight on San Juan hill.

Since Calve has her tombstone and Sarah Bernhardt her coffin, why do not certain would be players go and bury themselves?

At the Filipino theaters of Manila it is the custom to show appreciation by tossing coins on the stage in lieu of bouquets.

The German emperor's play, "Eisenzahn," means "The Iron Tooth," and, with his imperial pull, it should draw well.

Venie Bennett, sister to the late Alice Atherton and widow of the comedian John A. Mackey, will appear in the vaudeville theaters.

As an instance of how the romantic drama has revived abroad, no less than six companies are touring England with "The King's Musketeer."

It is stated that Reginald De Koven has received about $75,000 from "Robin Hood." Barrie will probably take $100,000 or more from "The Little Minister."

Aubrey Boucicault, who plays the husband in "Mlle. Fifi," is said to have inherited some of his father's talent as a playwright and is now finishing two plays which may be produced next season.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A folding stepladder has recently come into use in which the legs and step supports are hinged at the center to close up when not in use, allowing the ladder to be stored in about half the space of the old ladder.

A carving knife sharpener and fork guard are combined in a Pennsylvanian's patent, the upper portion of the guard having two disks carried on spindles to rotate as the edge of the knife is drawn between them.

In a new bicycle tire the resiliency is obtained by hollowing the face of the rim deeply and stretching a strip of fabric across the face, with a ring of rubber or other flexible material suspended in the center of the fabric.

A pneumatic axle bearing for vehicles has been patented to take the place of inflated tires on road wagons, being less liable to puncture, the weight being carried by pneumatic rings placed inside drums surrounding the axle.

THE BOOKMAKERS.

Margaret Deland says she reads economics, history and the newspapers for instruction and novels only for entertainment.

R. W. Chambers, when not writing books, gives his time to many fads. He collects butterflies, designs uniforms and keeps up his painting.

Max Pemberton, the author, is also a good business man and combines with his literary labors the London agency for an American publishing house. His home in West Hampstead is an ideal place.

Dr. Conan Doyle, it is reported, intends to contest a seat in parliament. Meanwhile he is turning into a playwright. He has just brought out a play (a domestic drama called "Halves") in Scotland and is about to produce another.

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate, Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to get enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr. Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative, and no one disputed his claim, as it seemed to be the only way of recalling his presence.

So King in the Dark.

"How can you account for the well known fact that a cigar when smoked in the dark loses much of its flavor?" was asked of an alleged philosopher.

"The reason is," said the philosopher, "that when all the senses are active each sense is more active than it would be if it were doing duty alone. So that when the eye ceases to work the palate and nose become dulled. To express it figuratively, the eye is endowed with a rudimentary power of smell and in the dark loses not only its sight, but its contributing power of smell."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Cost Her Her Reason

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Montoux, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

Moving Strains.

Elderly Beau (who is making a long call, to fair singer rapturously)—Ah, that song takes me back to the home of my childhood!

Fair Singer's Irrepressible Younger Sister (in a loud whisper)—Can't you sing something that will take him back to the home of his old age?—Harper's Bazar.

Vigorous Language.

"I tell you," said Sammy Snaggs, "that man talked straight from the shoulder."

"Samuel," said Mr. Snaggs severely, "you should not use slang."

"But, father, this was a deaf and dumb man, and he used the sign language."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and set to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and heavings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproars of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang, and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall, flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

Appearances.

Briggs—Appearances, you know, are often deceptive.

Griggs—Yes. A person can never tell just how much it is going to cost to keep them up.

There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects, specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. OUTWITTING AN ELEPHANT.

A Hunter Saved by His Knowledge of the Beast's Habits.

Only those familiar with the "manners and customs" of the elephant have any idea what a nimble creature it really is. Massive and slow footed as it looks, it is capable, when roused, of feats that would be difficult for much fleeter animals. Especially is this the case with African elephants, which, though taller, are generally lighter than their Asiatic brethren. Moreover, accustomed for ages to lead a wild life and often depending on their alertness and speed of foot for their very existence, they have acquired a skill in gymnastics which has occasionally taken even old elephant hunters by surprise.

In illustration of this fact we are reminded of a story told by one of the sportsmen in Africa. He was "out after elephants" and had just fired at and wounded a magnificent specimen. Unfortunately for him, he had only succeeded in slightly wounding it, when, infuriated by the attack, it turned and charged him. It was a terrifying sight. With its enormous ears spread out like sails and emitting shrill notes of rage, it came thundering over the ground like a runaway locomotive. The hunter fired another shot, but missed. His nerve was shaken, and, throwing down his "express" rifle, he sought safety in flight. Near at hand was a steep hill, and to this he directed his steps, for, being but slightly acquainted with the climbing powers of the elephant, he thought his pursuer might be baffled by the steepness of the ascent.

It was a terrible disappointment to find that the elephant could climb a hill just as quickly as the hunter, nimble runner as he was. The fugitive, indeed, would have soon been overtaken if he had not thought of a really ingenious ruse. He knew that elephants never run, or even walk, down a steep incline, but always crouch down, gather their feet together, lean well back and slide down. Just as the ferocious animal had got within a few yards of him, therefore, the wily hunter suddenly doubled and ran down the hill again.

Quick as a flash the elephant turned, gathered himself together and, trumpeting with baffled rage, slid down after his victim. The hunter had just time to spring out of the way as the great beast came "tobogganing" after him, smashing trees and shrubs and carrying everything before it like an avalanche. Then once more the hunter dashed to the top of the hill, while the elephant, unable to stop itself, went careering down to the very foot, where, apparently feeling very sore and disappointed, it rose and walked wearily back to its native woods.—Chums.

Odd Disasters.

In an English coal mine a few years ago a callous youth viciously pricked a pony with his penknife. The wounded animal kicked out furiously, overturning and breaking several safety lamps. The naked flames fed the foul gases in the air and created an appalling explosion, which wrought the death of over a hundred miners.

Sun rays, shining through a decanter of water on to the cartridge of a loaded rifle, slew a sleeping man on a lounge near by. The innocent owner of the rifle was arraigned for the supposed crime and was sentenced to death, when the testimony of a shrewd detective solved the mystery and secured his reprieve.

A German family, seven in number, lost their lives by a somewhat unique accident. They slept in one large apartment, lighted by gas. Before retiring the father hung his overcoat above the gas burner. During the night this garment slipped and fell on the tap, turning the gas full on and so suffocating the slumbering inmates.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

After a good soaking shower is the best time for hand weeding.

A good plan is to keep the growing orchard in cultivation until it comes into bearing well and then seed to clover.

Increased sunlight among the trees brings increased growth and blossom and decreases the tendency to mold and rot.

Peach, cherry and pear trees will bear very little forcing, and on this account wood ashes are better for them than ground bone.

Fruits, especially the apple, are largely controlled in character by soil and climate. Get varieties that are adapted to your locality.

Scraping the moss and old dead bark off the mature trees in the orchard and washing the trunks with some alkaline liquid can always be recommended.—Exchange.

Knew When to Quit

"I suppose you made your money through your holdings in stock."

"Well," said the financier, "they had something to do with it, but the really important considerations weren't my holdings so much as my let goings."—Washington Star.

A Sudden Start.

"You used to go to school with Coppers the new millionaire, didn't you?"

"I did. Fact is, I gave him his first start in life."

"How?"

"With a bent pin."

Verdict as Rendered.

"Gentlemen of the jury," asked the clerk of the court, "have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"We have," replied the foreman. "The verdict of the jury is that the lawyers have mixed this case up so that we don't know anything at all about it."—Philadelphia North American.

A CANADIAN BRIGADE

Important Change Effected in Regard to the Contingent.

CANADA'S OFFER ACCEPTED

The Government Receives a Cable From Mr. Chamberlain.

After an Urgent Appeal the War Office Has Consented to Canada Sending a Contingent to Be Regarded as a Canadian Brigade—Col. Otter to Command.

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—When the Government gave out its official announcement on Friday last in regard to the Canadian contingent, it was stated therein that the arrangements of the Imperial authorities were not altogether satisfactory, as Canada would like to be represented by a regiment of its own with a Canadian officer in command.

The Government have been in communication with the Colonial Office, and have made some progress in that direction. The despatch that appears in the papers this morning from Mr Chamberlain is a circular that was sent out to all the colonies, and it is only after an urgent appeal that the War Office has now consented to Canada sending a contingent to be regarded as a Canadian brigade.

In reference to the question of pay, the offer of New Zealand to furnish pay during the service in South Africa, in addition to the cost of transportation, was refused, as Lord Lansdowne, Secretary of State for War, "is of the opinion that the same conditions should be applied in the case of each colony." The original suggestion for the contribution of troops from the colonies was as follows :—

New Zealand 250.
Queensland 200.
New South Wales 250.
South Australia 125.
Canada 500.
Total, 1575.

It will, therefore, be seen that Canada is doing far more than its share. And that the Canadian contingent will be regarded as a brigade every one ought to be satisfied, except those who are turning the matter into political campaign material.

Col. Otter has been selected to command the contingent.

OFFER ACCEPTED.

The Government Receives a Cable From Great Britain.

Star Special.

Ottawa, Oct. 16.—The following cable was received this afternoon from Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, Secretary of State of the Colonies :

London, 16th October.

Her Majesty's Government have received with much pleasure your telegram of 13th October, conveying generous offer of one thousand troops, which they gratefully accept.

(Signed), CHAMBERLAIN.

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet, ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

One Exception.

"Do you love me so much," she demanded, "that you would be willing to give up your all for me?"

"Yes," he replied, "I would willingly give up all for you; but, of course, that doesn't include what I expect from your father."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Looking Ahead.

"It is only a matter of time," said Golfer, "when the expansion policy will carry us into Canada."

"What makes you think that?"

"Oh we will need the land on the other side of the border for golf links!"—Philadelphia North American.

Insurgents are Masters.

Paris, Oct. 16.—A despatch from Caracas, Venezuela, says that President Andrade is preparing to leave the city and that the insurgent commander General Irpriano Castro, is master of the situation.

A Large Collection.

New York, Oct. 16.—Sixty eight thousand dollars was raised in Carnegie Hall for the heathen yesterday by Rev A B Simpson. So spirited was the desire to contribute that women threw in valuable jewellery and men coats and vests.

Died at a Pumping Match.

Picton, Oct. 16.—Richard Potter, aged 27, living near Demorestville, while taking part in a pumping match on Saturday, burst a blood vessel and died almost immediately.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

A new comedy called "Wheels Within Wheels" is expected to go the rounds.

Robert Drouet will play John Storm in "The Christian" with Miss Allen next season.

"Annie Rooney" is undergoing a revival in Paris to the temporary eclipsing of Dreyfus.

Richard Mansfield is reputed to have taken out a life insurance policy for $100,000 recently.

David Belasco has completed an original play which will be produced early in the season with a specially selected company.

An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth" will be the feature of Frederick Warde's repertory next season.

It is unofficially announced that Rudyard Kipling is to write the fairy play to be produced at the London Lyceum next season.

Some German statistician has discovered that stage dancing is conducive to longevity. Taglioni lived to be 80 and Fanny Elssler to be 74.

Rose Coghlan has been re-engaged for her original role of "Mlle. Fifi" for next season, the piece to open its tour in August in Chicago.

Emma Calve's much talked of monument represents her as Ophelia, and the sculptor has promised to exhibit it at the Paris exposition.

Minnie Seligman will appear in the vaudeville houses in a one act play called "Therese," which has been done in Europe by Sarah Bernhardt.

In a play called "Wine, Women and Song," recently produced at the Princess theater, London, two demimondaines, armed with butchers' knives, fight to the death in a beautiful setting profusely decorated with flowers.

George Bernard Shaw submitted his new play, "Cæsar and Cleopatra," to Richard Mansfield, but as Shaw had required a 56-year-old baldheaded Cæsar to make love to a 16-year-old Cleopatra the manuscript was returned.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grizzly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lochnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward men strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a fold where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

STATE LINES.

Lumber can't help being high in Oregon. It grows that way.—Oregonian.

Iowa, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi and Ohio are the only states that elect governors and state officers this year.—St. Louis Republic.

Missouri now has a beer inspection law. The rush for appointments as inspectors will be akin to the opening of an Indian reservation to settlement.—Omaha Bee.

It is predicted that a comet will strike Iowa next fall, but a comet will have no terrors for the Iowan who has lived through an active cyclone season, with a political campaign due next year.

ARMY IN PHILIPPINES.

Total Military and Naval Force of 70,000 Men to Subdue the Natives.

Washington, Oct. 16.—When all the troops and ships under orders have reached Manila the army will have 63,872 fighting men and 500 non-combatants, and the navy 45 ships, 4,997 blue jackets and 1,184 marines.

NATIVES NOT IN HARMONY.

Manila, Oct. 16.—At Iloilo there is great tension between the Visayans and Tagalos growing out of the Tagalo holding Araneta, a leader of the Visayans, a prisoner since the threatened Visayan revolt against Tagalo domination a month ago. The Visayans are incensed to the point of rebellion. While the Tagalos nominally control only the military organization of the so-called Filipino Republic, they have crowded out the Visayans from the civil branch, whereat there is great discontent.

NATIVES TO ATTACK.

Manila, Oct. 16.—At Santa Barbara the natives have 12,000 men and three or four thousand rifles and plan to attack the suburbs of Iloilo, carrying the city and slaughter the Americans.

BODY OF AN UNKNOWN MAN.

It is Discovered on the C P R Tracks Near Monkland.

Toronto, Oct. 16.—The remains of an unknown man were found early yesterday morning on the C P R tracks, about one and a half miles from Monkland, a station on the C P R main line east, 68 miles this side of Montreal. The body was discovered by the crew of the up special which passed through at 7 o'clock. The cause of death is as yet a mystery, as is the identity of the man. Two seaman's certificates of discharge were found in the pockets of the deceased. One read "Wm. Marsh, aged 20; 'Alcides,' at Glasgow, Aug. 18, '99; signed, Wm Still, master." The other was as follows: "Michael Marsh, aged 17, born London, Eng.; discharged from ship 'Mount Royal,' at London, Sept. 18, 99. Signed, T Morgan, master." The deceased was fair, with light brown hair and smooth face. He was about 5 feet 3 inches in height, and his weight was around 130 pounds. The body is now awaiting identification.

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 25 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 seconds—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the saros, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians probably through the Phoenicians.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going, going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how > the mournful crocodile

> With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
> —"2, Henry VI.," 1, 22.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my derndest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch that or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

Cable Boat, 3.4 p.m.—The Columbia is in sight about 5½ miles from the finish line. The Shamrock is not yet in sight.

Associated Press Boat Wanda, off Long Beach, 2.30 p.m.—The Columbia had a lead of a good mile, and had made about 5 miles on her run back from the outer mark. She did not seem to gain much before the wind, but it was very apparent that she was losing nothing. Both boats broke out spinnakers and set balloon jibs as soon as the mark was turned, and were running home before a fairly steady 8-knot breeze. If the wind holds they should finish by 3 45.

Cable Boat, 3.34.—The Colsmbia is now about 4½ miles from the finish mark, but the wind still appears to be losing strength. The Shamrock is also in sight, about 5½ miles from the finishing line.

Coble Boat 3.40—Both yachts are under a perfect cloud of canvas. They will finish in about 25 min.

Columbia finishes 3.54, unofficial.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Vastly Different.

As will be seen, it makes a great difference how one uses the muscular resources at one's command.

A member of an athletic club, after swimming the length of the large tank in the basement of the institution, came out puffing and blowing, apparently exhausted.

"You don't manage your breathing right," said the swimming instructor. "It ought not to tire you so. As to the upper part of your body, including your arms, you use exactly the same muscles, and in very much the same way, in swimming as in sawing wood."

"No, sir!" gasped the swimmer. "When it comes to sawing wood, I use the muscles of some other man."—Youth's Companion.

A CLEVER RUSE.

The Auctioneer Was Quick Witted and Finally Made a Sale.

An auctioneer on East Washington street—one of those redoubtable individuals commonly termed "slick"—was the cause of a farcical scene recently that would have done credit to a burlesque show. He had been talking industriously for a long time to a crowd of interested but enthusiastic listeners.

The affable auctioneer conscientiously went through his repertory from beginning to end, but somehow the crowd did not "warm up" to him—to quote his own language. Finally, with a dark look that bordered on despair, he grabbed up a well known pasteboard hatbox containing about 50 spools of silk thread of different colors. With the grace of a conjurer he extracted five of the spools, and, arraying them in a tempting semicircle on the counter, announced that they were "to go at any price."

But the audience, while admitting with nods of approval that they were good spools of thread, displayed no marked inclination to become excited over them. Not a bid was offered.

"I'll sell 'em for 10 cents," suggested the auctioneer timidly. It was plain from the tone of his voice that he was losing faith in himself and in all the world. There were no takers. The man of the red flag added three more spools to the semicircle. "All for 10 cents," he declared. But thread stock was far below par. The auctioneer caught up all the spools from the counter and flung them into the box with an impressive gesture. The light of inspiration flashed from his eyes.

"The whole blamed box for 10 cents!" he cried.

"I'll take it," was the prompt response, and a little man in a washed out overcoat and wearer of red chin whiskers stepped out from the crowd with a dirty 10 cent piece in his upraised hand. The auctioneer clutched the money feverishly, and, turning the box upside down so that all the spools dropped into a basket on the counter, he handed the worthless piece of ancient pasteboard to the anxious customer. A roar of hilarious laughter rose from the crowd that was heard throughout that neighborhood.

"I don't want your blamed old box!" wailed the unfortunate purchaser.

"You said you'd take it," replied the auctioneer. "I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came in a strong chorus from the delighted audience.

"I bought the spools!"

"No, you didn't! You bought the box! I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came the answer again, stronger than ever. The red whiskered man stalked indignantly from the place with the box under his arm.

"What you going to do with it?" yelled the crowd.

"That's what!" cried the speculator as he held the pasteboard box in both hands, football fashion, and kicked it vigorously into the middle of Washington street.

A SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

How It Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted intentionally, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, king of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush on this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an assistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot, when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his blood by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $50 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of undecision he drew $370 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $500. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down four aces and a five spot.

"With a look of horror and a Samoan wail of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was thus allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

"Yes," answered the man who has been to [illegible] "and he likes to see us go over there and drop our

What a brute! That is what is said of the man who abuses his horse, but the man who abuses his body finds help and encouragement on every side. His mother makes him some of that good old fashioned mince pie, his daughter gives him hot biscuit, and his wife follows with delicious ice cream. Presently the man has that unpleasant feeling in the stomach which is the beginning of a dyspeptic condition. His nerves become unstrung, and he makes mother, wife and daughter miserable with his moodiness. His liver is torpid. His blood is being poisoned by the impurities which the broken-down organs are incapable of taking care of. He is in just the condition to receive the germs of any disease. He is a shining mark for the germs of consumption. To that disease too, he becomes a victim one day or another, unless saved by the use of such a remedy as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This will put him on his feet again. It is a tonic and appetiser, a blood purifier, a liver invigorator, a nerve restorer, a strengthener for the weak, a cure for weak and bleeding lungs, bronchitis, lingering cough and kindred ailments, which if neglected or improperly treated lead up to consumption. Perhaps you think no medicine can cure so many ailments, but when you remember that all these diseases start in the stomach and nutritive system, and that "Golden Medical Discovery" corrects that fault or derangement at the starting point, it isn't so strange after all that it does so much.

Mrs. Ellen E Bacon, of Shutesbury, Franklin Co., Mass., writes: "I firmly believe I should be in a very bad state now if I had not taken Dr Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Prior to September 1897, I had doctored for my stomach trouble for several years, going through a course of treatment without any real benefit. In September 1896, I had very sick spells and grew worse; could eat but little. I commenced in September 1897, to take the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and in a short time I could eat and work. I have gained twenty pounds in two

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

THE CIVIC INVESTIGATION.

More Specific Charges to be Made by the Council.

Yesterday morning the investigation into the alleged irregularities in the construction of the pavements by Evans and Langford, and R. Sheehy, as asked for by resolution of the Town Council, opened before Judge Weller. The charges, embodied in a resolution passed by the Council, have already been published.

There were a number of citizens present, including nearly all the members of the Council and officials, Messrs. Evans and Langford, Mr. Edwards representing the Town, Mr. Dennistoun representing Mr. Sheehy, Mr. Dumble representing Evans and Langford, and Mr. R. P. McWilliams representing Ald. McWilliams.

There was a long discussion as to how the matter should be taken up, Mr. Edwards contending that the charges should be more specific.

After the Judge had read the charges, he asked Mr. Edwards what he proposed to do about it.

Mr. Edwards was apparently opposed to taking strong ground in the interests of the Town, as is his duty. If the responsibility was to be thrown upon him he would have to produce the contract and subpoena witnesses such as aldermen, officers and contractors.

Mr. R. P. McWilliams stated that he was present on behalf of Ald. McWilliams who desired to be represented. He said that he was willing to assist Mr. Edwards in any way in having a thorough investigation. As to the mode of proceeding he submitted that in an investigation it was not necessary to bring specific charges against specific persons. It was not a trial. The resolution recited facts which in themselves demanded an investigation. It was claimed that the resolution was worded generally. It could easily be amended by inserting the names of all the aldermen and officers of the town and the contractors.

Mr. Edwards denied this, and said that Ald. McWilliams should formulate charges.

Judge Weller did not think that Ald. McWilliams or any other individual alderman should be called upon to prosecute.

Ald. Sawers wanted evidence taken. The whole point is, "Who changed the specifications?" Evidence should be taken as an imputation of wrongdoing now rests on the aldermen.

Judge Weller thought the charges should be made more clearly and specifically to those who were accused before the evidence was taken. They should know with what they were charged. The contractors had the right to ask "What are we accused of having done or having left undone?"

Mr. Dumble wanted more specific charges. Those against one contractor might not be the same as those against the other.

Mr. Dennistoun, speaking for Mr. Sheehy, wanted to know what was alleged against him. They wanted a day appointed to hear the charges and an opportunity given to answer them.

Mr. McWilliams stated that the contractors knew what was alleged against them.

After some further discussion Judge Weller called upon Mr. Edwards to take up his case. He was the person that should formulate the charges. Ald. McWilliams' counsel was ready to assist him but should not have to take charge of the proceedings. The Judge thought the investigation should be confined at first to the matter of the contracts, whether the contractors had fulfilled their contract.

Finally Mr. Edwards agreed to formulate the charges, and the hearing adjourned till Wednesday, 25th instant.

Removing the Rails.

The rails on the Chemong branch of the Grand Trunk Railway are being removed. The station house at Chemong has been torn down.

A SCIENTIFIC REPORT ON COFFEE

Shows it Can be Used by Some, and is a Poison to Others.

A gentleman connected with the Newberry Library, Chicago, have gone very carefully through the medical department, consulting and compiling from the best works of this country and abroad, on the value of coffee.

There is abundance of evidence to show that in some cases coffee, used as a stimulant is of advantage, while with many human systems it is a decided poison which will build up chronic conditions of disease if made use of steadily.

The investigator writes: "We have used for years your Postum Food Coffee and found nothing to fill its place." Among his quotations appears the following:—

"One of the highest authorities in Materia Medica and Therapeutics in England says: Caffeine, which is the stimulating part of coffee, is, in general terms, a stimulant first, and subsequently a paralyzant to the nerve centres in the cerebellum, medulla and spinal cord.

"In small doses it quickens the activity of the heart and raises arterial tension. Larger doses often over-stimulate the cerebral circulation, causing great heaviness of the head, flashes of light before the eyes, insomnia restlessness, and even delirum. Administered in sufficent quantity, it would doubtless prove fatal to man.'

"To thousands of people, coffee, of which caffeine is its chemical structure, is therefore a poison. Languor, restlessness and prostration follow as a result in the system when the habit of its continuance is acquired. This is followed by muscular tremor and sometimes dizziness, with nervous dyspepsia and insomnia; in fact, a train of depressing ails frequently not traceable to the beverage which never inebriates, but is in reality the source."

The gentleman concludes his long and very interesting paper on the subject with the statement, "Companies similar to that of the Postum Cereal Co., Ltd., of Battle Creek are to be multiplied and stand as benefactors of the race. Whatever our personal preferences, let us not class these changes in dietary to peculiar views and theories, but rather as generally recognized and accepted truths, a valuable acquisition of progress and investigation, scientific and philanthropic."

The rapid pace lived by American brain-workers has forced them to seek food and drink that quickly, and surely rebuild the exhausted energies and such people as a rule feel the disastrous effects of a continued use of coffee. It is to furnish this class of people with correct food and drink, selected and manufactured in the most scientific manner, that Postum Cereal Food Coffee and Grape-Nuts have been placed upon the market. All first-class grocers furnish them.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

There was no police court yesterday.

Peterborough is to have another job printing office. Other attempts have been made to establish a job office in Peterborough, without success. There is no room for such an enterprise in view of the fine jobbing offices already in existence in connection with the local newspaper offices.

Mr Wm Rundle has resigned his position as conductor on the Grand Trunk. Mr Rundle is one of the old Midland Railway men, having been on the road over 20 years.

Corporal Lailler, of Toronto, formerly of the 57th Battalion, has been ordered to the Transvaal with the Canadian contingent.

Recruits are coming in fast for the 57th Battalion.

The premises of Messrs R R Philip & Co., fruit merchants, George street, is undergoing extensive improvements. A new front is being put in the store, and the window will be recessed to a considerable extent.

PERSONALS.

Mr W S Given of Millbrook Reporter, was in town yesterday.

Mr J J Lundy was on the street yesterday for the first time since his return from his exciting experience as a passenger on the ill-fated Scotsman. Mr Lundy looks none the worse of the hardships and fatigue he underwent and was warmly greeted by his friends.

Rubber Stamps.

Mr. J Gordon Dalgety of 218 200 Washington street, Chicago, will for a few days exhibit in the sample rooms of the National Hotel, Peterborough, the best and most complete line of rubber stamps ever brought into Canada, comprising all the latest novelties for printing show cards, bulletins, price tickets, etc., in fact rubber stamps of every description. Mr Dalgety will be glad to show his latest novelties to all who call and inspect them.

Reached Buckhorn Safe !.

A despatch received late last night stated that the Gold Lake Hunting Glub arrived at Buckhorn safely, and after a short stop for refreshments, had proceeded on their way. The buttermilk tank was holding out splendidly, although gradually and rapidly growing lighter. Tom Eastwood arrived in town to procure fresh supplies. He says that he was unprepared for the hunters this season, only having a carload or so of refreshments on hand when the party arrived. He intends to be in better shape on their return.

An Ill-Timed Holiday.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—What can the representative of the crown in Canada be thinking of that he has named October 19 as Thanksgiving Day? Does he not know that turkeys are not available this early in the season? The crop in Ontario does not commence to be harvested out of the cold storage so soon, and after all, what is Thanksgiving without turkey? But perhaps it is the turkey's turn for a Thanksgiving—in which event he is undoubtedly most thoroughly correct.

GOBBLER.

Charges Asked For.

The following letter has been addressed by the Town Solicitor to each member of the Council:—

Dear Sir,—Having been instructed by the County Judge to formulate specific charges in connection with the investigation before him and to serve by Saturday next copies of the charges upon the persons against whom they are made, I shall be glad to receive in writing from any member of the Council or from any ratepayer interested a memorandum of any charges which he desires to have investigated in connection with the matters in question.

Yours truly,
E. B. EDWARDS.

For Throwing Stones.

C P R Detective Ross went up on a freight to Pontypool and placed under arrest a young man named Wesley Johnston, who was wanted on a charge of throwing a stone through the window of a railway coach on October 1st. Mr Ross was in town yesterday with the prisoner and went down to Port Hope, where the latter will be placed on trial. Johnston told the detective that he would plead guilty. The young man does not seem to be of very strong mind.

A Remarkable Feat.

Last evening about nine o'clock, Mr. Wm. Foorde, Superintendent of the Little Lake Cemetery, was driving a horse and buggy near the C. P. R. station, when a passing freight train frightened the animal, which broke away from the vehicle and ran away over the railway bridge into Ashburnham, and was found there shortly after perfectly unharmed. How the horse escaped from falling between the ties is a mystery, for the bridge is extremely difficult for pedestrians.

Body Brought Home.

The body of James Crowe of Hiawatha, whose death was recently reported in Winnipeg, arrived in Peterborough and was taken to the undertaking establishment of Mr D Bellegham, from which it was afterwards removed to his home in Indian Reserve. The department of Indian Affairs defrayed the heavy expense which was incurred through bringing the body home.

MR. DAWSON RETIRES

And Mr. Robert Weir Now Becomes an Alderman.

Mr Adam Dawson retired yesterday, and Mr Robert Weir was accordingly declared duly elected. This cannot but be satisfactory to the electors, who will be saved the expense of an election.

Ald. Weir will make a good, careful, conscientious representative, and is in favor of a thorough investigation in regard to the way work on our streets has been mismanaged.

Come Back to Peterborough.

Haliburton county councillors met in special session recently and unanimously memorialized to have the Provisional County of Haliburton abolished and allow each township to manage its own affairs. The county has been organized for 27 years, and for some time there has been a feeling that the expense under the present arrangement more than offsets the gain to the respective townships. Why not come once more to its paternal home, and become part of Peterborough? Much of the county lies within easy distance of Peterborough. The return of the prodigal would be welcomed.

Crawford Sawyer's Sad Fate.

The following appeared in the Vancouver Advertiser of Oct. 9th. Two boys named Manion and a boy named Crawford Sawyers started in an open rowboat for Howe Sound two or three days ago. Every steamer captain who mets the boys warned them back, but they refused to return. They were told a storm was blowing up, but they would not heed the warning. The steamer Defiance now reports picking up their rowboat, badly smashed and containing but one oar. It is thought the boys were drowned. The Manions were on the way to visit their mother.

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surrounding villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

SPEECHES IN PARLIAMENT

And Some Little Criticism of the Government's Policy.

Splendid Offers of Assistance From the Colonies Referred to in Parliament—England Must be Supreme—An Amendment Moved by Dillon Snowed Under.

London, Oct. 18.—In the Commons yesterday afternoon Sir Alex F A Hood, moving the address in reply to the speech from the throne, referred to the "splendid offers of assistance made by the colonies." The Liberal leader, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, said :

"The demands made by the Government of the South African Republic were such as to make it impossible for the Government of any self-respecting country even to take them into consideration. Actual hostilities have commenced and an act of aggression has been committed which it is the plain duty of our Ministers, of Parliament and of the people to resist. There will be no disposition on the part of this House to place any obstacle in the way of granting such supplies and such powers to the Crown as may be necessary to secure the rapid and effective prosecution of a war commenced to vindicate our rights. The campaign should be vigorously and promptly prosecuted, and nothing necessary for that purpose should be refused by the House of Commons.

ENGLAND TO BE SUPREME.

"Our natural position in South Africa has placed upon us the duty of seeing any impediment to our own supremacy removed On that we are all agreed. I have no intention of entering upon a minute or detailed criticism of the steps taken by the Government. The time for that has not yet come, and it is proper to wait for further explanation, but, I may say, it does appear to me that the Government are engaged in a game of bluff—which is not a very worthy one for a great country like this. The raising of the suzerainty question was utterly unnecessary, and did more than anything else to remove all chance of success from the negotiation."

COLONIES TO THE FRONT.

Mr. Balfour agreed with much that the Liberal leader said, but refuted the allegation that the Government had goaded the South African Republic into war by flaunting Great Britain's suzerainty in their faces. The South African Republic made claims to being an independent sovereign state, but these were inconsistent with the conventions of 1881 and 1884. The Imperial Government did not play a game of bluff. "That means a person acting as though he held cards he does not possess ; but this country holds the cards and means to play them."

Mr Balfour concluded by saying : "If war must come it has seldom been entered into by Great Britain upon an issue which was more clearly an issue of righteousness and liberty, and we have undoubted proof that our self-governing colonies beyond the seas are with us heart and soul.

AMENDMENT DEFEATED.

Mr Dillon moved an amendment that, "We humbly represent to Her Majesty that the state of war now existing between Great Britain and the South African Republic has been caused by the assertion of claims which interfere with the internal government of the Republic, in direct violation of the terms of the convention of 1884, and by the massing of large bodies of British troops on the frontier of the Republic."

The amendment, also suggesting arbitration, was seconded by Mr Labouchere, and supported by Messrs Davitt, Redmond, J P Stanhope, E H Pickersgill and others. It was defeated by a vote of 322 to 54.

HIMALAYAN MOUNTAINS.

Fears For the Safety of Mr. Freshfield's Party.

Bombay, Oct. 18.—Anxiety is growing regarding the fate of Mr Douglas Freshfield, Mr Garwood, and two Swiss guides, who are ascending Kinchinjunga. Observers at Darjeeling saw a terrific avalanche sweeping the mountain after the great storm. If a similar avalanche occurred on the other side, where the ascent was made, a disaster is most probable. It is impossible to receive news for three weeks.

Kinchinjunga is a most eastern peak of the Himalayas. Its altitude is 28,156 feet, or just double the height of Mont Blanc. It has never been scaled. The attempt of Mr Douglas Freshfield, former president of the Alpine Club, has attracted much attention in mountaineering circles. The famous Swiss guide, Zurbriggen, is accompanying Mr Freshfield. Mr Garwood is also a member of the Alpine Club.

THE BRITISH LION SHAKES ITS MANE.

Great Britain Makes Provision for Calling Out the Militia and Militia Reserves for Active Service

WILL DEMONSTRATE HER STRENGTH TO EUROPE.

A Message to Parliament Which Excites England. Troops Sent to Africa Will be Replaced in Garrison by Militia. Boer Account of Engagement Col. Powell.

London, Oct. 18.—Great Britain is putting on her armor in earnest. She is determined that her enemies shall not take advantage of the absence of the flower of her troops on African soil to repeat the manoeuvre made more than once in history of commencing hostilities as soon as her hand is a little weakened. The message of the Queen authorizing the embodiment of the militia and the militia reserves came as a surprise to all inhabitants of the British Isles, for such a step is always an indication that the Administration takes a serious view of affairs and is watchful to provide for all emergencies.

In the present instance the explanation is not far to seek. The sending of a large army to Africa has naturally depleted the ranks of the regular troops on British soil, so that it is necessary that another of the lines of defence should be drawn upon to fill their place in garrison. According to latest returns the effective list of the militia includes 118,221 men, while the strength of the reserve is estimated at about 30,000, of whom 25,000 could take the field at once. The militia, it must be borne in mind, though a voluntary force, is entirely apart from the volunteers and under different regulations. It takes third place in the lines of defence, the volunteers coming next in order. The militia proper is organized purely for national defence within the confines of Great Britain, but the militia reserves to all intents and purposes regular soldiers and as such become part of the army being liable for service in any part of the world.

CALLING OUT THE MILITIA.

London, Oct. 18.—In the House of Commons yesterday the first Lord of the Treasury and Government leader, the Right Hon. J. Arthur Balfour, brought in the following message from the Queen:

"The state of affairs in South Africa having constituted, in the opinion of Her Majesty, a case of great emergency within the meaning of the Act of Parliament, Her Majesty deems it proper to provide additional means for military service. She has therefore, thought it right to communicate to the House that her Majesty is, by proclamation, about to order the embodient of the militia and to call out the militia reserve force, or any part thereof as Her Majesty may think necessary, for permanent service."

London, Oct. 18.—The calling out of the militia and the militia reserves has occasioned widespread wonderment. Old stories of preparations against continental combinations are reviewed. It is freely rumored that the Government is determined to demonstrate to Europe that the British army is not a negligible quantity.

Probably both the attitude of Europe and that of the natives in South Africa have something to do with this movement; and the lavish display of force is intended, doubtless, not only to check the ill-will apparent on both sides of the Rhine and beyond the Vistula, but also to gaurd against the "black peril." According to the statistics published this year, the militia, including the permanent staff and the militia reserve, numbers 122,493.

London, Oct. 18.—The Boers, according to a special despatch from Pretoria yesterday repulsed a small force of Cape mounted police near Barkley West, Cape Colony, capturing two.

London, Oct. 18.—A special despatch from Pretoria reports that a white flag has been hoisted at Mafeking. The correspondent does not know whether the town intends to surrender.

London, Oct. 18.—While the greatest anxiety is still felt regarding the fate of the small British force at Mafeking, yet the failure of the Boers to overrun Natal and capture Kimberley in a week indicates they are awakening to the fact that they have a bigger job on hand than they supposed. Indeed, it is doubtful whether the Boers will move much further to the southward. The probability is that they will entrench the mountain passes to the best of their ability, and make a determined stand there. When the British reach the Cape and push their way to the front, the old saying, "He who hesitates is lost," may have considerable significance in the case of the Boers. It is quite evident, too, that they lack leaders.

BOER STORY OF MAFEKING FIGHT.

London, Oct. 18.—Advices from Pretoria, summarizing the reports to the Transvaal Government from General Cronje in command at the chief laager on the west side, announce that the Marico and Rustenburg commandos, with field telegraph, occupied Durmann's Drift, near the outskirts of Mafeking, on Monday and took possession of a mountain in the neighbourhood, thus cutting off the water supply of the town. The Boer artillery then began shelling, but the British did not reply. A Boer account of the skirmish with the British armored train south of Kimberley says: "The train came up on the burghers, while they were destroying the railway. The Burghers fired upon the train with Mausers, and successfully with artillery. The third shot hit a truck and the train then steamed off, after which the burghers continued the work of destroying the line."

Another despatch from Pretoria says that the burghers have occupied Taungs, south of Mafeking, and Lobatsi, to the northward, without opposition. With regard to Norval's Pont, it appears that the Cape railway officials destroyed the bridge on the line on the Orange Free State side, and then abandoned the station.

The Orange Free State troops have destroyed the Modder River bridge without opposition.

A despatch from Durban, Natal, says that refugees who arrived there yesterday from Pretoria, declare that the Boers at the Transvaal capital admitted a Boer repulse at Mafeking, eight burghers being killed and a number wounded.

BASUTOS ON THE WARPATH.

London, Oct. 18.—The Morning Post's correspondent at Ladysmith, says that the Basutos have risen against the Free State.

The British must keep the Basutos quiet, and the paramount chief Lerothodi has thus far behaved well. Reports are current, however, that the other chiefs may follow the example of Moshesh. Moreover, the unrest among the tribesmen is spreading into Zululand.

CRONJE OPENED FIRE.

Pretoria, Oct. 16.—General Cronje, after warning the women and children to leave Mafeking, opened fire upon the town with cannon this afternoon. No response was made.

JOUBERT AT NEWCASTLE.

Pretoria, Oct. 17.—Delayed in transmission.—Commandant General Joubert has arrived at Newcastle, Natal. He found only a hundred men there when he entered the town. In spite of the severe strain the health of President Kruger continues good.

GENERAL KOCK AT INGOGO.

Pretoria, Oct. 17.—Delayed in transmission—General Jan. H. M. Kock, second in command of the Boer force, is still in Ingogo. He has cannon commanding Bothas and Linnet Passes, through the Drakensberg mountains, and has cut the railway between Dundee and De Jaager's drift, the ford over the Buffalo River, twenty miles to the east leading towards Vryheid in Transvaal territory. Several Transvaal commandos are moving toward the Biggarsberg mountains, to the south of Glencoe, evidently intending to establish themselves in a strong position there.

WATER SUPPLY CUT OFF.

London, Oct. 18.—Up to noon to-day no confirmation has been received of the report of serious Boer losses at Mafeking; but stories are arriving from various points so persistently and circumstantially that it appears probable the burghers have met with some measure of reverse. Accounts of the action at Mafeking are now beginning to arrive from Pretoria. Therefore, if the Boers had any success it is bound soon to be known. As foreshadowed yesterday, they have succeeded in cutting off the water supply at Mafeking; but it is said that there are sufficient wells in the town to supply the inhabitants.

COL. HUGHES WILL COMMAND.

Ottawa, Oct. 18.—It is announced unofficially to-day, but not without good authority, that Col. Sam Hughes will command the unit from Toronto.

SEIZED A TELEPHONE.

Cape Town, Oct. 17.—The Boers seized the telephone at Modder river last evening, and attempted to speak with Kimberley, trying to learn the disposition of the British forces there. The manoeuvre was discovered and frustrated.

SMALLPOX APPEARS.

Cape Town, Oct. 18.—Smallpox has broken out here among the natives from Johannesburg. Eight cases have been discovered.

KNOCKED TANNER DOWN.

London, Oct. 18.—The Cork Constitution says that a few evenings ago Dr. Charles Tanner, Nationalist member of Parliament for the Middle division of Cork, was abusing the Queen and the British soldiers, whereupon one of the Royal Engineers knocked him down, promising to repeat the operation if Mr. Tanner would rise.

FIRING AT KIMBERLEY.

Cape Town, Oct. 18.—According to advices received here, heavy firing is going on at Kimberley between the British garrison and the Boer forces, which are attempting to capture the place. There is a strong force of Rough Riders, headed by Cecil Rhodes, at Kimberley. It is believed the town can hold out until reinforcements which have been dispatched arrive.

ABOUT THE CONTINGENT.

The Question of Brigade or Units Still in Doubt.

Ottawa, Oct. 18.—The question as to whether the Canadian forces will serve together in South Arica as a distinct part of a brigade is still involved in some doubt, but according to Hon Mr Borden's statement in Toronto yesterday, it may be accepted as practically decided on that such will be the case. A definite announcement will be made to-day when the Minister of Militia returns to the city.

Mr Hugh A Allan, of the Allan line, was in the city to-day making arrangements with the Government for the transport of the troops. The price to be paid for the use of the Sardinian is not yet agreed upon, but the contract will probably be signed to-day. The vessel will arrive in Montreal to-morrow and will be at once fitted up so as to allow each man a bunk to himself.

At Quebec preparations are being made for the reception of the contingent. The garrison artillery will be ordered to vacate the citadel and the Transvaal troops will be quartered in their places and in the drill hall.

LIBERIA ON ITS LAST LEGS.

Germans are Advised to be on the Watch Against England.

Berlin, Oct. 18.—The Deutsche Kolonial Zeitung, an organ which has the reputation of being frequently inspired by the Colonial Department of the German Foreign Office, publishes an article on the relations of Germany to the negro Republic of Liberia The writer points out that the Republic, which has been kept from bankruptcy and complete decay by the financial help of England, is approaching its last days. Two-thirds of the business firms represented in Liberia are German, and says the writer, it behoves Germany to be on the watch least on the collapse of the Republic England and France should take possession of the country between them.

Officials Bailed Out.

Montreal, Oct. 18.—The officers of the Banque Ville Marie who were committed to stand their trial at the November term of the Court of Queen's Bench, yesterday, on a charge of making a false statement to the Government gave bail yesterday afternoon to appear when called.

The Ameer is Insane.

Moscow, Oct. 18.—News comes from Cabul that all prominent Afghans who dare to leave the court of the Ameer are fleeing to save their lives. The monarch is said to be insane and subject to frequent violent fits. Many high dignitaries have been put to death for no cause.

Killed at a Crossing.

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 18.—Last evening at 8.30 William Smith, a blacksmith of Nigger Hill, near Westbrook, was struck by a G T R westbound freight at Cataraqui crossing, and was so badly injured that he died.

THE CABINET SHUFFLE

The Member for West Peterborough Enters the Cabinet.

HON. MR. HARDY RETIRES

And Hon. G. W. Ross Becomes the Premier of Ontario.

The Writ for a New Election in West Peterborough to be Issued in a Few Days—Mr. Stratton to be Sworn in To-day—Hardy's Farewell Address.

As predicted by the Times, there has been some important changes in the Ontario Cabinet. The Hon. Mr. Hardy has retired, and is succeeded by the Hon. Mr. Ross. Mr. Harcourt, it is thought, will get the department controlled by Mr. Ross, while Mr. Stratton will either become Commissioner of Crown Lands or Provincial Treasurer.

The Times most heartily congratulates Mr. Stratton on his promotion, and his elevation to a portfolio, the riding and county have been honored. Mr. Stratton has ever been mindful of his constituency, and we but express the undivided opinion of Liberal and Conservative alike in thus presenting our good wishes.

The writ for a new election, in West Peterborough will be issued in a few days, and it is hoped, by the Government, that Mr. Stratton's return will not be opposed.

The following letter to Mr. Hardy's constituent has been issued :—

To the Electors of South Brant :

At the close of last session I informed my colleagues in the Government that, owing to constant and prolonged ill-health I should feel it my duty to them as well as the country during the summer to place my resignation as Premier and Attorney-General in the hands of his Honor the Liutenant-Governor. For the same reason I had desired to be released from the arduous labors of public life prior to last session, but my colleagues would not then consent to my retirement. The time mentioned is now past and I have felt bound to press for their assent to my resignation. For the same reasons I also place my seat in the Legislative Assembly at the disposal of my constituents, who have so long honored me with their confidence and approval.

For some time past I have been subject to an ailment, from the effects of which I can for the future expect at most but temporary relief, and which, I cannot conceal from myself, to some extent impairs my capacity for the full and satisfactory discharge of the onerous duties of my present position, and which, also compels me hereafter to lead a quiet and retired life.

I cannot close my public connection with the electors of South Brant, among whom I have so many old and valued personal friends, without giving expression in a feeble way to my deep fellings of gratitude for the confidence which they have reposed in me as their representative for more than a quarter of a century, a confidence which has stood the test of nine elections, in nearly every one of which the feeling of the constituency in favor of Liberal principles and of Reform government has been emphasized by an increased majority over the preceding election. The consistency and unity of the Reformers of South Brant in this respect have been an object lesson to Liberals throughout the entire province.

I think I can say with confidence that I have endeavored during all that period to act as the true and faithful representative both of my constituents and of the principles which they have avowed and supported.

Circumstances of a very painful character have recently transpired in connection with some of the bye-elections, which all must deplore, and which none can defend, and which I and my colleagues and the Liberal party as a whole unhesitatingly denounce. Neither the Government nor any member of the Government, nor nor any Liberal member of the House, had any part in them or knowledge of themthem. Some of the methods and practices adopted were not those of the Liberal party, nor were they those of the Reform candidates, nor, as I have reason to believe, of the principal organizers acting for the Liberal associations, nor were they the work of true Liberals of any class, but those of enemies of the Liberal party. My resignation does not arise from these misdeeds, however much they may be deplored, nor is it in any wise connected with them, althought they have somewhat delayed it.

There is no more attractive position in the gift of the people of any part of Can-

Morning Times

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 18, 1899

THE THEATRE OF THE WAR.

In 1896 the population of the Transvaal was given as 249,379, of which only 180,000 were whites. The population of the Orange Free State was 77,716 whites and 129,787 blacks. Less than half of the white population of either country are Boers.

Assuming that with increase for three years the white population of the two countries will aggregate 300,000 and that half the people are Boers, we have perhaps 40,000 full-grown men from which the enemy may draw. To this must be added a considerable force of natives who will be drawn to the Boer standard. If the enemy can muster 50,000 men they will pretty well exhaust their resources.

Full of the conceit that they are God's chosen people, and misled by their magnification of victory at Majuba Hill, the Boers are counting on meeting great odds with success. An easy victory or two, even over a very small force, would cause great elation and would make them still more confident. A crushing defeat would tend to disabuse their minds. As it is, for a time they will probably enjoy an advantage.

Few persons have any idea of the enormous distances to be traversed by troops going from Britain to the Transvaal, to say nothing of the character of the country to be penetrated. The possession of Delagoa Bay would give Britain an easy route from the entire coast at Lorenzo Marquez to Johannesburg, 396 miles. Via the Cape the distance is 1,330 miles.

But Britain has an easier way of reaching the Boer country. From Durban, Natal runs a line of railroad, on which the first Boer attack is likely to be made, if it is not already made. The distance from the coast by this route are as follows: Ladysmith, a point menaced, 189 miles; Newcastle, probably already invested by the enemy, 268 miles; Laing's Nek, 300 miles; Johannesburg, 483 miles; Pretoria, the Boer capital, 511 miles; Harrismith, in the Orange Free State, 240 miles.

From Cape Town to Kimberley, the great diamond mine district, and one of the nearest towns to the Orange Free State border on the railway from Cape Town to Buluwayo, is 647 miles; to Mafeking it is 870 miles, and to Johannesburg, via Mafeking, 1,014 miles. From Cape Town to Bloemfontein, capital of the Free State, the distance is 750 miles.

But the distance to be covered before the point of disembarkation is reached is great, and the effect of such a long voyage is somewhat demoralizing on a body of landsmen. The trip from New York to Liverpool is only 3,540 miles and is made easily in eight days. The trip from New York to Cape Town, via London, is 11,245 miles and occupies 30 days. Such a sea voyage, followed by another 1,000 miles or so by rail and foot would be trying on new recruits, and would compel caution in the forward movement until the men were in good condition.

The Boer tactics will probably be to keep the British forces busy at some strongholds while scouting parties try to wreck the railways and cut off the advanced forces from their base of supplies. Only in some such tactics is there a chance that the end will be long delayed. A single pitched battle would "take the starch out of them." Perfect knowledge of the country will be of great service to the Boers in warfare of the bushwhacking kind.

Johannesburg lies almost in the centre of the tract included in the hostile countries, and is situated 5,683 feet above the sea level. Its large foreign population is frowned upon by a grim fort which overlooks the city and whose guns are ready to wreck it at the first sign of revolutionary movement.

The railway from Durban runs through a country that affords many excellent points for resistance, and the Boers by seizing Laing's Nek and other passes put themselves in a position that will force the British to accept battle at a disadvantage before an effective blow can be struck. Could Britain utilize the Delagoa Bay route, entrance to the Boer capital would be much easier. But it is not probable that arrangements to do so can be made at this stage.

Stories of serious disaffection and threatened revolution in Cape Colony should be taken with much salt. There are, of course, many Dutch settlers there, and it would be surprising if there were not Boer sympathizers among them. But the Cape people have enjoyed the blessings of British rule, and having done so will not be likely to crave for Boer domination. We shall be surprised if Cape Colony does not do its share along its border to make Britain's work easier.

The great difficulties to be faced may be thus summarized: Distances of transport; maintenance of communication with base of supplies; nature of the country to be traversed; elusiveness of the enemy. But Britain knows just what she is undertaking, and once in the work she will care that hereafter entrance to the Transvaal and Free State shall be as easy as it is in any other part of the world where her flag floats—and that the government shall be as free.

JERRY'S LETTER OF ADVICE.

How a Son of Erin Wrote to His Friend in Ireland.

A son of Erin appeared at the money order desk of the post office, and said that he wanted to "sind some money to ould Oireland."

"Fill out this blank," said Mr. Corkery, handing the applicant one of the blanks used on such occasions.

"An' phwat is that?" asked Jerry.

"It's a blank that every applicant for a money order must fill out—a kind of letter of advice regarding the money order."

"An' phwat has a letther of advice got to do wid me sindin' tin dollars to me ould mother?"

"A letter of advice to the postmaster where the money is to be paid must always go with a money order."

Jerry went from the counter, grumbling and mystified.

After half an hour of painful effort at a high desk provided for the public at one end of the room, Jerry returned and handed in this "letter of advice" to the postmaster at Ballycarney:

"Dear Moike, O'im tould Oi must give yez a bit av advice before you'll be able to pay me ould mother the two pounds O'im sindin' along with this. So Moike, would advise yez to come to Ameriky, an' get a job at kapin' post office, for it's illigan tposst offices they has here, an' Oi've no doubt the pay is tin toimes what it is wid you. So now be sure an' pay me ould mother the two pounds, for Oi've done as the law says, and sint yez a letther of advice."

The First Gun in South Africa.

"Is Col. Sam Hughes at the front?" exclaimed Gen. Sir Redvers Buller, with a look of anxiety.

"He is, your honor," replied the aide-de-kong.

"Are ye there, Sam?" repeated the General.

"I am, your honor, replied the Colonel. "I am, in spite of Laurier and Tarte."

"Then advance on the enemy—up guards and at them," called out Sir Redvers, waving his sword.—Lindsay Post.

THE PUNSTER.

It's easier to pass a resolution than it is to keep it.

When the baby is asleep, it's a case of kid napping.

"Never wear shoes too small for you" is a good foot rule.

A telegraph operator demands cash for what he does on tick.

It's surprising how easy it is to get something you don't want.

Law books are bound in sheep out of respect for those who go to law.

Some people are so miserly one can't even have a joke at their expense.

A married man says the jaws of death are not to be compared with the "jaws" of life.

Shopgirl's Hard Lot.

Persons complain that shopgirls do not jump actively to wait upon them when they enter a store. Why not? The other day I saw a girl approach a respectably dressed woman of middle age—that's 35—and heard her ask, over the counter, "What would you like, ma'am?"

To this polite attention I was shocked to hear the woman reply: "You shut up! Don't you talk to me! I can ask for what I want, and I don't want any impudence from clerks!"

A few rebuffs from such creatures are quite enough to cool the ardor of any shopgirl.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

GEORGE ST. PETERBOROUGH

The GRAPHOPHONE

Most fascinating invention of the age. Always ready to entertain. It requires no skill to operate it and reproduce the music of bands, orchestras, vocalists or instrumental soloists. There is nothing like it for an evening's entertainment. Other so-called talking machines reproduce only records of cut-and-dried subjects specially prepared in a laboratory, but the Graphophone is not limited to such performances. On the Graphophone you can easily make and instantly reproduce records of the voice, or any sound. Thus it constantly awakens new interest and its charm is ever fresh. The reproductions are clear and brilliant.

Graphophones are sold for $10 and up

POULTRY POINTERS.

Impure water in summer often causes disease among poultry.

The objection to late hatched fowls is the danger of their being stunted.

Poultry matures within a year and is easily changed in any of its characteristics.

Irregular feeding invites derangement of the digestive organs and often causes disease.

In nearly all cases the male imparts the color. When white males are used all the chickens will be white.

Generally, ground bone is one of the best forms in which to give lime to the laying hens when they need it.

By using milk instead of water in mixing the soft feed for fowls it serves both for moisture and nourishment.

One advantage in favor of the white breeds is that the pin feathers do not show so plainly as in the black plumaged birds.

Cornmeal does not contain all the essential elements of growth, and for this reason chickens often die off when fed upon it.—St. Louis Republic.

TIRE PUNCTURES.

In Turkey they call the bicycle the "devil's chariot."—New York Telegram.

It is not considered good form for a red-headed girl to ride a white bicycle. This is important news and should be remembered.—Kansas City Times.

The bicycle rider is not hard hearted. He sincerely regrets collisions with pedestrians, though his regret is not as keen as it used to be when wheels were higher in price.—Kansas City Journal.

Of course the Boston Globe editor is writing of the Boston maiden when he says, "In the case of the average bicycle girl distance lends enchantment to the view."—Cleveland Plain Dealer

Arab chieftains and other high moguls of the race are eager to get any old bicycle they can lay their hands on. They learn to ride quickly and are proud and happy when mounted on what they call the "horse of the devil."

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but those things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

Kansas is a state of long obituaries and neglected graves.—Atchison Globe.

What between J. Sterling Morton's new party and Senator Thurston's poetry, the state of Nebraska has our profound sympathy.—Denver News.

New York has established a state college of forestry. One of its labors will be to replant the tracts denuded of pine and other valuable conifers. It set out a large area this spring and is nursing [illegible] seedling pines for future use.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

BRITISH LION, BEWARE!

Foreign Powers Seek to Profit by Britain's Trouble in South Africa.

FRANCE AND RUSSIA CONFER

And a Franco-German Understanding May Also Result From the War.

Germany Must be Strong Enough to Meet Britain and the United States—Russian and French Foreign Ministers Meet—Italian Press Favor Transvaal.

Paris, Oct. 17.—In some quarters in Paris it is believed that a France-German understanding will be one of the results of the war in Africa. Several of the leading continental journals outside of France develop the same idea, the reason given being that the Germans must be strong enough to meet the United States and England, "who could easily destroy the German navy."

The fear keeps growing stronger here that a complicated diplomatic situation is likely to arise in the course of the war.

M. Valfredy, the well known foreign editor of Le Figaro, points out that the Kaiser shares largely in the responsibility for the trouble now besetting the Boers. "He first proclaimed their independence, regardless of the treaties and conventions which England uses to-day against them. He gave them to understand that if ever their independence was threatened they would find outside support. If it had not been for the famous telegram of Jan. 2, 1896, the Transvaal would have been in a good moral situation to treat directly with England, at that time humiliated and in a difficult position, and to obtain perhaps a few years of repose and security."

RUSSIA AND FRANCE CONFER.

New York, Oct. 17.—A despatch to the Herald from Berlin says :—The Berlinger Tageblatt learns from a diplomatic source in London that the purpose of the visit of Count Muravieff to Paris was to seek with M. Delcasse, an opportunity of profiting by England's embarrassment in South Africa. M. Delcasse wants to produce in the Palais Bourbon the exact text of the Russian alliance, in order to take revenge for the Fashoda question. Therefore it is not intervention in favor of the Boers, but the boiling of the Franco-Russian soup on the Boer fire.

FRIENDLY TO THE BOERS.

Rome. Oct. 17.—The press of Rome is unanimously friendly to the Transvaal. There is considerable popular agitation of the question of raising recruits in the Boers' aid, but the Government has assured Great Britain that no volunteers will be permitted to depart for the Transvaal. The Italian Uitlanders in the Rand are neutral.

How They Used to Kill.

In repairing an old house in Dartford, England, not long ago the workmen found several ancient death warrants, bearing the signature of the Duke of Portland, minister of King George III. One of them, dated June, [illegible], gives an idea of what legal hanging and quartering were like in those days. It runs:

"Whereas, James O'Coigley, having been attainted of high treason and had sentence passed upon him to be drawn upon a hurdle to the place of execution and to be there hanged by the neck, but not until he is dead; but that, being alive, he shall be taken down and his bowels taken out and burned before his face, that his head shall be severed from his body and his body divided into four parts, and that his head and body shall be disposed of as we think fit, and whereas we think fit to remit that part of the sentence directing the burning of his bowels and dividing the body into four parts, our will and pleasure is that he shall be drawn and hanged and have his head severed from his body."

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" cried the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore!" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell, 'Toot, man!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

ON THE TROLLEY.

The red is melting in the river,
The red is dying in the sky,
The evening star begins to quiver,
Belated birds go darting by—
Come, let us follow, follow, follow,
And find how fine it is to fly.

By pine woods where when noon was sunny,
The air with spicy balsams flowed,
By gardens full of sweets and honey
Where summer long the rose has glowed,
By weary wife and loitering lover,
On, flash along the river road.

The forest wall across the river
Darkens within the curling tide,
The fragrant winds [illegible]
We rock, we race, we rush, we ride,
Thrilled with the sweep of airy motion
And glad because the world is wide!

The night soars up the purple spaces,
The whirling winds [illegible]
Strange gleams are on familiar places,
Swift lightnings underneath us [illegible]
As forward flying, flying, flying,

The Rev. Winfield Hawkes, who has spent 11 years in Utah, says the Mormon girls favor polygamy and the young men are opposed to it. This is natural. The young men know what it is to have to foot their own bills when they go shopping, and the girls know what it isn't.—St. Louis Republic.

Vastly Different.

As will be seen, it makes a great difference how one uses the muscular resources at one's command.

A member of an athletic club, after swimming the length of the large tank in the basement of the institution, came out puffing and blowing, apparently exhausted.

"You don't manage your breathing right," said the swimming instructor. "It ought not to tire you so. As to the upper part of your body, including your arms, you use exactly the same muscles, and in very much the same way, in swimming as in sawing wood."

"No, sir!" gasped the swimmer. "When it comes to sawing wood, I use the muscles of some other man."—Youth's Companion.

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrass Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Ellson's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eye;
Pray save Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored clime.—Andrew Carnegie in North American Review.

NO MORE BONUSES

For Immigrants Unless They Have at Least $100 Above the Price of Their Tickets.

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—The Department of the Interior has under way new regulations in respect to continental immigration.

In future none will be accepted as immigrants, in other words, no bonus will be given to shipping companies unless the immigrant has $100 after paying for his ticket.

Some districts, such as Buckawanie are mentioned from which it it desirable that immigrants be solicited.

Mr Sifton will speak at Portage la Prairie on the 23rd and at Winnipeg on the 24th.

Crippling Traffic.

New York, Oct. 17.—The World says: The British Government is seriously crippling the trans-Atlantic carying business by snapping up vessels to be used as transports.

Seventy-five ocean carriers, including 32 trans-Atlantic liners, have already been chartered.

The paper then goes on to rehash a list of about a dozen boats already published and adds that if "necessary, the Cunard Co must turn over the Lucania, Campania, Umbria, and Etruria to be converted into armored cruisers." The fact that warships cannot possibly be used to fight the Boers renders it necessary to state that the steamers are not likely to be chartered.

Artillery Wants to Go.

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—An effort is being made to get a company of artillery to form part of the Canadian contingent. It is doubtful, however if this can be done.

American Help Needed

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—The Government has suspended for the remainder of the season the section of the coasting laws which prevents American vessels from carrying freight from any port on the upper lakes to any other port in the Dominion. The reason is that there are about 4,000,000 bushels of wheat at Fort William awaiting shipment, and it would be impossible for Canadian vessels to fill the demand.

THE COOKBOOK.

A nourishing dish may be made from cooked meat by stewing it very slowly in really good stock or gravy for 1½ hours.

An Italian way to give the touch of garlic to the salad is to rub a piece of bread with it and put it in the salad dish, where it lends its flavor through the dish as the salad is tossed.

Cook twice as much hominy as you want for a meal and pack what is left in a square dish. Next day cut in slices, fry in pork fat and serve with maple sirup. Rice is good fried in the same way, and children are very fond of both.

For baking, the banana should be green, but neither too green nor too ripe. It may be made most delicious by peeling and rolling in brown sugar and baking in a buttered pan in a very hot oven. It should be served around blanc mange.

Where the Pot of Gold is Buried.

How many women are fretting and struggling along on a very little money when a good sized yard or adjoining patch of ground is going to waste! Yet that very piece of ground may contain all sorts of possibilities—clothes, furniture, books, medicines, luxuries and even necessities otherwise impossible.

Clear, plow, fertilize and plant. This done, the great beginning is made, and perseverance and attention will secure the rest. Onions, tomatoes, cabbages, celery, a small poultry farm, a violet or rose farm—any one of these may add several hundred dollars to one's purse every year. Small fruits, hops, tuberoses and grapes are also very profitable. With some intelligence a blooming garden can always be made a paying one. Make it a principle to have no more waste in the garden than in the kitchen.

If there is only a very small place and just enough raised for one's own family, try, after the table is supplied, to prepare what vegetables and fruits are left over for sale for winter use. There is always a demand for good homemade canning and preserving. Do not let a valuable scrap of ground be idle.—Annetta Halliday-Antona in Woman's Home Companion.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a graphophone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. THE ENTREE AN ECONOMY.

Dulls the Eater's Appetite For the Dinner Proper.

In the French and Italian cuisine, where economy is studied far more scientifically and thoroughly than in the English or American kitchen, the entree is not considered an extravagance. On the contrary, it is looked upon rather as an attractive economy—like soup, which dulls the eater's appetite so that he partakes less heartily of the more costly meat courses that follow. On the continent the luncheon never begins, as with us, with the chief dish of substantials. There is an introduction in the shape of a soup, or a dish of eggs, or of rice, or of macaroni, or semolino prepared in appetizing mode. Upon this the luncher tries the first edge of his appetite, so to speak. The piece de resistance comes afterward.

In the same manner, at dinner, the soup is almost invariably followed by one or two entrees. In the more ambitious menus these may consist of fish or poultry, or even of meat, prepared in croquettes or rissoles, or vol-au-vent. If there are two entrees, the vegetable will come second. But when, as is the case at many tables, there is only one entree, this is nearly always a vegetable and is served directly after the soup.

It must be borne in mind that the old fashioned custom which prevailed so generally some years ago in America, and is still to be found in certain places, of serving a number of vegetables with the principal meat dish is not followed on the continent. In England it is not unusual to see half a dozen dishes of vegetables appear with the roast. There they have even less idea of variety than is common with us, for precisely the same vegetables are offered day after day until one grows weary of the very sight of them. This, of course, is not the case among those people who have made a study of dinner giving and have grafted French customs on the British stock.

On the continent, however, things are done in a different fashion. At a simple dinner, containing, let us say, five courses, the first will be soup, the second a vegetable entree, the third meat of some kind, with one, or at the most two, vegetables, and one of them rarely fails to be a salad. Then comes a sweet, and after it fruit or cheese. The vegetable that appears as an entree need not of necessity be costly or unusual. Perhaps it is only a cauliflower, served with a good white sauce, or spinach, not cooked as we see it here—the stems and leaves coarsely chopped—but minced to a powder and then put through a colander, so that it is deliciously smooth and soft before it is dressed with butter or cream and surrounded with three cornered bits of toast or friend bread, or the entree may be nothing more elegant than white turnips or young carrots cut into small pieces, stewed tender and served with a cream sauce, or celery divided into three inch lengths, fried brown and seasoned with a tomato gravy. The name of the combination is legion, but they all have one point in common—that they are comparatively inexpensive.—Harper's Bazar.

Poison Bottle Ornaments.

At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city, there is a great collection of ancient jewelry, much of it in gold richly adorned with precious stones. Jewelers in the metropolis frequently visit the museum for the purpose of obtaining suggestions. This collection at the Metropolitan museum is in fact the finest assemblage of antique objects of personal ornaments in existence. Some of them date as far back as 900 B. C. Those of them which are made of silver have been practically destroyed by oxidation, but the gold ones being cleaned are as bright and new looking as they were 2,500 or 2,000 years ago. The jewelry from Cyprus is the work of ancient Phoenicians and Greeks.

One thing very noticeable is the frequency of tiny gold bottles attached to objects of jewelry derived from those ancient times. All evidence points to the conclusion that they were employed to hold poison, for in those days life was by no means secure, and at any time an emergency might arise where a man or woman would be glad to end existence promptly to escape lifelong imprisonment or indescribable torture by the horrible means used by the ancients.

They Keep Moving.

The religion of a Bedouin tribe seems to be to "move onward." Having once begun the nomadic life, it becomes almost necessary for them to keep it up. In the first place, they don't want to settle down, and they wouldn't have any place to stop if they wanted to. Sometimes it becomes expedient that they make great haste in these long journeys. Wandering around over the plains are other tribes whose only occupation is "moving on." There is frequently enmity between two of these Arabian families, and should one pursue the other it behooves the pursued to hasten onward with all the speed their animals are capable of. Or it may be that the springs of water are so widely separated that hard travel is necessary to make the distance from one to the other in a day.

When either of these contingencies arises, they cook and eat while on the march. They don't eat much. Two or three dinners such as American boys and girls are used to every day and something extra for Sundays and company are supposed not to agree with Bedouin children's stomachs. When on the road, bread is their chief food. This is baked while riding. One woman will mix the coarse flour which is carried in a sack on the back of her camel, another will roll and shape the dough, which is brought to her in small quantities, and a third will make a fire in an earthen vessel and attend to the baking. Women or boys on foot run along from one cook to the other and carry the material, and when the feast is ready they distribute it among the various members of the tribe.

They Keep one Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, noting his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the taraterns (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the taraterns see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft.

When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the other eye, previously open and somewhat blinded by the daylight, perceives nothing

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

ENGLISH EDITORS ON THE SITUATION

THINK THE TRANSVAAL HAS ACTED FOOLISHLY.

The Standard Accuses Boers of Suffering From National Delirium, While the Chronicle Condemns Chamberlain.

London, Oct. 14.—The editorials on the ultimatum this morning reflect the indignation that is popularly felt against the Boers.

The Times thinks that the Transvaal's "infatuated step" will be received with profound regret by a great majority of the British people. It says: "Hope of a peaceful settlement is deliberately quenched by the wanton action of the government at Pretoria. Such a despatch addressed to us by the mightiest of sovereign international states must have led immediately to war. It is flung down to us by a petty Republic to which we stand in the relation of the paramount power. In tone and substance alike, the document is one of studied insolent defiance. The men who drafted and sanctioned it were bent on deciding the controversy by the sword and by the sword it must now be decided. We have labored long and strenuously for a diplomatic solution, but the rulers of the Republic have snapped the last frail threads of negotiations. Upon them and their country must fall the consequences of their act. They have declared war on the British Empire and must pay the penalty of their aggression." The Times, discussing Great Britain's reply to the ultimation says: "There is reason to believe that President Kruger will get his answer this morning. It will be the only kind of answer compatible with the dignity or even the self-respect of a great nation. It will acknowledge with the cold civility we owe ourselves the receipt of Secretary Reitz's despatch, briefly expresses the regret of Her Majesty's Government at the contents of the document and informs the authors that the government of this country has no further communication to make to them. We shall neither recognize the despatch or any subsequent papers issued from Pretoria as a formal declaration of war ourselves. Declarations of that kind are not issued or requisite except between sovereign international States, and we have constantly denied, and still deny that the Transvaal possesses the status of such a State. Timely announcement of this fact may possibly save a certain number of impulsive sympathizers with the Transvaal from placing themselves in awkward and embarrassing predicaments."

The Daily News, a Liberal organ, which throughout the trouble has been more moderate than most of the newspapers, describes the Transvaal's despatch as most premptory, not to say arrogant. It says that "President Kruger has declared war because he preferred to do so rather than accept the peaceful settlement proposed in the British note of September 8. There is no getting away from this plain, simple issue." The Daily News assumes that the British Government will not notice the ultimatum.

The Daily Telegraph says:—President Kruger has slammed the door with all the violence of infuriated folly. It is difficult to decide whether the insolence of the preposterous missive from Alexander the coppersmith to Alexander the Great or its great inaccuracy is more remarkable. President Kruger decided to celebrate his birthday in a fashion which will bring his Republic clattering down upon his head. One doubts whether to laugh or weep over the mountebank performance. The despatch bristles with falsehoods as a porcupine bristles with quills. There can be but one answer, or, better still, no answer. The government has put its hand to the ploughshare and must thrust it home."

The Chronicle, which is a pro-Boer organ accuses Mr. Chamberlain of having committed the Empire to what is to all intends and purposes civil war after five months of hasty, undignified and inexpert negotiation. It says: "We shall be told that the Boers put themselves in the wrong in issuing the ultimatum. History judges the merits of a controversy that ends in war, not by the final act of either party, but the general conduct of the dispute." The Chronicle recites the warlike preparations of Great Britain, pointing out that many of them were made before the Boers issued a single commando, and while they were being made negotiation was absolutely stopped. It asks what would have happened if a tithe of these manoeuvres was applied to a European State. The paper does not defend the ultimation, when it compares to Mr. Chamberlain's despatches, adding, "It forms with them a compendium of everything statesmanship should avoid."

The Daily Chronicle says:—"A suicidal war is precipitated by the obstinancy of a reactionary old man and the braggadocio of his young Holland advisers. We accept the challenge. The Transvaal may rest assured that we will not draw back until from Table bay to the Zambesi river every white stands on an equality with his neighbor."

The Morning Post Says:—"A declaration of war is the Boer reply to the British concessions of 1881. The preamble to the Boer note forms an announcement that the Boer State has the right to bully the Uitlanders. The reply of the British nation will be conveyed in the conduct of the war. It is to be hoped that no formal answer will be sent."

The Standard dubs the despatch an outburst of national delirium, and says:—"The worst enemies of the Transvaal could hardly have supposed that its arrogance would lead it into such extravagances. The note is written in a style that would be offensive if addressed by one first-power to another. It is inconceivably ridiculous when it emanates from a trumpery little state which exists only by the forbearance of Great Britain. It has rendered absolutely certain and inevitable a contest from which the Transvaal can only emerge defeated and humiliated. There may have been hopes even until yesterday of a compromise and peace, but the Transvaal itself in astonishing folly has dashed them to the earth. The Transvaal ministers by one stroke have deprived themselves of such sympathy as they retained in this country and Europe. One course only remains to us. That is to wage war with the most relentless determination in order to achieve victory, complete, decisive and rapid. We need not refuse ourselves the satisfaction of knowing that right will be on the side of the victors."

THE TURF REVIEW.

Strock, 2:14¼, is to be tried this year at the pace, by George Saunders, according to report.

Marion, 3, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is said to be showing a good gait and good speed this year.

It is said that Rose Croix, 2:13¾ at three years, has shown a mile in 2:15 at the pace for McHenry, at Pleasanton, Cal.

Nelly R, ch. m., 2:20, by Red Cloud, although 18 years old, has never had a foal until this year. It is by Dan T, 2:08¾.

A horse with the peculiar name of Esaw, by Seesaw, dam by Independence, is to be raced this year by D. H. McGill.

All reports to the contrary notwithstanding, it is thought that Willis O. Foote will be able to be in the sulky this season.

There is a great deal of talk about Directly, 2:03¾, beating all the pacers out this year and taking a record faster than 2:00 besides.

Since the sale of Advertiser, Palo Alto farm has only three sons of Electioneer remaining in the stud, Altire, Azmoor and Mendocino.

A race for a purse of $1,000 is projected for July 4, at Youngstown, O., with Lord Vincent, 2:16¼; La Honda, 2:12¼ pacing, and Oddity, 2:10¼ pacing, among the starters.

The 3-year-old bay filly Marion, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is eligible to start in the New England $10,000 Futurity, and is likely to do so if the reports of the speed she is showing are correct.

The first new 2:30 trotter of the year is a dun gelding named Dot, breeding unknown, who took the first heat of the 2:40 race at Norfolk, Va., May 16, in 2:27¼.—Turf, Field and Farm.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algus with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 50 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist ez good natured and happy now as she wuz when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer er somethin will be spilled. She's got temper a plenty, and she ain't afeered uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never fergit ef I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wuz only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven or eight head uv fine horses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves pertickeler on, fer they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wuz yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wuzn't a funeral procession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week or ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough fer me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin for the lady in less than no time.

"The team wuz feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wuz a dozen or more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wuzn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wuz gittin anxious, though she wuzn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 200 yards from the upper turn, and there wuz no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heard a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wuz Jim a-comin lickety split. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wuz comin after us wuz like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let 'em go for all they wuz wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wuz fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wuz comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wuz.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wuzn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist rared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forrerd as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there fer a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wuz in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wuz that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wuz, I'm afeard I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I wuz dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wuz killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hunderd pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let theirselves out on a spurt that wuz chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wuz, and so wuz Mandy, for before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wuz up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wuz ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

"Mandy wuz in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it wuz only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uf a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all those golden sovereigns for so much paint!"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

By Sending Him Anonymous Letters of Complaint.

Chief Roszel has been the recipient of letters from time to time, from anonymous sources, bearing no signature, and making complaints against hotel men. The following is a sample of this sort of correspondence, and we give it just as it was written, spelling and all :

Peteboro, Oct. 19, 1899.

FATHER.

It seems to us that if we had a father that would write such a letter as that, we would take to drink or something worse. We advise the Chief if he ever gets his fingers on the writer of that letter to arrest him for murdering the Queen's English A man who would write a letter like that, either as a joke or in earnest, is not safe to be at large.

The Pavements.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The party who wrote the letter appearing in an evening paper last night, signed "Ratepayer," evidently forgets that we have a town engineer at $25 per week, who should have seen that the walks were properly put down. So far as Ald. McWilliams is concerned, if it had not been for his manly course, the ratepayers would have been much worse off than they are.

In all honesty let the blame be placed where it belongs. The engineer should have seen that the work was being properly done and the proper crossings laid.

With 17 empty stores in the heart of the town and 300 vacant houses, Peterborough is in a bad way.

FAIR PLAY.

Rubber Stamps.

Mr. J Gordon Dalgety of 218-200 Washington street, Chicago, will for a few days exhibit in the sample rooms of the National Hotel, Peterborough, the best and most complete line of rubber stamps ever brought into Canada, comprising all the latest novelties for printing show cards, bulletins, price tickets, etc., in fact rubber stamps of every description. Mr Dalgety will be glad to show his latest novelties to all who call and inspect them.

Served Him Right.

Last night a man, who is old enough to know better, undertook to champion the Boers, in an argument which took place in the rear of the Times office building. Finally the citizen, who is prominent and well known, spoke insultingly of the Queen, when he received a stinging slap in the face. There would have been a free fight had the party who received the punishment had the courage to back up his disloyal speech with force. He simply took his medicine and departed at a brisk gait.

A Close Shave.

A man named Charles Doris, about 35 years of age, who has no stated place of abode, nearly lost his life at the C P R yard yesterday. The unfortunate man, it is said, was the worse of liquor, and was attempting to steal a ride on a freight train that was pulling out of the yards. In his attempt to climb up between a couple of cars, he lost his hold and swung underneath, the wheels of several cars passing over his arm below the elbow. Dr Young and Dr McCullough were summoned, and ordered the patient to be removed to St Joseph's Hospital, where the injured arm was amputated.

What's on To-day,

Divine services in several of the churches, noted elsewhere. In the afternoon at 1 o'clock a very interesting Rugby match on the Ashburnham ground. The annual tea in the Charlotte street church in the evening. In the afternoon, commencing at two o'clock, the annual races of the Canadian General Electric Bicycle club will be held. A splendid programme has been arranged. In the evening at eight o'clock at the Catholic Association rooms there will be an entertainment and a debate on the question as to whether the war with the Boers is justifiable. There will be a tea and entertainment in the Sons of England hall Hunter street, commencing at 6 o'clock.

PERSONALS.

Mr D E Yarnold leaves for Toronto this morning to visit his parents.

AN UNSCRUPULOUS STATEMENT

A Vile Attack on the Member for West Peterborough.

The Toronto Telegram never omits an opportunity to take a fling at Mr. J. R. Stratton, who is mentioned in connection with a cabinet position. In its issue of the 17th instant, the Telegram says:

"The worst insult ever offered to Hon. A. S. Hardy is embodied in the suggestion that the Ontario Government could be strengthened by the exaltation of Mr. James R. Stratton to the place now occupied by the Attorney-General."

Mr. Stratton is qualified to fill any position in the government. He has ability, energy, and push, and would add strength to the government. The dirty slur which the Telegram attempts to cast on Mr. Stratton's name can do him no harm, as he is too well known for that. It is not creditable to a newspaper of the Telegram's standing to allow a malicious, cowardly and utterly false statement of this kind to appear in its columns.

WRECKED THE ENGINE ROOM.

Strange Mishap at the Parkin Shingle Mill, Lindsay.

Lindsay Post:—Mr. Sam G. P. Parkin's shingle mill was the scene of a somewhat unusual occurrence yesterday morning, and as a result the mill will be idle for a week or ten days, while it will take some hundreds of dollars to repair the damages caused.

Mr. Alf. Parkin, engineer, started the machinery at 7 o'clock, and a quarter of an hour later left the engine in charge of his assistant while he started the pump. Just then the governor belt slipped off, and when the engine's speed was thus accelerated the belt was thrown off the big flywheel. The engine then "ranaway" and the tremendous jar wrecked the engine and connections in such a way that extensive repairs will be necessiated. Nearly all of the spokes in the big fly-wheel were broken out or cracked, and a new wheel will have to be procured.

The mishap caused very little disturbance, and the men employed in the mill were not aware of the trouble until some one proceeded to the engine room to find out why power was not forthcoming. The engine was shipped this morning to the makers—the Peter Hamilton Co., Peterboro,—to be rebuilt.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

The Wave Crest, Mr J J Turner's Ontario Lake Schooner, arrived at Oswego from Whitby yesterday with a cargo of lumber.

Everywhere the working man is demanding a higher wage. At Bobcaygeon one day recently a number of M M Boyd's mill employees waited upon him with a request for a ten hour day and a few dollars more per month. The former request was granted.

Wesley Johnston, the young man who was arrested by C. P. R. detective Ross at Pontypool for throwing stones at C. P. R. trains and who was taken down to Port Hope, pleaded guilty yesterday and was sent up to the county judge at Cobourg for trial.

A team of horses took fright yesterday on Brock street, and ran away. They were caught in the north end of the town. No damage was done.

When our own Jimmy stepped on board the ship of state in Toronto yesterday he pulled in the gang-plank after him and headed the vessel for safety harbor.

If you notice the town tip up a little this evening, do not be alarmed. It is only "The People's Jimmy" stepping off the train after being sworn in as a minister of the crown.

Our local boiler plate contemporaries evidently get their "special despatches from the seat of war" at the same shop in Toronto that their boiler plate news is manufactured.

"Three hundred Boers killed," was the startling heading of a local evening contemporary. The despatch should have been dated at Matthews' packing house instead of Toronto. The despatch then would have been nearer the truth.

The Times have arranged for full telegraphic despatches similar to the Toronto papers. They will be the regular Associated Press despatches, and therefore genuine.

From the 57th.

The following members of the 57th Battalion have volunteered to go to South Africa : Srgt W Muncrieff, Srgt J W Edwards, Srgt D Spence, Srgt A H Trussler, Srgt A Ringer and Ptes E C Walton, S Newell, Thos Newell, D Evans, J Heslop and W D Metheral and Pte Holt. The names were forwarded by Col Bell to the D. O. C at Kingston for acceptance and medical inspection.

BETHANY.

From Our Own Correspondent.

The war in South Africa is the principal topic. Some of our young men are anxious to go and assist Old England and should they be selected, will give a good account of themselves.

A. M. Andrews, photographer, has opened a gallery in our village and is prepared to attend to all who may want anything in this line.

Mr. Sam McKinnon, who resided upon a farm about a couple of miles from here, while in the village heard "so it is said" that the "Boars" had crossed the border, and doubtless thinking that Bethany was exposed to attack, rushed home and gathering up his worldly goods, took his wife and little ones and, by the light of the moon, made his escape. When last seen he was still going north.

A very few people took in the Midland Excursion. A great many would have gone had the tickets been good for 5 or 6 days, but probably the G. T. R. knows its own business best.

Our Methodist friends intend having an entertainment on Friday evening, the 20th inst. A good programme will in all probability be presented.

Mr. Harry Ryley is buying up a great quantity of turkeys for the English market.

THE CABINET SHUFFLE.

ada than that of Prime Minister of its first Province—a Province possessing nearly one-half of the population of the entire Dominion, and whose supremacy is even more marked if regard be had to intelligence, wealth and enterprise of its people ; and did my health permit I should continue to fill the position until the people at the polls should indicate that some other person is their choice.

In retiring from the Government of which I have been a member for over 22 successive years, I trust I may be permitted to express my acknowledgements to my colleagues, past and present, and to the members of the House upon both sides, for the courtesy and kindness which have always been extended to me during that long period. No man in public life could desire more consideration at the hands of honorable members than that which has been extended to me during that time, and I need hardly assure them that it is with deep regret that I am about to sever my connection with them as a public man. Warm, heated and sharp as have at times been the discussions between members of the Opposition and myself, they have always been conducted within the rules of Parliamentary debate. They have left no sting and no bitterness behind, and it is to me now, in quitting public life, a source of infinite satisfaction that I am able freely to say that of the hundreds of men who sat with me in Parliament during my 26 years of membership and my 22 years in the Government, there is not one living whom I cannot meet with pleasure and upon terms of personal friendship. In saying this I do not mean it to be understood that debates have always been conducted with entire fairness, or that improper motives have not been charged, but this is perhaps inevitable in heated political discussions, and it would doubtless be difficult to name a Legislative Assembly wholly free from these blemishes.

The Liberal party, with which I have been so long identified, was never more united than at the present time. The members who sit on the Government side of the House have never been more united in sentiment and action. During the two sessions which have been held since the last general election, when votes have been taken the majority has in every instance except one represented the maximum true Government majority, and has upon more than one occasion largely excedded it, and as to the one exception, the vote fell but one below that majority. I know of no illustration which could more adequately express the unity of Liberals in the Local Legislature, and I have every reason to believe that the representatives of the Reform party in the House fairly represent the feelings of the party throughout the Province.

As you know, I was not a wealthy man when I entered the Government. I think you know that I have grown less so during my connection with public life. I have, nevertheless, given my whole time and my best eregies to the performance of my public duties and in the promotion of the truest interests of the Province as I understood them, and I can, notwithstanding many shortcomings, look back upon my work in legislation and in almost every department of administration with at least some degree of satisfaction.

I leave my record with you, not as being beyond criticism, but upon the whole as one which I may fairly claim bears evidence that I have sought with zeal and with some energy to promote the growth, progress and development of my native Province during a much longer and more active term of public life than usually falls to the lot of public men in Canada. I have the honor to be your very obedient and humble servant,

ARTHUR. S. HARDY.

BRITISH TROOPS SCORE A GREAT VICTORY!

Boers Attack Glencoe Camp With Over Nine Thousand Men, But Are Driven Back, and All Their Guns Taken.

DUBLIN FUSILIERS DISTINGUISH THEMSELVES.

Desperate Hand-to-Hand Fighting. General Symonds Seriously Wounded. British Channel Squadron Ordered to Proceed to Gibraltar. War Correspondents Are Captured.

London, Oct. 20.—A special despatch from Glencoe, dated 8.25 this morning announced that the Boer position had been captured after heavy fighting during which five guns were taken. Later, an official message was received from Glencoe, time 7.40 this morning, saying the fighting was still proceeding there, and announcing that the Boers strength was about 9,000 men. The Boers, it appears, posted guns on a hill overlooking the town opened fire on the camp, and the battle became general. The War Office, during the morning received a reprto that General Symons was wounded in the engagement at Glencoe.

New York, Oct. 20.—A special to the Journal from Ladysmith, says that seven thousand Boers, with 12 guns, attacked the camp at Glencoe this morning, and were repulsed with heavy loss. Artillery firing became furious at dawn. The Boer's guns were badly served, while the British fire was true and deadly!

The Boer batteries were silenced at 8 o'clock, when the British troops charged their entrenchments. They went over the banks with a rush and a cheer. Desperate hand-to-hand fighting ensued, the Boers finally retreated in a panic. The British secured five of their cannon.

The Boer column crept around the rear of the British and began the attack. They were manoeuvering to wedge between British forces here and at Glencoe. Boers after the first repulse returned to the attack, and pressed the British hard.

Commandant Viljoen is in charge of the Boer artillery. The British force numbers about 4,000.

The Royal Dublin Fusiliers captured the guns, and greatly distinguished themselves in the battle.

London, Oct. 20.—The news from Glencoe caused a scene of wild enthusiasm on the stock exchange and Kaffirs rose tremendously.

Ladysmith, Oct. 20.—At 5.30 this morning a despatch was received from General Simons announcing that the Boers were shelling Glencoe Camp with big guns, and that the troops were moving out to attack them.

Ladysmith, Oct. 20, 9.20 a.m.—An unconfirmed report has been received here that the Boer artillery is shelling Dundee.

Ladysmith, Oct. 20.—A despatch from Glencoe says that a Boer gun has been captured and that the Devonshire and Dorsetshire regiments are now engaging the Boers.

London, Oct. 20.—A Cape Town despatch says—As far as known the situation at Mafeking and Kimberley is unchanged. No news has been received of Col. Plumer's relief force, started from Fort Tuli for Mafeking.

London, Oct. 20.—A despatch from Glencoe camp says that Sir William Symons was wounded in the stomach and that General Yule has assumed command.

London, Oct. 20.—The British Channel squadron has been ordered to proceed to Gibraltar next Tuesday.

London, Oct. 20.—A Cape Town despatch states that there is a rumour that the garrison of Glencoe tried to cut its way out to rejoin the main force at Ladysmith, and that in the battle that ensued there was great slaughter on both sides.

A decisive struggle is hourly expected at Ladysmith. The British and Boer scouts are constantly coming into collision, and the British outposts on the west of the town have been forced to yield ground.

London, Oct. 20.—Cape Town advices says the plans of the Boer commanders are gradually unfolding. They evidently intend to isolate as many British detachments as possible, cut off the supplies of water and provisions, then fall on them with a superior force and attempt their annihilation. They are carefully fortifying their line of retreat.

In Natal the Boer plan seems to be, while threatening Ladysmith from Van Reenen's Pass and other points with a strong force to cut communication between it and Dundee and carry the latter position by attack from all sides before assistance can arrive.

The obvious course then would be to push rapidly on to Greytown, on the direct road to Pietermaritzburg, threatening the communications of the force at Ladysmith, which might have either to accept a battle at a dangerous disadvantage or fall back to preserve its communication with the sea.

BOERS ON THE MOVE.

London, Oct. 20.—The War Office also received the following despatch dated yesterday evening from Ladysmith:

"The Boers commenced descending the western passes on Tuesday and came in contact with our patrols yesterday. They continued to advance, halting for the night with their left flank at Bester's Station, their centre at Bluebank and their right more retired.

"At Acton Homes, Lieut. Gallwey, of the Natal carbineers is missing, and Trooper Spencer, of the Natal carbineers, was slightly wounded.

"I moved my camp into a position I have selected, with the object of covering the town of Ladysmith, and I hoped to-day that the Boers might have been sufficiently near to me to strike a blow. To-day, however, the enemy seems to have retired west, our patrols getting in touch nowhere, except with a comparatively small body at Bester's Station.

Communication with Glencoe Junction was cut off at Elandslaagte, where they captured a goods train. A Boer force is advancing over Beggarsberg Nek. Communication by telegraph is still open via Greytown."

CORRESPONDENTS CAPTURED.

London, Oct. 20.—The correspondent of the Morning Post at Ladysmith, in a despatch sent Thursday night, confirms the statement that a train had been captured at Elandslaagte, and said:—

"The train was partly made up of four trucks of cattle consigned to an army purveyor at Dundee.

"It is reported that one British officer and Mr. Mitchell, the Johannesburg Star war correspondent, besides other war correspondents were captured. The train which preceded the captured train was fired on, but the Boer attack was not successful. I am informed that there are four trucks of stores at Elandslaagte station. The place is full of rumours of fighting, but there is nothing definite. There are said to be 4,000 Boers with a heavy wagon train, encamped near Acton Homes."

COULD NOT DRAW BOERS ON.

Glencoe Camp, Oct. 18,—Night.—Delayed in transmission—Airport reached camp to-day that the Boers had been sighted seven miles out. A squadron of the 18th Hussars, under command of Major Laming rode out and the advanced officers' patrol, under Lieut. Cape, on reaching the brow of a hill beyond Hattingspruit station, discovered a strong advance party of the Boers. The Hussars retired on the main body, which in the meantime had been well handled, by being removed under cover, and made ready to open fire had the Boers continued their advance. The wily enemy were not to be drawn on. In fact, having met men who were their equals, if not their superiors, in swift tactical movements, they, after delivering their fire, hesitated, apparently staggered at their poor success with the rifle, and perceiving that the Hussars had manoeuvred out of range, they turned quickly and retired. The failing light alone prevented the Hussars from following up their advantage, and the enemy failing to make a further advance. The Hussars returned to camp.

AN OFFICIAL ACCOUNT.

London, Oct. 20.—The War Office has received the following official despatch from Ladysmith, filed at half-past three this afternoon:—

"This from Glencoe: We were attacked this morning at daylight by a force roughly estimated at 4,000. They had placed four or five guns in position on a hill, 5,400 yards east of our camp, and they fired plugged shells. Their artillery did no damage.

"Our infantry formed for attack, and we got our guns into position. After the position of the enemy had been shelled, our infantry advanced to the attack, and after a hard fight, lasting until 1.30 p.m., an almost inaccessible position was taken, the enemy retiring eastward. All the Boer guns have been captured. We can see our soldiers at the top of the hill. Our cavalry and artillery are still out. General Symons is severely wounded. Our losses are heavy. They will be telegraph as soon as possible."

GOLD CAPTURED.

Cape Town, Oct. 20.—Nearly one million dollars in gold, which was landed here to-day from England for the Transvaal, were seized by the British authorities.

BRITONS PROUD OF THEIR ARMY

The Mobilization Arrangements Arrangements Have Worked Like a Charm, and the Army Corps is Ready to Move.

London, Oct. 20.—Another proof of the magnitude of the war in addition to the estimate of £10,000,000 required for military purposes, is the proclamation calling a portion of the militia into service for replenishing garrisons. There is nothing unusual in this course, since an organized force of 130,000 militia was brought into use in the Soudan campaign in 1885, in the Crimean and in other crises. It is not unlikely that the Mediterranean and other garrisons may be reinforced by militia levies.

Mobilization of half the reserves is virtually completed, and the muster is satisfactory in every respect. The military system has worked like well oiled machinery. The army corps is ready to move, andw ill start to-morrow to go on steadily. If the Admiralty has arranged the transport service as well as the War Office has done its work, no cause of complaint can be found.

British military pride is rising everywhere with the evidence that the reserves have made a brilliant muster and that there are no signs of official mismanagement in any quarter.

The supplementary army estimate asks the House of Commons to vote an additional 35,000 men and £10,000,000 in consequence of the situation in South Africa. It is explained that the 35,000 men represent the probable maximum excess beyond the establishment fixed for the year 1899-1900, and is in consequence of the calling out of the reserves, and of the temporary transfer of troops from the Indian to the British establishment. With the additional £10,000,000, the total army estimates are £30,617,200.

The militia consists of thirty-two regiments of artillery, fourteen companies of engineers, 126 battalions of infantry and six companies of medical staff, with 129,752 officers and men.

MORE TRANSPORTS TAKEN.

Boston, Mass. Oct. 20.—The announcement is made here that the British Government has chartered the Dominion Line steamer Englishman for use in transporting supplies to South Africa. The Englishman has made but two trips to this port. It is expected that the steamer Canada, of the same line, will be chartered also.

New York, Oct. 19.—The steamer Maine, which has been lent without charge to the British Government by the Atlantic Transport Company, left Philadelphia on October 18th. On her arrival in London she will be fitted up as a hospital ship.

The Maine is a steel, three-masted single-screw vessel, built by William Gray & Co., of West Hartlepool, Eng., and launched in July, 1887. She is 335 feet in length, fifty feet beam and more than twenty feet deep. She has three decks, and her gross register is [illegible] tons, the net register being 1812 tons. Below she is divided into six water-tight compartments. The Maine has been employed as a carrier of cattle and other freight. She is commanded by Captain [illegible], and has a crew of forty men. When refitted she will accommodate about [illegible] patients in the hospital quarters.

ANOTHER DREYFUS VICTIM.

Colonel Schneider Dies From Wounds Received in a Recent Duel—He Fought With Captain Cuignet.

Vienna, Oct. 19.—Colonel Schneider, the former Austria military attache at Paris, whose name hvs been prominently connected with the alleged treason of former Captain Alfred Dreyfus of the French army, and who, it is generally understood, fought a duel about October 13 with Captain Cuignet of the French army as a result of statements made by the captain at the Rennes court-martial is dead.

A despatch from Paris, Oct. 13, said that Col. Schneider was seen being carried to a train accompanied by physicians and with blood flowing from a wound in his side. The colonel is reported to have said: "I recently returned from Switzerland to fight a duel with Captain Cuignet on account of his evidence regarding me before the Rennes court-martial."

While testifying at the court-martial Captain Cuignet referred to a despatch of Col. Schneider denouncing as a forgery a letter said to have been written by the colonel. Captain Cuignet ridiculed this allegation of forgery and declared that the French General staff was in a position to prove beyond dispute the authenticity of the letter. The captain added: "He must know that his letter is not the only one of his communications now in our hand."

Canadian Novelist Dying.

Kingston, Oct. 20.—Grant Allen, the novelist, is in a dying condition. He is the son of Rev. J.A. Allen of this place.

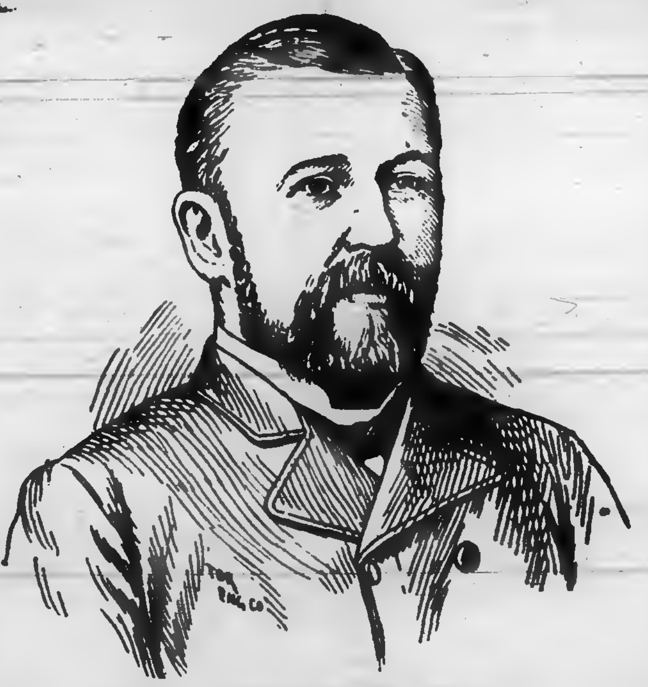
Rough Voyage of Empress.

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 20.—The steamer Empress of India, which has reached here from Japan, has completed the roughest trip of her forty-three voyages. The second day out from Yokohama she encountered a typhoon, which destroyed communication between the engine-room and bridges and destroyed some of the boats. The storm continued unabated all day and all night.

Fears are expressed by officers for the transport steamer Senator, carrying home the Fifty-first Iowa. She left Yokohama for San Francisco eight hours before the Empress, and, having immense upper works, would fare badly in a gale.

Tragedy At Sea.

Santa Cruz de Teneriffe, Oct. 19.—The brig Gulena Schlosser recently arrived here on her way to Brazil, and reported that during the voyage the helmsman had murdered the captain the captain's wife, and mate. The Brazilian Consul asked assistance from the authorities, and the Spanish cruiser Infanta Isabel sent several boats' crews to the brig. They were fired on by the brig's crew, and the marines replied finally boarding the ship. Eleven seamen then jumped overboard, but were rescued by the cruiser's boats, and are now imprisoned. The helmsman committed suicide. Another murdered man was found on board.



HON. J. R. STRATTON, PROVINCIAL SECRETARY.

To-day Peterboro' receives the honor of having its representative, in the person of Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P.P. sworn in as Provincial Secretary of the Province of Ontario. Peterborough has seldom had so widespread and satisfactory advertisement of its importance and advantages as a commercial and industrial centre as that implied in the prominent part taken by Mr. Stratton in financial affairs, and now this advantage is capped by the prominence given the town through him in his appointment as a Cabinet Minister.

The Times has long done business with Mr. Stratton, and although from the nature of things our business interests have been directly in opposition, it is a pleasure to be able to say that these relations have been harmonious and satisfactory. On personal grounds our relations with Mr. Stratton suggest congratulation on his promotion. Both were brough up in the same town, we played in the same back yard, stole apples from the same tree, and it is a pleasure to see the playmate of one's boyhood, by virtue of fine business qualities, energy of character, and fruitful service to his town and county, advanced to the position of Cabinet Minister. Although we cannot be expected to approve in detail of all that Mr. Stratton has done, and will do, we can say that on general grounds fidelity to his party—fidelity to his constituents, and the possession of rare executive and administrative ability—he has deserved the position, and we will use our influence to give him a fair trial as Provincial Secretary.

Of course, according to constitutional practice, Mr. Stratton will come back for re-election, and when the time comes we hope the Opposition will not be foolish enough to put up a candidate, but will gracefully acknowledge the honor that has been paid to the town, by allowing the formal matter of his re-election to go by acclamation.

We believe that Peterborough sympathises with Mr. Stratton's success, and will not throw down a young man, who by dint of good work as a public man, and a representative has climbed to a position of prominence. There is no doubt of his re-election, hence a contest will be only vanity and vexation of spirit to his opponent and a useless and unnecessary expense.

CHAMBERLAIN ANSWERS FOES

A Telling Speech in Support of His African Policy—To Give Protection to British Subjects—Interference Not Tolerated.

London, Oct. 20.—Expectation was on tip-toe yesterday to hear the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain reply to the criticisms of his Liberal opponents on his Transvaal policy. The House was packed, both floor and galleries, and the Secretary of State for the Colonies was loudly cheered upon rising. The statements of the Opposition, he began, were calculated to encourage Kruger's resistance and to embarass the Government in most difficult and critical functions.

Referring to Mr. Stanhope's demand on the previous day that he should produce the letter he had written to Mr. Hawkesly, he said he would gladly do this if it were demanded by Sir William Vernon Harcourt and Mr. John Morley, who were on the South African committee.

The Speaker objected.

Mr. Chamberlain replied that it was impossible adequately to describe the accusation that he and Sir Alfred Milner had fermented war. The Government welcomed all honest and honorable criticism of their policy, and he wished he could apply these epithets to Mr. Stanhope.

Mr. Stanhope protested, the Speaker ruled the language out of order and Mr. Chamberlain withdrew his words out of deference to the Speaker. Then he proceeded to say that if Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman or Sir William Vernon Harcourt desired to see the letter he would produce it with the greatest pleasure, as they were honorable members and honorable men.

Mr. Stanhope again leaped to his feet and called upon the Speaker to intervene. The Speaker rejoined that he did not think what the Colonial Secretary had said imputed dishonorable conduct to the member for Burnley.

Dealing with the South African League Mr. Chamberlain said that he was not acquainted with a single member, and so far was he from being associated with Cecil Rhodes that since the Jameson raid he had no communication, direct or indirect, with him on any subject connected with South African policy.

Passing to the general question of the Government's course in South Africa, he said that, in the light of recent events and the utterances of Kruger, he had been forced to the conclusion that war had always been inevitable. While striving for peace he had always been determined on securing justice for the British people of South Africa and on maintaining the paramount position of Great Britain. To maintain that position the nation was bound to show that it was willing and able to protect British subjects wherever they suffered injustice and oppression. The peace of South Africa, he declared, depended on Britain accepting responsibility in the Transvaal. He denied that racial animosity in South Africa had been created by the action of the Government, and declared that it existed before the Government interfered and was based on contempt.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman interposed the remark that it would be increased a hundredfold by hostilities.

Mr. Chamberlain replied that he would rather have hatred than contempt, and added that there would never be peace until the two races learned to respect each other.

Referring to the treatment oft he natives by the Boers, Mr. Chamberlain said that the latter "trekked" because ethey wanted to "wallop" the niggers.

Mr. John Dillon shouted—"That is not true." He was called to order, and stated that he did not impute falsehood to Mr. Chamberlain.

Continuing the speaker declared that the Government had a suspicion amounting to knowledge that the mission of Dr. Leyds was one continual series of negotiations, with the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. They had given the Transvaal an assurance that Britain would never interfere again if the five years' franchise were granted but their promise had been tantamount to that so long as oppression ceased. He believed that influential advisers—he did not mean foreign powers—had induced the Transvaal to withdraw this offer. The last proposals of the Government, he said, were buried and were not likely to be resurrected.

In conclusion he said—"In their endeavor to maintain peace the Government have shown endless patience. It was President Kruger who settled the issue. He appealed to the God of battles. If I may do so with reverence, I say we accept that appeal, believing our quarrel just.

Sir Edward Clarke, Conservative member for Plymouth, spoke next, expressing the opinion thatt he Government had blundered, that Kruger had been for peace and that the war was a crime against civilization.

Mr. Morley and Mr. Balfour followed, and after some sharp debate Mr. Stanhope's amendment to the address, "disapproving of the conduct of the negotiations with the Transvaal," was rejected by a vote of 362 to 135.

Burned to Death.

Godrich Oct. 19.—Nina, daughter of Albert and Emma Goldthrope, of Colborne was burned to death. The accident is supposed to have been caused by a four-year-old boy climbing on to a chair, taking a match out of a coat pocket, and striking it near the window curtains, and that when ignited it fired the curtains. After the curtains had burned upwards they are supposed to have fallen, while on fire, on the child.

G. T. R. Employes Exculpated.

Guelph, Oct. 19.—At the assizes today Oliver Henry brought action against the G T R for falling off a train and having the muscles of his arm torn. There was no evidence to show that the G. T. R. authorities were to blame, as the trainmen on the spur line were bothered with boys riding on it, and ordered them off on every occasion. His Lordship took the case from the jury. Mr Osler, Q.C., who appeared for the G. T. R., stating that he did not ask for cost. Mr J. E. Day for plaintiff.

WEST PETERBOROUGH.

Will the Tories Put Up a Candidate?

THE TIMES THINKS NOT.

It Would be a Wise Thing to Give the Seat to Mr. Stratton.

Besides, What is to be Gained by a Fight?—A Section of the Conservative Party Want to Put Up a Candidate, But Others Do Not—Party Leaders Should be Consulted

Now that Mr. Stratton has become a Cabinet minister, the question which concerns the local Conservatives is whether or not they will oppose his return. It is said that some of the party leaders are in favor of letting Mr. Stratton in by acclamation, and others again think that, in view of what has developed at the elect-trials, a strong fight should be made to redeem the riding. Mr. Stratton himself, hopes that he will not be, put to the expense and worry of an other election campaign.

So far as the Times can see, it is of opinion that Mr. Stratton's election will be made unanimous. He is in a position now to do a great deal for the riding, and his well known desire to serve his constituents will have practical results if he is afforded further opportunity. As Provincial Secretary Mr. Stratton will have considerable patronage to dispose of which will induce his friends to put up a better fight for him than ever before.

So far as the local Conservatives forces are concerned, the great difficulty is to procure a candidate who has the money, the prestige, and the ability necessary to oppose Mr. Stratton with any hope of success. No doubt there are men who would take chances for the sake of the patronage which would be theirs, should the Conservatives accede to power, and not with any hope of carrying the riding. This sort of thing, the Times thinks, should be discountenanced.

It is said that certain leaders of the party, are consulting with Mr. Whitney. Mr. Leavitt, the Conservative organizer, was in town yesterday, no doubt looking over the situation, and told the Times that a difference of opinion exists as to what course to pursue.

Looking at it from a perfectly neutral standpoint, we believe the proper course would be to re-elect Mr. Stratton by acclamation.

MODUS VIVENDI SETTLED.

British Foreign Office Approves of the Last American Proposition.

Washington, Oct. 20.—Secretary Hay has received notice from the British Embassy of the approval by the British Foreign Office of his last proposition relative to the Alaskan boundary modus vivendi. The formal confirmation of the arrangemen will take place to-day.

In the Philippines.

Manila, Oct. 20.—General Young's advance guard of General Lawton's column left Cabiao yesterday morning, and entered San Isidro at half-past one o'clock. The American loss was one killed and three wounded. General Pio del Pilar personally commanded the Filipinos. He and the bulk of the enemy retreated up the river. One Spaniard and fifteen insurgents were captured. The loss of the enemy is not known. The townspeople appear to be friendly.

Rioting in Burmah.

Rangoon British Burmah, Oct. 20.—Serious riots have broken out in the lower Chidwin district of Burmah. A number of Sepoys of the Karen military police, who had been prohibited from attending a Burmese theatre, broke bounds on Saturday, entered the theatre and attacked a number of English officers, severely wounding four. The Sepoys are dissatisfied with their long detention in the cholera district. Other outbreaks are reported.

Train Broke in Two.

Beeton, Oct. 20.—The mail train on the Collingwood branch of the G T R broke in two sections last evening when on a down grade. The after portion crashed into the first section, knocking the express messenger from one end of his car to the other, breaking three ribs. Others on the train received a severe shock. The auxiliary was called from Allandale.

Position in Venezuela

Caracas, Venezuela, Oct. 20.—The crisis is virtually over. General Andrade, the President, has accepted the conditions proposed by the insurgent commander, General Cipriano Castro, and will go abroad, the Presidency devolving upon the Vice-President. General Castro will enter Caracas peacefully to-morrow, thus avoiding bloodshed.

Hats for Fall

The shapes of hats this fall are a little more graceful, and the colors a little more beatuiful than they have ever been.

Particular men will find our Special Stiff Hat the acme of style, and our "Fedora" shape very graceful and becoming. An air of advanced season distinguishes them.

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 18, 1899

WAR AND BUSINESS.

The Kruger government of the Boers has percipitated war with England by presenting an ultimatum known to be impossible of acceptance and requiring practically an immediate answer. This act of the Kruger government is a plain declaration to the world that war with England has been determined upon, and the responsibility for percipitating actual hostilities is clearly upon the Boers.

The demands made by England for the protection of English residents and English property were not only reasonable and just, butt hey were in accord with the solemn pledges of the Transvaal Government. They have profited immeasurably by English residents; their rulers and prominent leaders have been enriched solely by English development, and they now seet hat the continued growth of English civilization must gradually liberalize the Boer methods and end the distinctive and arbitrary rule of that class. Being fanatical in their devotion to religion, they believe that any civilization in conflict with their own must be at war with their religion, and they have not only invited but deliberately provoked a conflict that must end in their overthrow, and South Africa will be all the better when it shall have been accomplished.

All wars produce more or less convulsion in business conditions, and the prospective war between the English and the Boers has somewhat disturbed financial circles during the last month or more; but those who assume that the precipitation of actual hostilities will create additional disturbance in our business conditions are entirely mistaken. The Anglo-Boer war has been fully discounted on the stock boards and in business circles generally, and the larger the proportions the war may assume the larger will be the substantial profits.

The British resources are inexhaustible, and her credit cannot be in the slightest measure impaired by the expenditure of several hundred millions in the South African war. The products of this country will be largely drawn upon by England to sustain the war. The fact that England is required to enlarge her war footing must also quicken other European governments to keep abreast with it. Looking at the Anglo-Boer war from a purely business standpoint, therefore, it is entirely safe to assume that it will not in any degree hinder but must greatly benefit the business of this country, as extraordinary expenditure is always productive of quickened business operations, and not only England but Canada will have their business conditions steadily improved by the additional outlay necessitated by the war.

The British Government well understands the task it is compelled to undertake in fighting for the overthrow of the Boer mastery in the Transvaal. The war is not likely to be a short one, as the Boers will fight desperately and are well trained as soldiers, but the mountain riflemen, deadly as is their aim, will not decide the battles of modern warfare. In a gurilla fight the Boers would defeat an equal number of British infantry, but the perfected artillery of modern warfare will now usually decide battles before infantry can be brought to close quarters, and the mountain fastnesses which under ordinary conditions could be held by the Boers with a small number of men, can be shelled out from a point miles beyond the reach of the Transvaal riflemen. It is likely to be a war a year or more, as Britain cannot afford to end it by a treaty with a government that has violated every pledge of justice to English residends and English property.

THE PROTESTANT HOME

Annual Meeting and Presentation of Reports

In presenting the annual report of the P. P. Home we would give thanks to God for his care and protection during the past year. We have been enabled to give comfort and shelter to a large number of persons who would otherwise have been totally unprovided for, and to render assistance to many more outside the Home in times of trouble or adversity. At the beginning of the year there were 22 inmates, and during the year 8 were admitted. Of these 7 have died, 4 have found homes with friends, one found work for the summer and one was discharged. Of those who have died all but one were old people, and the deaths resulted from old age or la grippe. One had been an inmate for twenty years, and had reached the age of ninety years. Scarcely any of the inmates pay even the small sum ($2 a week) asked by the management, but in a number of cases smaller or irregular amounts are given. The Home has been filled almost all the time, and unfortunately the committee has been compelled to refuse a number of applications for admission on account of lack of accomodation. Nearly all the inmates are from the town, and only two are from outside the county. The matron—Miss Lounderville—has attended most faithfully to her duties. We are under a great obligation to the clergymen and the physicians of the town for their kindness in so willingly assisting at all times. There continues to be frequent complaints of the sending to goal of old people whose only crime is their poverty, but it is impossible for the Home to provide for all the Protestants poor of the town. We can only hope that the town and county authorities will soon some find means of remedying this long standing evil. We wish to thank all those who have so kindly contributed to the comfort of the old people, and the committee would be very glad if more ladies would take an active part in the work of the Home. In conclusion we wish to thank the editors of the papers for their frequent kindness in inerting gratuitously the notices of our work and wants, and also the auditors, Mr. W. W. Johnson and Mr. W. Bennett.

M. A. Miller, Secretary.

The officers chosen for the year were as follows:

President—Mrs. Vernon.
First Vice-President—Mrs. Hall.
Second Vice-President—Mrs. J. B. McWilliams.
Treasurer—Miss Roger.
Assistant-Treasurer—Mrs. Walter Roger Secretary—Mrs. W. S. Miller.

ON THE TROLLEY.

The red is melting in the river,
The red is dying in the sky,
The evening star begins to quiver,
Belated birds go darting by—
Come, let us follow, follow, follow,
And find how fine it is to fly.

By pine woods where when noon was sunny,
The air with spicy balsams flowed,
By gardens full of sweets and honey
Where summer long the rose has glowed,
By weary wife and loitering lover,
Come, flash along the river road.

The forest wall across the river
Darkens within the curling tide,
The fragrant winds about us shiver,
We rock, we race, we rush, we ride,
Thrilled with the sweep of airy motion
And glad because the world is wide!

The night soars up the purple spaces,
The whirling winds divide the deep,
Strange gleams are on familiar places,
Swift lightnings underneath us leap,
As forward flying, flying, flying,
Upon the thunderbolt we sweep!

A Lady Misled By a Dealer Who Loved Long Profits.

A lady residing in a flourishing Ontario town recently wrote as follows:

"Having some faded cotton to dye, I went to one of our stores and asked for two packages of Diamond Dyes Cardinal for Cotton. The storekeeper informed me that he was out of that brand of dyes, and recommended strongly another make of package dyes. I unfortunately bought the recommended dyes and carried them home. I used them as directed on the package, but the work was not fit to look at, the color being of a bricky red instead of cardinal. I was obliged to wash the goods so as to get rid of the awful color, and afterward re-dye with the Diamond Dyes, which I procured at another store. I have used Diamond Dyes without a single failure for many years, and will never accept a substitute from any merchant. The Diamond Dyes are true to promise every time."

MEN CURED FREE.

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness, such as impotency, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The Doctor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt giving the various ingredients to be used so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the receipt free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L. W. Knapp, M.D. 1011 Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer, and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

Knew When to Quit

"I suppose you made your money through your holdings in stock."

"Well," said the financier, "they had something to do with it, but the really important considerations weren't my holdings so much as my let goings."—Washington Star.

A Sudden Start.

"You used to go to school with Coppers the new millionaire, didn't you?"

"I did. Fact is, I gave him his first start in life."

"How?"

"With a bent pin."

THE FASHION PLATE.

Straight, full skirts continue to be used in making up sheer transparent summer textiles for slender waists.

The new corded taffeta silks in a great variety of summer colorings and effects are in favor for making up dressy shirt waists.

The black and white striped fabrics in silk or silk and wool effects, which impart length and slenderness to the figure, are uncommonly handsome and varied in design this year.

The pretty Tudor sleeve, cut off at the top and finished above the deep upward point with a small gathered cap of fabric matching the yoke or guimpe, is a model used on costumes and toilets of every sort.

On many of the costumes of foulard, figured taffeta or surah, drap de chine, drap d'ete, summer costume cloth, etc., the waist is belted at the back and on the sides, but in front is in jacket style, with tabbed ends falling below the waist line.

One of the most graceful summer models for a rather full figure, to use in making up organdie muslin, dimity, batiste and similar goods, is the new seven gored model, with a pretty demitrain, to be made up separately over a foundation skirt of exactly the same shape.

Skirts with closings at the side instead of at the back are now the most favored. If so arranged, the round waist or basque bodice can be permanently fastened to the skirt at the back, thus avoiding the time and trouble necessarily given to a waist and skirt differently laced or hooked.

White veiling or barege may be as elaborately trimmed as a white organdie. It will have as cool an effect, be nearly as comfortable on a hot day as cotton, and during a sudden change in the temperature the light wool gown will give the needed protection.

CURTAIN RAISERS.

Kyrle Bellew denies the rumor that he is coming to the United States with Henry Irving.

Rose Coghlan, who plays in "Mlle. Fifi," has patented a sunshade for use at the seashore.

A dramatization of "The Hidden Hand," by Mrs. Southworth, was recently produced in Chicago.

Digby Bell is to be seen in "Arizona." Next season he will be in one of Charles Frohman's companies.

Phoebe Davies has a belt made from Mauser shells found on dead Spaniards after the fight on San Juan hill.

Since Calve has her tombstone and Sarah Bernhardt her coffin, why do not certain would be players go and bury themselves?

At the Filipino theaters of Manila it is the custom to show appreciation by tossing coins on the stage in lieu of bouquets.

The German emperor's play, "Eisenzahn," means "The Iron Tooth," and, with his imperial pull, it should draw well.

Venie Bennett, sister to the late Alice Atherton and widow of the comedian John A. Mackey, will appear in the vaudeville theaters.

As an instance of how the romantic drama has revived abroad, no less than six companies are touring England with "The King's Musketeer."

It is stated that Reginald De Koven has received about $75,000 from "Robin Hood." Barrie will probably take $100,000 or more from "The Little Minister."

Aubrey Boucicault, who plays the husband in "Mlle. Fifi," is said to have inherited some of his father's talent as a playwright and is now finishing two plays which may be produced next season.

RECENT INVENTIONS.

A folding stepladder has recently come into use in which the legs and step supports are hinged at the center to close up when not in use, allowing the ladder to be stored in about half the space of the old ladder.

A carving knife sharpener and fork guard are combined in a Pennsylvanian's patent, the upper portion of the guard having two disks carried on spindles to rotate as the edge of the knife is drawn between them.

In a new bicycle tire the resiliency is obtained by hollowing the face of the rim deeply and stretching a strip of fabric across the face, with a ring of rubber or other flexible material suspended in the center of the fabric.

A pneumatic axle bearing for vehicles has been patented to take the place of inflated tires on road wagons, being less liable to puncture, the weight being carried by pneumatic rings placed inside drums surrounding the axle.

THE BOOKMAKERS.

Margaret Deland says she reads economics, history and the newspapers for instruction and novels only for entertainment.

R. W. Chambers, when not writing books, gives his time to many fads. He collects butterflies, designs uniforms and keeps up his painting.

Max Pemberton, the author, is also a good business man and combines with his literary labors the London agency for an American publishing house. His home in West Hampstead is an ideal place.

Dr. Conan Doyle, it is reported, intends to contest a seat in parliament. Meanwhile he is turning into a playwright. He has just brought out a play (a domestic drama called "Halves") in Scotland and is about to produce another.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

A CLEVER RUSE.

The Auctioneer Was Quick Witted and Finally Made a Sale.

An auctioneer on East Washington street—one of those redoubtable individuals commonly termed "slick"—was the cause of a farcical scene recently that would have done credit to a burlesque show. He had been talking industriously for a long time to a crowd of interested but enthusiastic listeners.

The affable auctioneer conscientiously went through his repertory from beginning to end, but somehow the crowd did not "warm up to him—to quote his own language. Finally, with a dark look that bordered on despair, he grabbed up a well known pasteboard hatbox containing about 50 spools of silk thread of different colors. With the grace of a conjurer he extracted five of the spools, and, arraying them in a tempting semicircle on the counter, announced that they were "to go at any price."

But the audience, while admitting with nods of approval that they were good spools of thread, displayed no marked inclination to become excited over them. Not a bid was offered.

"I'll sell 'em for 10 cents," suggested the auctioneer timidly. It was plain from the tone of his voice that he was losing faith in himself and in all the world. There were no takers. The man of the red flag added three more spools to the semicircle. "All for 10 cents," he declared. But thread stock was far below par. The auctioneer caught up all the spools from the counter and flung them into the box with an impressive gesture. The light of inspiration flashed from his eyes.

"The whole blamed box for 10 cents!" he cried.

"I'll take it," was the prompt response, and a little man in a washed out overcoat and wearer of red chin whiskers stepped out from the crowd with a dirty 10 cent piece in his upraised hand. The auctioneer clutched the money feverishly, and, turning the box upside down so that all the spools dropped into a basket on the counter, he handed the worthless piece of ancient pasteboard to the anxious customer. A roar of hilarious laughter rose from the crowd that was heard throughout that neighborhood.

"I don't want your blamed old box!" wailed the unfortunate purchaser.

"You said you'd take it," replied the auctioneer. "I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came in a strong chorus from the delighted audience.

"I bought the spools!"

"No, you didn't! You bought the box! I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came the answer again, stronger than ever. The red whiskered man stalked indignantly from the place with the box under his arm.

"What you going to do with it?" yelled the crowd.

"That's what!" cried the speculator as he held the pasteboard box in both hands, football fashion, and kicked it vigorously into the middle of Washington street.

SPEECHES IN PARLIAMENT

And Some Little Criticism of the Government's Policy.

Splendid Offers Assistance From the Colonies Referred to in Parliament—England Must be Supreme—An Amendment Moved by Dillon Snowed Under.

London, Oct. 18.—In the Commons yesterday afternoon Sir Alex F A Hood, moving the address in reply to the speech from the throne, referred to the "splendid offers of assistance made by the colonies." The Liberal leader, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, said:

"The demands made by the Government of the South African Republic were such as to make it impossible for the Government of any self-respecting country even to take them into consideration Actual hostilities have commenced and an act of aggression has been committed which it is the plain duty of our Ministers, of Parliament and of the people to resist. There will be no disposition on the part of this House to place any obstacle in the way of granting such supplies and such powers to the Crown as may be necessary to secure the rapid and effective prosecution of a war commenced to vindicate our rights. The campaign should be vigorously and promptly prosecuted, and nothing necessary for that purpose should be refused by the House of Commons.

ENGLAND TO BE SUPREME.

"Our natural position in South Africa has placed upon us the duty of seeing any impediment to our own supremacy removed. On that we are all agreed. I have no intention of entering upon a minute or detailed criticism of the steps taken by the Government. The time for that has not yet come, and it is proper to wait for further explanation, but, I may say, it does appear to me that the Government are engaged in a game of bluff—which is not a very worthy one for a great country like this. The raising of the suzerainty question was utterly unnecessary, and did more than anything else to remove all chance of success from the negotiation."

COLONIES TO THE FRONT.

Mr. Balfour agreed with much that the Liberal leader said, but refuted the allegation that the Government had goaded the South African Republic into war by flaunting Great Britain's suzerainty in their faces. The South African Republic made claims to being an independent sovereign state, but these were inconsistent with the conventions of 1881 and 1884. The Imperial Government did not play a game of bluff. "That means a person acting as though he held cards he does not possess; but this country holds the cards and means to play them."

Mr Balfour concluded by saying: "If war must come it has seldom been entered into by Great Britain upon an issue which was more clearly an issue of righteousness and liberty, and we have undoubted proof that our self-governing colonies beyond the seas are with us heart and soul.

AMENDMENT DEFEATED.

Mr Dillon moved an amendment that, "We humbly represent to Her Majesty that the state of war now existing between Great Britain and the South African Republic has been caused by the assertion of claims which interfere with the internal government of the Republic, in direct violation of the terms of the convention of 1884, and by the massing of large bodies of British troops on the frontier of the Republic."

The amendment, also suggesting arbitration, was seconded by Mr Labouchere, and supported by Messrs Davitt, Redmond, J P Stanhope, E H Pickersgill and others. It was defeated by a vote of 322 to 54.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algus with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 50 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist as good natured and happy now as she was when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer or somethin will be spiled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeered uv the old serpent himself I mind one thing she done once that I'll never fergit ef I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wus only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven or eight head uv fine horses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves perticklerly on, fer they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wuz yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wuzn't a funeral percession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week or ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough for me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin fer the lady in less than no time.

"The team wus feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wus a dozen or more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wuzn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wus gittin anxious, though she wuzn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 800 yards from the upper turn, and there wus no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heerd a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wus Jim a-comin lickety spit. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wus comin after us wuz like a mink after chickens Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let em go for all they wus wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wuz fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wus comin right behind us too For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wus

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wuzn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist rared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forrerd as if that would help some By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there fer a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wuz in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers

"I wus that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wus, I'm afeerd I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I wus dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wus killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hunderd pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let theselves out on a spurt that wus chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream 'Go it, John; you're all right now

"And so I wus, and so wus Mandy, fer before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wus up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wuz ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss

"Mandy wus in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it wus only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself That's the kind uv a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a [illegible] new [illegible]—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron [illegible] came from Turner's studio when the artist was already famous He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "[illegible] golden sovereigns for so much paint?"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half used tube of oil, "I'll let you have this cheap, on your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.

HIMALAYAN MOUNTAINS.

Fears For the Safety of Mr. Freshfield's Party.

Bombay, Oct. 18.—Anxiety is growing regarding the fate of Mr Douglas Freshfield, Mr Garwood, and two Swiss guides, who are ascending Kinchinjunga. Observers at Darjeeling saw a terrific avalanche sweeping the mountain after the great storm. If a similar avalanche occurred on the other side, where the ascent was made, a disaster is most probable It is impossible to receive news for three weeks.

Kinchinjunga is a most eastern peak of the Himalayas. Its altitude is 28,156 feet, or just double the height of Mont Blanc. It has never been scaled. The attempt of Mr Douglas Freshfield, former president of the Alpine Club, has attracted much attention in mountaineering circles. The famous Swiss guide, Zurbriggen, is accompanying Mr Freshfield. Mr Garwood is also a member of the Alpine Club.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. ON THE TROLLEY.

The red is melting in the river,
  The red is dying in the sky,
The evening star begins to quiver,
  Belated birds go darting by—
Come, let us follow, follow, follow,
  And find how fine it is to fly.

By pine woods where when noon was sunny,
  The air with spicy balsams flowed,
By gardens full of sweets and honey
  Where summer long the rose has glowed,
By weary wife and loitering lover,
  Come, flash along the river road.

The forest wall across the river
  Darkens within the curling tide,
The fragrant winds about us shiver,
  We rock, we race, we rush, we ride,
Thrilled with the sweep of airy motion
  And glad because the world is wide!

The night soars up the purple spaces,
  The whirling winds divide the deep,
Strange gleams are on familiar places,
  Swift lightnings underneath us leap,
As forward flying, flying, flying,
  Upon the thunderbolt we sweep!

THE TURF REVIEW.

[illegible], 2:14¼, is to be tried this year at the pace, by George Saunders, according to report.

Marion, 3, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is said to be showing a good gait and good speed this year.

It is said that Rose Croix, 2:13½ at three years, has shown a mile in 2:15 at the pace for McHenry, at Pleasanton, Cal.

Nelly R, ch. m., 2:26, by Red Cloud, although 18 years old, has never had a foal until this year. It is by Dan T, 2:08¼.

A horse with the peculiar name of Emaw, by Seesaw, dam by Independence, is to be raced this year by D. H. McGill.

All reports to the contrary notwithstanding, it is thought that Willie O. Foote will be able to be in the sulky this season.

There is a great deal of talk about Directly, 2:06¾, beating all the pacers out this year and taking a record faster than 2:00 besides.

Since the sale of Advertiser, Palo Alto farm has only three sons of Electioneer remaining in the stud, Altivo, Azmoor and Mendocino.

A race for a purse of $1,000 is projected for July 4, at Youngstown, O., with Lord Vincent, 2:16½; La Honda, 2:12¼ pacing, and Oddity, 2:10¼ pacing, among the starters.

The 3-year-old bay filly Marion, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is eligible to start in the New England $10,000 Futurity, and is likely to do so if the reports of the speed she is showing are correct.

The first new 2:30 trotter of the year is a dun gelding named Dot, breeding unknown, who took the first heat of the 2:40 race at Norfolk, Va., May 16, in 2:27¼.—Turf, Field and Farm.

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally see served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate, Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to put enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr. Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative, and no one disputed his claim, as it seemed to be the only way of recording his presence.

POLITICAL QUIPS.

The presidential bees have gathered very little honey thus far in the campaign.—Los Angeles Express.

It is coming to pass in this country that it is almost libelous for a newspaper to call a man a politician. It is the imputation that he is guilty of things criminal.—Binghamton Herald.

If Princeton wants a professor of politics in its professor of politics, she will not experiment with Grover Cleveland, but go straight to Dick Croker or Matt Quay.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

EUGENE FIELD AND TABOR.

How the Humorist Made Life a Burden For the Millionaire.

"Up to middle age the late Senator Tabor's life was one of great hardship," said a former resident of the Silver State, "and when he suddenly became fabulously rich he plunged into luxuries like a starving man wading into a banquet. One of his early freaks was the purchase of several magnificent lace nightrobes which cost $100 apiece and which he kept locked up in a safe during the day. Eugene Field was editor of the Denver Tribune at the time, and those lace nightrobes made him simply hysterical. He wrote column upon column about them, describing the garments in detail, with numerous diagrams depicting sections fore and aft. The diagrams were hideous affairs, which Field carved out himself with a penknife on the back of old wood type. He used to describe how Tabor would forget the combination of the safe and sit up, shivering and naked, half the night trying to remember the right figures.

"Altogether he kept Denver in a roar for weeks and made Tabor so wild that one day he rushed into his office, snatched the unfortunate nightrobes out of their compartment and tore them to threads. 'There, now!' he exclaimed, wiping his forehead and kicking the tattered fragments into a corner, 'I hope that fool will be satisfied. I'll be hanged if I ain't going to get a gunny sack,' he continued, 'cut some holes in the end for my head and arms, and then sleep in it for the rest of my life!'

"When Tabor was appointed to the senate to fill an unexpired term of exactly 29 days, Field broke loose again and had all kinds of fun with the old man. He declared that Tabor opposed the tariff bill on the ground that it encouraged lawlessness in the west. 'I don't know this tariff bill,' he reported the senator as saying in a speech, 'but we have entirely too many of 'em out where I live. There's Wild Bill and Pecos Bill and Billy the Kid—all no good. If you let Tariff Bill have everything to do with the custom house he is liable to steal the Atlantic ocean.' Many of the honest frontier folk took these flights of fancy seriously, and drove Tabor nearly distracted by long letters of remonstrance, urging him to read up and get posted, so as not to disgrace the state.

"At the expiration of the senator's brief term he circulated an autograph album among his fellow members, and the incident tickled Field immensely. He gave what purported to be a copy of the 'sentiments' inscribed in the volume by the different statesmen—such things as 'When this you see, remember me, Roscoe Conkling,' and 'Sure as the moss grows 'round a stump you are my darling sugar lump—I mean chump—George F. Hoar,' and similar nonsense, all of which maddened his victim.

"I think 'Gene Field was the only man Tabor never forgave, for in spite of his gaunt, forbidding exterior, the miner magnate was as tender hearted as a girl. He was really full of sterling qualities, and in his proper sphere he would have been anything but grotesque. One thing is sure—if every fellow he helped in secret would have joined his funeral procession he would have gone to his grave like an emperor of old."

THE COOKBOOK.

A nourishing dish may be made from cooked meat by stewing it very slowly in really good stock or gravy for 1½ hours.

An Italian way to give the touch of garlic to the salad is to rub a piece of bread with it and put it in the salad dish, where it lends its flavor through the dish as the salad is tossed.

Cook twice as much hominy as you want for a meal and pack what is left in a square dish. Next day cut in slices, fry in pork fat and serve with maple sirup. Rice is good fried in the same way, and children are very fond of both.

For baking, the banana should be green, but neither too green nor too ripe. It may be made most delicious by peeling and rolling in brown sugar and baking in a buttered pan in a very hot oven. It should be served around blanc mange.

A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, king of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush on this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an assistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot, when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his blood by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $50 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of indecision he drew $579 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $500. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down four aces and a five spot.

"With a look of horror and a Samoan wail of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was thus allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

Reciprocal.

"Yes, sir," remarked the amiable man, "I look to see an Englishman come over here and drop his h's once in awhile."

"Yes," answered the man who had been to Epsom [illegible] was, "and he likes [illegible] are and drop em."

The Weak Spot.

When a boiler explodes carrying death and destruction with it, every body says "Why: we thought it was strong enough: It must have had a weak spot somewhere!" When a man who has the outward appearance of being sound and strong suddenly falls a prey to disease, his friends exclaim: "why we thought he was all right: He must have had a weak spot somewhere."

The fact is, almost everybody has a weak spot somewhere. Death and disease are always looking for weak spots. If your stomach or your liver won't do its proper work, if your body fails to get its full nourishment from the food you eat, and your brain loses part of the sleep it ought to have, no matter how big your frame and muscular your limbs may be, you will give out; disease will find the weak spot, and nature will give way.

"I wish to say to the world that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has proved a great blessing to me as I firmly believe I should be in a very bad state now if I had not taken it," writes Mrs. Ellen E. Bacon, of Shutesbury, Franklin Co., Mass., in a courteous communication to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. "Prior to September 1897, I had doctored for my stomach trouble for several years, going through a course of treatment without any real benefit. In September 1896, I had very sick spells and grew worse; could eat but little. I commenced in September 1897, to take Dr. Pierce's medicine and in a short time I could eat and work. I have gained twenty pounds in two months."

This glorious "Discovery" gives the stomach and liver power to do their natural work regularly and completely. It makes healthy blood and steady nerves. It builds up the weak spots sound and strong. It is the only medicine that can be relied upon to accomplish this promptly and thoroughly.

Constipation is nine times in ten the beginning and one of the first symptoms of dangerous diseases. When this tendency is present Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets should be used in conjunction with the "Discovery."

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

A Holy Work.

The Evangelical Alliance of which Rev A B Simpson is the head, is rapidly progressing. Not only have we evidence of it in Peterborough, but almost everywhere. Recently $68,000 was raised in Carnegie Hall, New York, for the heathen Sunday. So spirited was the desire to contribute that women threw in valuable jewelry, and men coats and vests. Mr Simpson is a Presbyterian and of the Evangelical Alliance. Once a year he holds a series of meetings in New York and by emotional addresses, rouses his hearers to a high pitch, and they pile money, watches, jewelry, rich clothing and other valuables within the altar. Rev Mr Simpson is a native of Kent county, Ontario.

Arrived Safely.

Word reached town yesterday that the Gold Lake Hunting Club arrived at their destination safely. The buttermilk tank, which was hauled to the point of embarkation by a very strong pair of horses, was so much reduced in weight that it was carried over on a raft, specially constructed, with comparative ease. The first thing the party did on arriving was to drink to the success of the hunt, after which they toasted each other individually and collectively. A strong guard is placed on the tank at night, to see that it does not spring a leak. The work of constructing the house under Tom Rutherford, is progressing, each member of the party keeping an eye on the tank in the meant me.

BEYOND COMPARISON

There is Nothing in the World to Compare in Curative Value with Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets for Dyspepsia

Vegetable pepsin is the most valuable constituent in the pineapple. Barring the digestive juices of the human system, no other article or product has the power to digest all kinds of food, except vegetable pepsin. One's general health would be amazingly improved if he could eat a pineapple a day, but hardly one person in a thousand could do so because of the trouble and expense of getting them when out of season.

Dr. Von Stan's Pineapple Tablets have all the virtues of the ripe fruit—they are largely made up of the precious pineapple acid. They cure dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. Box of 60 Tablets 35 cents. Sold by Ormond & Walsh and H. S. McDonald.

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to-date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surrounding villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

GIVE HIM A BANQUET

The New Provincial Cabinet Sworn In.

HON. MR. STRATTON IS HOME

His Office Honors the Town, the Town Should Honor Him.

A Citizens' Banquet is Suggested—A Tribute of Citizens to a Citizen Who Has Always Stood By the Town—Immediate Action Should be Taken.

On Saturday morning at eleven o'clock the members of the new Ontario Cabinet formed by Hon. G. W. Ross, Premier, were sworn in, and the portfolios held are as follows:—

Hon. G. W. Ross, Premier and Provincial Treasurer.

Hon. J. M. Gibson, Attorney-General.

Hon. R. Harcourt, Minister of Education.

Hon. R. J. Davis, Commissioner of Crown Lands.

Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary.

Hon. John Dryden, Minister of Agriculture.

Hon. F. R. Latchford, Commissioner of Public Works.

Ministers without Portfolio, Hon. Wm. Harty and Hon. J. T. Garrow.

After the ceremony of taking the oath of office, the Ministers took charge of their respective departments. It is to be noted that all the Ministers have all new portfolios, except the Minister of Agriculture.

A PATRIOTIC BEGINNING.

A council of the Cabinet was held and the first official act was the voting of the sum of $500 to the Canadian Red Cross Fund, to provide medical comforts for the Canadian contingent to the Transvaal.

PETERBORO'S MINISTER RETURNS.

Hon. Mr. Stratton, Provincial Secretary, returned home on Saturday's midnight express. His friends in town were somewhat disappointed that he did not return on the evening train. It was their intention to extend a somewhat formal welcome home, in recognition of the honor his elevation to the Cabinet reflects upon the town.

HE SHOULD BE BANQUETED.

In view of the fact that Mr. Stratton is the first representative of the riding in either House to bring the town the honor of furnishing a Cabinet Minister, it strikes the Times that it would be a capital idea to extend to Mr. Stratton the compliment of a banquet, which would take the form of a tribute from citizens, with an entirely non-partisan aspect—a compliment by citizens to a citizen who has always stood by the town and brought it into prominence as the first town in the Midland District to be represented by a member, whose zeal and earnestness a a representative, whose public spirit and his service to his riding and province have won the recognition represented by admission to the Council Board of Ontario.

Will a Chaplain be Appointed?

Toronto, Oct. 21.—Much conjecture is rife among the clergy of the city as to whether or not the Government will appoint army chaplains to accompany the men to South Africa. They consider that this is not the least important branch of the services as a great number of the contingent will be sure to be afflicted with some sickness, even if they do not come into actual conflict with the enemy.

The Presbyterian Mission Board last Wednesday determined that unless the Government made an appointment they would send out a clergyman at their own expense. They have applied to the Government for permission to do this, but so far have received no answer.

It is expected by a number that the Rev. Geo. Lloyd, M.A., editor of the Evangelical Churchman and chaplain of the Queen's Own Rifles, will receive the appointment. Mr. Lloyd is an exceedingly popular and able man, having served with the troops in the North-west rebellion of 1885.

It is reported that the Rev. Arthur Baldwin, of this city, will volunteer to act as army chaplain at his own expense if no appointment is made.

Pare Has a Nerve.

Kingston, Ont. Oct. 21.—A. K. Kirkpatrick, C. E., will sail from Montreal on November 4th for England, and proceed at once to Egypt, to take his position as chief engineer of the Soudan railway. Mrs. Kirkpatrick and children will remain in Smith's Falls until next spring.

Pare, the convicted Napanee Dominion Bank burglar, has applied through his counsel for the reward of $12,000 offered by the bank, on the ground that he gave information leading to the conviction of a person concerned. Pare was a principal in the theft.

WAS A GREAT VICTORY, BUT AT GREAT PRICE!

British Loss 40 Men Men Killed and 172 Wounded as a Result of Their Gallant Up-Hill Charge on the Boers.

A GRAPHIC STORY OF THE GREAT BATTLE.

The Boers Are Completely Routed After a Hot Engagement—Irishmen in Front of the Fight—A Fierce Artillery Duel at the Outset—Boer Sharpshooters Pick Off British Officers.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Dundee Hill cost the British nation dearly, and the gallantry of the charge made by the Dublin Fusiliers and the King's Royal Rifles upon the Boer guns is only just being made apparent. Nine commissioned officers killed, a general mortally wounded, thirty-one non-commissioned officers and men slain, one hundred and seventy-two men wounded, many of them fatally—that is the price paid by Great Britain for a rock hill and five pieces of cannon. No greater tribute could be paid to any army than the list of casualties at Dundee Hill. It shows that British officers lead and do not follow their men; that they not only give the order to charge but show their men how to charge. Considering the number of men actualy engaged the mortality among the officers is enormous. The unwritten law of the British army which bids an officer make a mark of himself while his men seek shelter, together with the old-time tactics of the Boer pursued so successfully at Majuba Hill and Laing's Nek, are responsible for the unusual number of deaths among leaders. Like Nelson at Trafalgar refusing to remove his decorations and parading conspicuously on his quarter deck a target for every sharpshooter so the British at Dundee Hill went towards the muzzles of the Boer rifles, disdaining to take advantage of the cover which etiquette permitted to their men. The effect of this is seen in the following official despatch received by the British War Office and sent by General Sir George Stewart White from Ladysmith at 4.20 this morning:

Among the officers killed are:

Divisional Staff—General Symons, mortally wounded in the stomach.

Col. C. E. Beckett, assistant Adjutant General, seriously wounded in the right shoulder.

Major Frederick Hammersley, deputy assistant adjutant general, seriously wounded in the leg.

Brigade Staff—Col. John Sheerston, deputy staff officer and brigade major, killed.

First Battalion Royal Irish Fusiliers—Second Lieut. Hon. A. H. M. Hill, killed.

Royal Dublin Fusiliers—Captain G. A. Weldon, killed.

Lieut. C. G. J. Genge, wounded, since dead.

King's Royal Rifles—Lieut.-Col. R. H. Gunning, killed.

Captain H. K. Pechell, killed.

Lieut. J. Taylor, killed.

Lieut. R. C. Burnett, killed.

Lieut. N. J. Humbro, killed.

Eighteen other officers were wounded.

Thirty-one non-commissioned officers and men were killed and 151 wounded.

DETAILS OF THE CONFLICT.

New York, Oct. 21.—The Journal contains the following cabled account of the engagement between the British and the Boers at Glencoe, Natal, furnished by its correspondent at the scene of operations, and dated Glencoe, Natal, Oct. 20:—

After a week of slow crawling through Laing's Nek down into Natal, taking Charlestown, Newcastle and other abandoned towns on the way, the Boer army, commanded by General Joubert, massed at Dannhauser, and prepared for an attack on the British. We knew their every movement, and were prepared for them.

General Symonds had established his little army of 4,000 men in an entrenched camp, half way between Glencoe and Dundee, in order to protect both towns. The Boers moved down yesterday to Hattingspruit, on the railway, seven miles north of Glencoe, cautiously feeling their way along. They were nearly double our number, but not a man in camp felt the least fear of the result of the forthcoming fight. Last night was a busy one. An attack was certain at daylight. The scouts informed us that the Boers were in great force with a dozen cannon. General Symonds made a thorough inspection of the troops, the ammunition and the entrenchments, and was ready for any kind of attack. The men were enthusiastic and eager for battle.

Just Before the Battle.

All during yesterday there had been little skirmishes and feints along the outposts, which ceased at nightfall. Our men were given a good supper and ordered to sleep on their arms. Pickets were doubled and every precaution was taken against a surprise during the night. The Boers dragged their guns to the top of Smith's Hill, two and a half miles north of the camp, and at the earliest dawn they opened fire. The range, however, was too great for light field guns. They used plugged shells, which fell short, exploding some distance away. The Boer practice soon becoming better, led General Symonds to determine to sally out and meet them on their own ground. Our force consisted of the 13th, 67th and 69th Field Batteries, 18th Hussars, Natal Mounted Volunteers, First Battalion of Leicestershire Regiment, First King's Own Rifles, Second Dublin Fusiliers, and several companies of regular mounted infantry and field hospital corps.

Guns Opened on Boers.

While the troops were making ready our guns opened on the Boers. A fierce artillery duel followed for an hour. The batteries did fine work, succeding in silencing several of the enemy's guns. The weather was fine and clear, the sun was shining brightly, and it was warm. The men cast aside their heavy clothes and prepared for hot work ahead. The Boer army, massed on the hill, was sheltered behind a slope from our artillery, but as soon as they saw our preparations to advance they formed in an extended line of battle. The ground between the camp and the hill in the rolling plain was no shelter for the British as they dashed across. Under the cover of a heavy artillery fire the troops marched out of the camp. The King's Rifles and Dublin Fusiliers led the way in extended order. The dash across the plain was deadly. The Boer volleys of musketry swept throuhg our ranks, but the men kept on without flinching. Our cavalry swept around the flanks and the infantry made a dash and dropped to the ground to avoid the volleys from the Boers. Gradually the foot of the hill was gained, and then began the final charge up the slope. Nothing could stop the Irishmen. It was tremendously hot. The roar of fire was incessant.

British Gain the Hill.

As our men gained the hill our artillery ceased firing for fear of hitting the British, and hastened forward to secure a better position. General Symonds was close behind his men inspiring them with courage. The charge up the hill was magnificent. Nothing could stop our men. They swarmed over the summit and the Boers fell back in disorder. In fifteen minutes more the Boers were routed and fleeing down the slope. Their officers succeded in rallying them and fierce fighting again followed. The Hussars galloped around the sides of the hill and attempted to outflank the enemy. It was here that General Symonds fell. He was shot through the body and fatally wounded. The command then devolved on General Yule. With occasional lulls fighting continued two hours longer. Finally at 1.30 o'clock the Boers gave way at all points and fled northward. Our cavalry and field artillery continued the pursuit, capturing many. Our losses have been sadly heavy, but the victory is complete. Smith Hill, the position taken, was almost inaccessible. It is very steep, and the British were forced to advance 5,500 yards in face of a murderous fire to reach its base.

After the Battle.

The Journal correspondent, cabling to-day, says.—The victory of the British forces over the Boers in the front of this position is known to-day to be greater than was previously supposed. The pursuit of the fleeing enemy was not terminated at nightfall, and this morning fighting with the Boer detachments that had been overtaken has been resumed to the north of Glencoe. Rain has handicapped both the pursued and the pursuers, but great numbers of Boer fugitives have been captured. The storm greatly increased the sufferings of the wounded. The field and camp hospitals are crowded with Boer and British survivors who fell in the battle, and the roads for hours have been crowded with heavily laden ambulances. The burial parties are already busy disposing of the dead, mostly at the very places where they fell. The chief pre-occupation of the hour is to make the best of victory, by frustrating once and for all concentration of the Boer forces upon the attempted isolation of Glencoe and Ladysmith. The British loss is estimated at 300, and that of the Boers as thrice as many.

The list of British officers killed and wounded, exceeds, as in the war of 1830, all the usual percentages of the number of men engaged. The Boer sharpshooters devoted almost their entire attention apparently to picking them off. General Yule, after visiting Smith Hill, expresses the opinion that if properly defended it would be impregnable. That the British carried it by storm, now seems almost incredible.

THE REGIMENTS ENGAGED.

London, Oct. 21.—War talk reigns supreme everywhere in England. London is teeming with people notable socially, but what cares London for society when troops are piling into transports, and when everybody, from Her Majesty down, is saying "good-bye," "God bless you," and "godo luck to you."

The news of yesterday's fighting in Natal made a tremendous sensation, and the pluck and dash of the King's Royal Rifles and the Dublin Fusiliers greatly stimulated the universal enthusiasm. The total British force at Camp Glencoe, according to the reports immediately preceding the announcement of the engagement, include:

The Eighteenth Hussars, Natal Mounted Volunteers, the First Battalion of the Leicestershire Regiment, First King's Royal Rifles, Second Dublin Fusiliers, Devonshire Regiment, Dorsetshire Regiment, several companies of mounted infantry, three field batteries, total, four thousand men.

These were opposed to a Boer force estimated at twice that number, and possibly reaching a higher figure. This very disparity between the combatants gives an additional element of fascination to the history of the day.

WON'T INVADE CAPE COLONY.

Cape Town, Oct. 21. — Evening — Trains to and from Aliwal North are again running. The fear of a Boer invasion of Cape Colony has subsided and it is generally believed that the commandos have moved to the Basuto border on account of a report of a great massing of the Basutos to raid the Orange Free State in revenge for the robbery and maltreatment of their countrymen. The news of the evacuation of Vryburg has had a bad effect on the Dutch inhabitants of the Rand.

THE NAVAL MOVEMENTS.

London, Oct. 21.—There is considerable speculation regarding the numerous naval movements. The Admiralty has ordered the paying off of the crews of four ships of the training squadron, the Raleigh, Voiage, Champion and Cleopatra. This is supposed to be because the crews will be required for the special service squadron which, it is assumed, will be utilized for the defence of home waters.

The officers of the channel squadron, which is under orders to proceed to Gibraltar next Tuesday, believe it is going there for guard duty, as the garrison at the Rock is very weak at present.

REVENGE FOR FASHODA.

London, Oct. 21.—The bitter anti-British feeling that exists in France is voiced in its extreme manifestation by the Echo de Paris, which says:—"We shall join in the whispered prayer that out there beyond the seas and beyond immense Africa, General Joubert, a good old round-shouldered general, whose ancestors were Frenchmen, will give us our revenge, our Herois revenge for Fashoda."

ANNIVERSARY OF DARGAI.

London, Oct. 21.—It is a very striking coincidence that yesterday was the second anniversary of a similar feat of British arms in India, when the Gordon Highlanders stormed Dargai Heights.

TO PUNISH NON-COMBATANTS.

London, Oct. 21.—One of the problems left entirely to General Sir Redvers Buller, in supreme command, is the punishment of non-combatants who take part in the hostilities. The task of distinguishing their status is very difficult, as comparatively few Boers wear a uniform. It is said that the treatment he will administer to the German and Irish volunteers under the Transvaal flag will not be more merciful than were Von Moltke's dealings with the Franc-Tireurs.

CONSERVATIVES TO MEET

And Discuss the Situation in West Peterborough.

WILL THEY PUT UP A FIGHT?

Many Believe it Would be Sheer Folly to Do So.

The Times is of Opinion that They Would Not Gain Anything by Opposing Mr. Stratton's Return—There is no Man in Sight Who Would Have Any Show.

The Conservative managers have received instructions from the party leaders in the Province to hold a meeting as a preliminary to a convention which may be called to select a candidate to contest West Peterborough in the bye-election which is about to take place in the riding. The meeting will be held on Tuesday evening, when party organizer Leavitt will, it is expected, be present. There is a strong effort being made by the party leaders in the province to induce the local Conservatives to bring out a candidate. It is known, however, that it will be difficult to do this, on account of the scarcity of men to lead the forlorn hope. Mr. J. W. Garvin's name is freely mentioned as a candidate, but whether or not he will accept nomination if tendered him, is a question. His experience in the past is not conducive to a rosy view of the future. A leading Conservative told the Times on Saturday that a spirited campaign would be a good thing, even if there was little chance of success, because it would tend to hold the rank and file of the party together and keep them in touch with the burning questions of the day. That Mr. Leavitt will do his best to have a candidate in the field goes without saying for the simple reason that it may be regarded as a sign of weakness to allow a riding to go by default. The party leaders argue that it is tantamount to admiting that they endorse the Government's policy and are in accord with the Liberals in every particular. They contend that where principle is involved it matters not what strength the opposing forces may possess.

But as the Times before remarked, the patronage which might accrue to the defeated candidate, should Mr. Whitney accede to power, is perhaps the strongest incentive to some men. This sort of a man, however, is hardly what the Conservative party, who are mostly composed of honorable men, want or what the country needs. It is a sort of political jobbery that will receive little countenance at the hands of the electors.

In view of Mr. Stratton's elevation to a Cabinet position, the Times cannot see what is to be gained, from a purely party standpoint, in opposing his return. There is no doubt that he will again be elected by an overwhelming majority, no matter who his opponent may be.

MR. BOURASSA RESIGNS.

Liberal M. P. for Labelle Urges War on the Government for its Transvaal Policy

Montreal, Oct. 21.—J. Henri Bourassa, Liberal M.P. for Labelle, has resigned his seat in Parliament. He urges as cause for his action the sending of a Canadian contingent to the Transvaal, and in a letter to Premier Laurier condemns the conduct of the Government in the most energetic terms. Parliament, he insists, should have been consulted, and that without Parliament's sanction the sending of the troops is unconstitutional. While asserting his unswerving loyalty to the Queen and Empire, Mr. Bourassa declares that British interests are not threatened by the trouble in the Transvaal, that the war has already been condemned by enlightened statesmen of England and that it has no bearing on the interests of Canada.

"The question," he insists, "is whether the Canadian people shall be called upon to take part in all the wars of the empire without the doors of the Imperial Parliament and Cabinet being opened to them, without even being consulted through their representatives and their Government on the advisability of those bloody contests. I have approved and still approve of your administrative policy. But I look upon this last action as the initial step of a new constitutional policy which the majority of your supporters have always denounced, and upon which you have never consulted either Parliament or the electorate."

Concluding, Mr. Bourassa promises to place the question loyally before the electors of Labelle and appeal to them on that issue.

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 23, 1899

CAN THE TRANSVAAL EXPECT HELP FROM EUROPE?

According to the German newspapers, Kaiser William II. has no intention of repeating at this time the anti-English demonstration which he made in the early days of January, 1896, just after the collapse of Dr. Jameson's raid. At the same time, they intimate that, if some other European power should propose a joint intervention on behalf of the South African Republic, the proposal might not be repelled by the Berlin Government. Even this is by no means certain, for, under the tripartite treaty which is said to have been concluded eighteen months ago between England, Germany and Portugal, and which may become operative at any hour, the German Emperor may count upon acquiring, not only Angola upon the west coast, but also a large part of the Portuguese possessions on the east coast of Africa. As the provisions of the treaty could not be carried out against the wish of England, in view of the preponderance on the ocean, the acquiescence of Germany in the conquest of the Transvaal would seem to have been assured.

Let us assume, however, that the assertions made by the German newspapers are well founded, and let us enquire what European power would be likely to take the initative in a diversion against England and in favor of the Boers. Can such a movement be looked for from France? All the foreign wars and domestic revolutions into which France has entered during the last fifty years have started in Paris, and so it happens that, just now, in view of the approaching Exposition, nothing is so ardently desired as external and internal tranquility by the vast majority of the inhabitants of the French capital. We, of course, do not mean to say that even the Exposition would restrain the Parisans from plunging France into war if they felt that the national interests were threatened in a vital particular. But, if they would not [illegible] Fashoda, which would have extended to the Nile the French possessions in Central Africa, they would scarcely fight to hold the Boer republics in a part of the Dark Continent wherein France [illegible] can hope to have any [illegible]

[illegible] between France and [illegible] it be a naval conquest, and [illegible] appreciable part of the British fleet would have to be transferred from the Channel and the Mediterannean to South African waters. No French naval expert believes that France could cope with England upon the ocean, unless she had the assistance of both Germany and Russia.

What reason is there to believe that the Czar would seize the present occasion to enter a coalition against England? Such a step on his part would obviously cast the gravest doubt on the sincerity of his motives in proposing the recent peace conference. Then, again, how could his Finance Minister, M. De Witte, reconcile the advocacy of such a coalition, which would impose upon Russia a huge outlay, with his conviction that at least five years of absolute tranquility and rigorous economy are needed to complete the Trans-Siberia railroad, with its Manchurian branch. That Germany would become a party to an anti-English combination with France, from which Russia stood aloof, is most improbable, even if Emperor William's neutrality had not been practically purchased by the treaty regarding the Portuguese possessions in South Africa.

We are, doubtless, safe, then, in assuming that, although the Boers can count upon the sympathies of almost all the Continental peoples, they cannot expect active assistance from any European Government. Their sole hope is to bring about by preliminary successes a widespread uprising among the Afrikanders in Cape Colony. In this way their forces might be doubled, and the problem which Sir Redvers Buller has to solve would become gravely complicated.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

The offer of Kruger to pay $25,000 for Cecil Rhodes head seems to be extravagant. But perhaps he is a believer in good Rhodes.

* * *

Fat men ought to make good soldiers. Once get 'em in the field and they must fight. They can't run.

That alleged Irish commando with the Boers, which was first announced to number 2,000 men, and later on 300, seems to have dwindled to zero. If the Connaught Rangers or the Royal Irish ever caught any Dutch-Irishmen there would be wigs on the green.

* * *

When the British army corps in South Africa begins to march northward Oom Paul will suddenly realize that things are coming his way.

That Col. Baden-Powell is a good man for the Boers to keep away from.

Here's how the Chicago Chronicle referred to Sir Wilfrid Laurier when the premier rose to address the immense audience in that city recently: "With a strikingly dignified and suave stage expression the premier simply captivated his auditors and held them fast by the charm of his eloquence from first to last. His delivery had the fineness and grace and his manner the indescribable polish of the highest style of oratory. His every move and all his gestures—which were few—bespoke a natural refinement and a reserve force of intellectuality which won favor with the audience."

Reporters Were Useful.

A couple of years ago the Toronto Ministerial Association decided that they would no longer admit the representatives of the city papers to their meetings, as many of the ministers held that matters came up for discussion, which did not concern the general public, and they did not feel that they could express their views freely before the reporters. The matter was discussed at length, and with some heat, but at last a motion was carried excluding the reporters from the deliberations of the association. It was provided, however, that the secretary should prepare statements to be given to the press at the conclusion of the meetings. The result has been, according to a prominent clergyman, that there has been a marked decrease in the attendance at the meetings, while the interest in the discussions has been but of a lukewarm nature. The ministers have been considering the question for some time, and according to the Globe's informant, will rescind their motion excluding the press. The Town Council did this in regard to committee meetings.

Council vs. School Board

A curious state of affairs exists at Barrie. As we have often been told in Peterborough, the public school board has the right to demand any sum of money they see fit from the council, and that body must give it to them. That is the law, but down at Barrie the council decided to use some judgment in the matter and refused to pay the amount demanded by the board. The latter body has now undertaken to sue the council for the amount demanded. In the meantime the mayor has issued posters calling an indignation meeting, the cause being set forth in the following petition which was largely signed by public school ratepayers:—We, the undersigned ratepayers of the town of Barrie, alarmed at the recklessness shown by a majority of the members of the public school board in commencing legal proceedings against the town, whereby greatly increased taxation must result, beg that you will be pleased to call a public meeting for the consideration of their action." It would look too much like Satan reproving sin for the Peterborough Council to seek to curtail the spending proclivities of the Board of Education, although restraint is badly needed.

Vastly Different.

As will be seen, it makes a great difference how one uses the muscular resources at one's command.

A member of an athletic club, after swimming the length of the large tank in the basement of the institution, came out puffing and blowing, apparently exhausted.

"You don't manage your breathing right," said the swimming instructor. "It ought not to tire you so. As to the upper part of your body, including your arms, you use exactly the same muscles and in very much the same way, in swimming as in sawing wood."

"No, sir!" gasped the swimmer. "When it comes to sawing wood, I use the muscles of some other man."—Youth's Companion

WANTED FIRE BELL CLOTHES.

He Just Made Up His Mind to Kill That Town of St. Joe.

"Ah'm come back home for some clothes, an Ah want 'em wahm," said a tall young negro to a Walnut street haberdasher one day last spring. "Ah'm jes' agoin to kill that town of St. Joe. Show me the heatedest clothes yo' got in the house."

He was not cool as to raiment to start with. His overcoat was cream colored, overlaid with pearl buttons the size of those small butter plates still in use in restaurants. His trousers were green and ended in yellow shoes with brown shot silk tops. His hat was light blue, mottled in brown; his gloves were red and his cane heavily silvered.

"Can't no St. Joe nigger tell me Ah come from Raytown," he muttered. "Ah goes up to St. Joe to work, and the coons there laugh at me and tell me Ah ain't from Kansas City, because mah clothes is so inconspicuous, and Ah just save up mah money, and Ah'm agoin back to kill the town. Now what I want is some underclothes and socks and shirts and things that are the wahmest you've got."

"How will these do?" asked the haberdasher, exposing some scarlet hosiery, banded with wide white stripes.

"That's it. That's the kind of clothes Ah want. They ain't nothin in St. Joe like that. Lemme look at them underwear."

He inspected some red underwear with white stripes, some of baby blue with pink stripes and others of green with blue, black and red stripes. He bought neckscarfs of every shade of red, blue and green and of the most bewildering patterns. His purchases included zebra collars and pale pink shirts, diamond scarfpins at 35 cents each, but with $85 of shine, and a brown waistcoat with scarlet moons emblazoned on it.

"Ah've got 'em dead," he exclaimed when he had finished. "They've ceased to live. When Ah get back to that town of St. Joe they'll ask me if I come from Raytown, will they? Ah'm agoin to take back to that little ole burg such wahm clothes that they'll meet me with the fiah department. That town's dead now, and Ah've killed it."

How Wealth is Carried.

"It is rather amusing," remarked the head of the biggest bureau de change in London to the writer, "to notice the various methods in which men of different nationalities carry their worldly wealth. The Englishman carries his all loose in his right hand trousers pocket—gold, silver and copper all mixed up together. He pulls a handful of the mixture out of his pocket in a large, opulent way and selects the coins he has need of. The American carries his wad of bills in a peculiar long, narrow pocketbook, in which the greenbacks lie flat; the Frenchman makes use of a leather purse with no distinguishing characteristics, while the German uses one gayly embroidered in silks by the fair hands of some Lottchen or Mina.

"The half civilized capitalist from some torrid South American city carries his dollars in a belt with cunningly devised pockets to baffle the gentlemen with the light fingers. Some of these belts are very expensive. The Italian of the poorer classes ties up his little fortune in a gayly colored handkerchief secured with many knots, which he secretes in some mysterious manner about his clothes. A similar course has charms for the Spaniard, while the lower class Russian exhibits a preference for his boots or the lining of his clothes as a hiding place for his savings."—London Answers.

Knew When to Quit

"I suppose you made your money through your holdings in stock."

"Well," said the financier, "they had something to do with it, but the really important considerations weren't my holdings so much as my let goings."—Washington Star.

A Sudden Start.

"You used to go to school with Coppers the new millionaire, didn't you?"

"I did. Fact is, I gave him his first start in life."

"How?"

"With a bent pin."

CHAMBERLAIN ANSWERS FOES

A Telling Speech in Support of His African Policy—To Give Protection to British Subjects Interference Not Tolerated.

London, Oct. 20.—Expectation was on tip-toe yesterday to hear the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain reply to the criticisms of his Liberal opponents on his Transvaal policy. The House was packed, both floors and galleries, and the Secretary of State for the Colonies was loudly cheered upon rising. The statements of the Opposition, he began, were calculated to encourage Kruger's resistance and to embarass the Government in most difficult and critical functions.

Referring to Mr. Stanhope's demand on the previous day that he should produce the letter he had written to Mr. Hawkesley, he said he would gladly do this if it were demanded by Sir William Vernon Harcourt and Mr. John Morley, who were on the South African committee.

The Speaker objected.

Mr. Chamberlain replied that it was impossible adequately to describe the accusation that he and Sir Alfred Milner had fermented war. The Government welcomed all honest and honorable criticism of their policy, and he wished he could apply these epithets to Mr. Stanhope.

Mr. Stanhope protested, the Speaker ruled the language out of order and Mr. Chamberlain withdrew his words out of deference to the Speaker. Then he proceeded to say that if Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman or Sir William Vernon Harcourt desired to see the letter he would produce it with the greatest pleasure, as they were honorable members and honorable men.

Mr. Stanhope again leaped to his feet and called upon the Speaker to intervene. The Speaker rejoined that he did not think what the Colonial Secretary had said imputed dishonorable conduct to the member for Burnley.

Dealing with the South African League Mr. Chamberlain said that he was not acquainted with a single member, and so far was he from being associated with Cecil Rhodes that since the Jameson raid he had no communication, direct or indirect, with him on any subject connected with South African policy.

Passing to the general question of the Government's course in South Africa, he said that, in the light of recent events and the utterances of Kruger, he had been forced to the conclusion that war had always been inevitable. While striving for peace he had always been determined on securing justice for the British people of South Africa and on maintaining the paramount position of Great Britain. To maintain that position the nation was bound to show that it was willing and able to protect British subjects wherever they suffered injustice and oppression. The peace of South Africa, he declared, depended on Britain accepting responsibility in the Transvaal. He denied that racial animosity in South Africa had been created by the action of the Government, and declared that it existed before the Government interfered and was based on contempt.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman interposed the remark that it would be increased a hundredfold by hostilities.

Mr. Chamberlain replied that he would rather have hatred than contempt, and added that there would never be peace until the two races learned to respect each other.

Referring to the treatment oft he natives by the Boers, Mr. Chamberlain said that the latter "trekked" becaus ethey wanted to "wallop" the niggers.

Mr. John Dillon shouted—"That is not true." He was called to order, and stated that he did not impute falsehood to Mr. Chamberlain.

Continuing the speaker declared that the Government had a suspicion amounting to knowledge that the mission of Dr. Leyds was one continual series of negotiations, with the Transvaal and the Orange Free State. They had given the Transvaal an assurance that Britain would never interfere again if the five years' franchise were granted but their promise had been tantamount to that so long as oppression ceased. He believed that influential advisers—he did not mean foreign powers—had induced the Transvaal to withdraw this offer. The last proposals of the Government, he said, were buried and were not likely to be resurrected.

In conclusion he said—"In their endeavor to maintain peace the Government have shown endless patience. It was President Kruger who settled the issue. He appealed to the God of battles. If I may do so with reverence, I say we accept that appeal, believing our quarrel just.

Sir Edward Clarke, Conservative member for Plymouth, spoke next, expressing the opinion that he Government had blundered, that Kruger had been for peace and that the war was a crime against civilization.

Mr. Morley and Mr. Balfour followed, and after some sharp debate Mr. Stanhope's amendment to the address, "disapproving of the conduct of the negotiations with the Transvaal," was rejected by a vote of 362 to 135.

Burned to Death.

Godrich Oct. 19.—Nina, daughter of Albert and Emma Goldthrope, of Colborne was burned to death. The accident is supposed to have been caused by a four-year-old boy climbing on to a chair, taking a match out of a coat pocket, and striking it near the window curtains, and that when ignited it fired the curtains. After the curtains had burned upwards they are supposed to have fallen, while on fire, on the child.

G. T. R. Employes Exculpated.

Guelph, Oct. 19.—At the assizes today Oliver Henry brought action against the G T R for falling off a train and having the muscles of his arm torn. There was no evidence to show that the G.T.R. authorities were to blame, as the trainmen on the spur line were bothered with boys riding on it, and ordered them off on every occasion. His Lordship took the case from the jury. Mr. Osler, Q.C., who appeared for the G. T. R., stating that he did not ask for cost. Mr. J. E. Day for plaintiff.

ANOTHER DREYFUS VICTIM.

Colonel Schneider Dies From Wounds Received in a Recent Duel—He Fought With Captain Cuignet.

Vienna, Oct. 19.—Colonel Schneider, the former Austria military attache at Paris, whose name has been prominently connected with the alleged treason of former Captain Alfred Dreyfus of the French army, and who, it is generally understood, fought a duel about October 13 with Captain Cuignet of the French army as a result of statements made by the captain at the Rennes court-martial is dead.

A despatch from Paris, Oct. 13, said that Col. Schneider was seen being carried to a train accompanied by physicians and with blood flowing from a wound in his side. The colonel is reported to have said: "I recently returned from Switzerland to fight a duel with Captain Cuignet on account of his evidence regarding me before the Rennes court-martial."

While testifying at the court-martial Captain Cuignet referred to a despatch of Col. Schneider denouncing as a forgery a letter said to have been written by the colonel. Captain Cuignet ridiculed this allegation of forgery and declared that the French General staff was in a position to prove beyond dispute the authenticity of the letter. The captain added: "He must know that his letter is not the only one of his communications now in our hands."

EUGENE FIELD AND TABOR.

How the Humorist Made Life a Burden For the Millionaire.

"Up to middle age the late Senator Tabor's life was one of great hardship," said a former resident of the Silver State, "and when he suddenly became fabulously rich he plunged into luxuries like a starving man wading into a banquet." One of his early freaks was the purchase of several magnificent lace nightrobes which cost $100 apiece and which he kept locked up in a safe during the day. Eugene Field was editor of the Denver Tribune at the time, and those lace nightrobes made him simply hysterical. He wrote column upon column about them, describing the garments in detail, with numerous diagrams depicting sections fore and aft. The diagrams were hideous affairs, which Field carved out himself with a penknife on the back of old wood type. He used to describe how Tabor would forget the combination of the safe and sit up, shivering and naked, half the night trying to remember the right figures.

"Altogether he kept Denver in a roar for weeks and made Tabor so wild that one day he rushed into his office, snatched the unfortunate nightrobes out of their compartment and tore them to threads. 'There, now!' he exclaimed, wiping his forehead and kicking the tattered fragments into a corner, 'I hope that fool will be satisfied. I'll be hanged if I ain't going to get a gunny sack,' he continued, 'cut some holes in the end for my head and arms, and then sleep in it for the rest of my life!'

"When Tabor was appointed to the senate to fill an unexpired term of exactly 20 days, Field broke loose again and had all kinds of fun with the old man. He declared that Tabor opposed the tariff bill on the ground that it encouraged lawlessness in the west. 'I don't know this tariff bill,' he reported the senator as saying in a speech, 'but we have entirely too many of 'em out where I live. There's Wild Bill and Pecos Bill and Billy the Kid—all no good. If you let Tariff Bill have everything to do with the custom house he is liable to steal the Atlantic ocean.' Many of the honest frontier folk took these flights of fancy seriously, and drove Tabor nearly distracted by long letters of remonstrance, urging him to read up and get posted, so as not to disgrace the state.

"At the expiration of the senator's brief term he circulated an autograph album among his fellow members, and the incident tickled Field immensely. He gave what purported to be a copy of the 'sentiments' inscribed in the volume by the different statesmen—such things as 'When this you see, remember me, Roscoe Conkling,' and 'Sure as the moss grows 'round a stump you are my darling sugar lump—I mean chump—George F. Hoar,' and similar nonsense, all of which maddened his victim.

"I think 'Gene Field was the only man Tabor never forgave, for in spite of his gaunt, forbidding exterior, the miner magnate was as tender hearted as a girl. He was really full of sterling qualities, and in his proper sphere he would have been anything but grotesque. One thing is sure—if every fellow he helped in secret would have joined his funeral procession he would have gone to his grave like an emperor of old."

Snap Shots With a Graphophone.

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. HIS HAIR TURNED WHITE.

Peculiar Experience of the Man Who Dealt in High Explosives.

"Nitroglycerin, sir; high explosives accomplished it," said a well-dressed man with a youthful face and snow white hair to a chance acquaintance on the Great Northern.

"But your face is not scarred? It would seem that an explosion"—

"An impending explosion it was. Two years ago I was the most successful well shooter in America. I could make the oil loosen up where others had failed. The secret lay in the explosives I employed. I made them myself and had the business down fine. At that time I went to New York to figure on a big blasting contract that would have made me a pile. I failed to make the arrangement, and the very day the negotiations fell through I started suddenly for England on a similar mission.

"'Is there such a thing as high explosives ripening?' asked the Englishman I was accompanying on the second day of our voyage.

"The question brought me to my feet and caused an exclamation of horror to escape from my lips. Many explosives undergo a ripening process, which adds greatly to their destructive power, at the same time decidedly increasing the danger of handling them. That made by me was this character. Indeed 25 days after it compounded it was almost certain to ode of its own volition, so to speak. on the upper shelf of the checkroom ..y New York hotel I had left a large grip containing a 20 pound can of this compound, the ripening of which meant destruction and death.

"For an hour I was almost in a state of frenzy, freely denouncing myself as a multimurderer. In vain I drew an awful picture of the devastation that would overwhelm a certain New York hotel in exactly 17 days and called upon the captain to put his ship about. He promised to transfer me to a west bound steamer if an opportunity presented itself, but fortune failed me, and I was obliged to cross the ocean. On the morning of the twenty-fifth day of the life of my ripening high explosive I sprang from a carriage and rushed into the hotel.

"No reprieved murderer ever experienced greater joy than I did as I saw the last of the terrible fluid disappear in a catch basin. Ten minutes later I started back from the mirror of the hotel bar, where I had gone for a 'bracer,' in absolute dismay. My jet black hair had turned white as snow."

VETERANS UNDER FIRE.

The Reason They Don't Stoop When the Bullets Are Flying.

"The temptation to stoop when under fire is almost irresistible," said a veteran, "and that accounts for so many of the wounds received by raw troops. You see, when a man happens to be hit in a stooping posture the chances are that the bullet plows right through his body from end to end. On the other hand, if he is standing erect, the probabilities are in favor of the wound being slight, anyhow not mortal. Old soldiers are well aware of this, and while they will drop flat and hunt cover every chance they get they never stoop.

"After a soldier has been in a few engagements he learns such tricks, and, as far as the rest of it is concerned, he becomes simply a fatalist. There is nothing strange about it, for almost all his experiences appear to lend color to that doctrine. For instance, he never dodges, because he has seen men dodge and get killed when it really seemed as if they had reached for the bullet. In fact, the strangest things are continually happening, all apparently the pure whim of chance.

"I remember near Petersburg a comrade of mine, as brave a fellow as ever lived, took refuge behind a little hut. He was wornout under fire and wanted to get a moment's breathing space. Twenty feet in the rear and a little to one side was a pile of crossties full of wrought iron nails. A bullet came along, splintered a tie and drove out one of the nails at right angles. The jagged iron struck my chum in the side, penetrated his kidneys and killed him.

"That's the blind chance of war, and after getting a few such object lessons a fellow is apt to acquire a sort of sang froid that is immensely impressive to a recruit. It isn't because he has a contempt for danger; he has merely learned the folly of trying to evade it."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

To Crisp Lettuce Leaves.

Do you know how to crisp lettuce leaves? A most simple process, but one rarely adopted judging by the wilted stuff we generally see served. A gentleman of the old school was my teacher, and while yet a mere maid I was promoted to the proud dignity of crisping the lettuce.

First carefully separate the leaves from the stalk, discarding discolored and imperfect ones and leaving untouched the tiny hearts; lay them all in cool, clear water for awhile, all morning if you choose; pick them over a couple of times before serving; wash one by one and lay in a wire basket if you have one; if not, a clean, soft towel will answer; gather the ends and sides loosely in your hand and lightly shake the lettuce; then put the leaves in a colander, which you set in the refrigerator, but not on the ice. Leave until needed, when you will find the lettuce deliciously cool and crisp enough to crack. Never cut the leaves. If very large, divide with the fingers into smaller pieces.—What to Eat.

The Prevalence of Appendicitis.

Surgeons admit that 75 per cent of all cases of appendicitis will recover without operation, but claim that 98 per cent could be saved by operating promptly on every case as soon as discovered. This discloses a debate of great significance, for physicians are disinclined to turn all cases to the surgeon. Morris has estimated that there are 200,000 new cases of appendicitis discovered each year in the United States. If this is true and the surgeons are right, 46,000 of them would be ruthlessly sacrificed under medical treatment. But physicians assert (and I wish I knew whether truly or not) that autopsies upon subjects that have died from other diseases than appendicitis show old inflammatory processes about the appendix in one third of the cases, just as old tuberculous cicatrices are found in the lungs where tuberculosis has never been suspected. In other words, one-third of all coming to the autopsy table and by inference a large proportion of the population have got well spontaneously from an unsuspected trouble which would have subjected them to a life endangering operation had they fallen into the hands of a surgeon of sufficient skill to make the diagnosis.

When surgeons extol the skill necessary to make diagnosis in doubtful cases, physicians retort that those are the cases in which diagnosis would better not be made. Obviously the subject has not crystallized and is in process of evolution, but even the laity clamor for an operation when there is recognized tumor and poisoning from pus absorption.

Cost Her Her Reason.

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Mentone, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

Moving Strains.

Elderly Beau (who is making a long call, to fair singer rapturously)—Ah, that song takes me back to the home of my childhood!

Fair Singer's Irrepressible Younger Sister (in a loud whisper)—Can't you sing something that will take him back to the home of his old age?—Harper's Bazar.

Vigorous Language.

"I tell you," said Johnny Snaggs, "that man talked straight from the shoulder."

"Johnny," said Mr Snaggs severely, "you should not use slang."

"But, father, this was a deaf and dumb man, and he used the sign language."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

BRITONS PROUD OF THEIR ARMY

The Mobilization Arrangements Arrangements Have Worked Like a Charm, and the Army Corps is Ready to Move.

London, Oct. 20.—Another proof of the magnitude of the war in addition to the estimate of £10,000,000 required for military purposes, is the proclamation calling a portion of the militia into service for replenishing garrisons. There is nothing unusual in this course, since an organized force of 120,000 militia was brought into use in the Soudan campaign in 1885, in the Crimea and in other crisis. It is not unlikely that the Mediterranean and other garrisons may be reinforced by militia levies.

Mobilization of half the reserves is virtually completed, and the muster is satisfactory in every respect. The military system has worked like well oiled machinery. The army corps is ready to move, and will start to-morrow to go on steadily. If the Admiralty has arranged the transport service as well as the War Office has done its work, no cause of complaint can be found.

British military pride is rising everywhere with the evidence that the reserves have made a brilliant muster and that there are no signs of official mismanagement in any quarter.

The supplementary army estimate asks the House of Commons to vote an additional 35,000 men and £10,000,000 in consequence of the situation in South Africa. It is explained that the 35,000 men represent the probable maximum excess beyond the establishment fixed for the year 1899-1900, and is in consequence of the calling out of the reserves, and of the temporary transfer of troops from the Indian to the British establishment. With the additional £10,000,000, the total army estimates are £30,617,200.

The militia consists of thirty-two regiments of artillery, fourteen companies of engineers, 126 battalions of infantry and six companies of medical staff, with 129,752 officers and men.

MORE TRANSPORTS TAKEN.

Boston, Mass. Oct. 20.—The announcement is made here that the British Government has chartered the Dominion Line steamer Englishman for use in transporting supplies to South Africa. The Englishman has made but two trips to this port. It is expected that the steamer Canada, of the same line, will be chartered also.

New York, Oct. 19.—The steamer Maine, which has been lent without charge to the British Government by the Atlantic Transport Company, left Philadelphia on October 10th. On her arrival in London she will be fitted up as a hospital ship.

The Maine is a steel, three-masted single-screw vessel, built by William Gray & Co., of West Hartlepool, Eng., and launched in July, 1887. She is 315 feet in length, forty feet beam and more than twenty feet deep. She has three decks, and her gross register is 2816 tons, the net register being 1813 tons. Below she is divided into six water-tight compartments. The Maine has been employed as a carrier of cattle and other freight. She is commanded by Captain Muscelwhite, and has a crew of forty men. When refitted she will accomodate about 300 persons in the hospital quarters.

Rough Voyage of Empress.

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 20.—The steamer Empress of India, which has reached here from Japan, has completed the roughest trip of her forty-three voyages. The second day out from Yokohama she encountered a typhoon, which destroyed communication between the engine-room and bridges and destroyed some of the boats. The storm continued unabated all day and all night.

Fears are expressed by officers for the transport steamer Senator, carrying home the Fifty-first Iowa. She left Yokohama for San Francisco eight hours before the Empress, and, having immense upper works, would fare badly in a gale.

Rioting in Burmah.

Rangoon British Burmah, Oct. 20.—Serious riots have broken out in the lower Chidwin district of Burmah. A number of Sepoys of the Karen military police, who had been prohibited from attending a Burmese theatre, broke bounds on Saturday, entered the theatre and attacked a number of English officers, severely wounding four. The Sepoys are dissatisfied with their long detention in the cholera district. Other outbreaks are reported.

In the Philippines.

Manila, Oct. 20.—General Young's advance guard of General Lawton's column left Cabiao yesterday morning, and entered San Isidro at half-past one o'clock. The American loss was one killed and three wounded. General Pio del Pilar personally commanded the Filipinos. He and the bulk of the enemy retreated up the river. One Spaniard and fifteen insurgents were captured. The loss of the enemy is not known. The townspeople appear to be friendly.

RUNAWAYS ARE CAUGHT

THE WOULD-BE BRIDE TOLD HER SECRET TO A FRIEND, WHO BETRAYED HER.

Taken Home and Captives.—A Few Minutes More and they would have been Safe in Philadelphia's Gretna Green.

If a certain young lady had not yielded to woman's weakness and confided a precious secret to another woman under the usual never-never-tell conditions, this story would not be written.

Shortly after 8 o'clock yesterday morning a light buggy appeared on Water-st., going at a terrific clip south. It was followed close by another. Almost every ten seconds a young man in the first vehicle turned to cast anxious eyes on the pursuing rig and say a few words of encouragement to a young woman by his side. He tried to urge his tired horse to a final spurt for the train, but the animal was unequal to the task. At Charolette street he gave out. The second buggy soon drew up alongside, an elderly gentleman alighted, and he said in a kindly tone:

"Well, Harry, my boy,—you got considerably farther than I thought you would. You have led us a long chase."

The young man seemed very much crestfallen. He cast an anxious look at his companion in the carriage, who was vainly endeavoring to appear at ease, and replied:

"We were just out for a ride, father."

"Over twenty miles on this cool morning should have afforded you sufficient exercise," said the father. "Come home at once."

In this command he was joined by another man, who addressed the pretty young woman with great bitterness:

"Mary, I am surprised. You will have yourself talked about all over the country."

Both parents besought their children to return home without making an unpleasant scene. After much argument and protest, Harry's father entered the first buggy with his son, and Mary got into the second with her father. Then they drove away through different streets.

There is quite a little romance involved in all this. The Times discovered that both the young people live near Norwood. Their acquaintance of a few years gradually ripened into love, but they would have married without eloping had it not for the earnest opposition of their parents. The young man's financial condition and the young lady's youth were the barriers which stood in the way. Nevertheless, the young people had their resolution formed. They would drive to Peterborough and become man and wife.

Plans were carefully made for the start yesterday morning at daybreak. Unfortunately for the success of the scheme, the young lady, in a burst of confidence, told a friend. The latter, it is said, had a grude against the young man, growing out of a quarrel, so she promply informed his father. The two fathers consulted. They wanted to catch the young lovers in the act of running away. Having learned the hour of their intended departure, they waited at a turn of the road for their appearance.

The young man's father promply called for his son to stop when the latter's rig hove in sight, but not the slightest attention was paid to the command. There was no alternative but pursuit, and the chase proved a long one. The young man selected the route by way of the Smith street bridge and down water street, intending to take an early out-going train. He had for awhile every prospect of winning out, but his horse, after nearly an hour and a half steady going, gave out, and the lovers were taken home captives.

SELWYN.

The services in the Baptist church last Sunday were conducted by Rev. Mr. Cowsert, of Belleville. The congregation was not large but those who heard him listened to an able and thoughtful address.

Mr. Jas. Bell has had a new stone foundation laid under the house occupied by Mr. Robt. Pearson. Mr. Whalley, of Lakefield, did the work.

Messrs. Robertson brothers, of Peterborough, have finished the foundation of Mr. Isaac Manning's new barn. The work has been done in a very creditable manner. Mr. Manning does not intend to finish the work until spring, but he promises then to have one of the finest barns in the country.

The Twentieth Century Thanksgiving Fund was discussed in the Methodist church on Sunday morning last, by the pastor, Rev. Geo. Nickle.

There was a good representation from this neighborhood at both the Lakefield Babtist tea on Monday night, and the Gilmour tea on Tuesday.

Nearly all in this vicinity have finished threshing.

Miss Annie Elliott spent Sunday in Peterborough visiting friends.

The flag of the schoolhouse of Section 5 was flying on the 13th inst., the anniversary of the Canadian victory of Queenstown Heights, 1812.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and specially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whicher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black peaks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whicher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We heard it four times, and then Whicher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even now."

RAILROAD TIES.

It is proposed to construct a railway in French Guinea.

Khartum will be reached by the railroad by November next, barring accidents. The railroad is now 50 miles south of the Atbara river.

The original capital of the Pennsylvania railroad was $350,000. The system on its fifty-third birthday represented an investment of $900,000,000. Last year it carried 71,000,000 passengers.

An "improvement" introduced by the Great Eastern railway, England, consists in widening the cars to the limit of safety in order to allow six passengers to wedge

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected in Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognised as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realised to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

Fact Vor as Fiction.

"Talk about the seven sleepers," muttered the angry traveler; "I'll bet there are 7,000 of them between Albany and New York."

"The Jewels of Hope."

Is there any sadder or more pathetic spectacle in this world than that of the poor woman weighed down with wretchedness and suffering who is at last convinced in her very soul that there is no more hope of healthy happiness on this earth? Or is there on the other hand any more delightful and inspiring picture than that of the same woman when the spirit of renewed life comes to her again and holds up before her the jewels of hope, and the regal garments of rejuvenated health and happy complete womanhood?

"I had been a sufferer for more than one year with severe depressing pains in my womb," says Mrs. Annie L. Mathews, a lady living at 310 Broadway, Newport, R. I., in a thankful letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y. "I seemed to have no life or energy, I was always in such misery.

"At times I suffered so much I thought that death would be better for me. I had tried doctors and different kinds of medicines but all failed to do me any good. I commenced to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and also his 'Pellets,' and had only taken one bottle when I felt much better. When I had taken four I felt entirely well. I continued to take it and today I am in every way a well woman, and I have found that life is worth living. To all women who suffer with any womb trouble I would recommend this medicine. I thank the Lord that such a doctor as Dr. Pierce was born."

Delicate, pain-weary women need not hesitate to write to Dr. Pierce. All communications are accepted in absolute confidence; never published without express permission; and always answered with earnest consideration to give the best possible advice of which a life-long professional experience is capable. Such advice is absolutely free.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

A WIFE BEATER PUNISHED.

James R. Bickle Sent to Gaol for Two Weeks for Wife-Beating.

James R. Bickle, an employee of the Carbon works, was charged at the police court on Saturday with beating his wife.

The unfortunate wife told a harrowing tale of her wretched life. The couple had been married 12 years, and it was only a few months after their marriage that the fellow began to abuse her. On Thursday last Bickle came home for dinner as usual, arriving in the house about five minutes past twelve. The table was set and the dinner was cooking ready to place before him. While the unhappy wife was bringing it in, he abused her, using language unfit for publication. He subsequently struck her, following this with kicks on the body.

A ten year old son also testified to his father's abuse of his mother.

The prisoner admitted his guilt, and pleaded for mercy, promising better conduct in the future.

The Magistrate said he would deal lightly with him. He deserved to be flogged, but he would give him two weeks in gaol at hard labor. He was taken up the hill.

SOLDIERS GO TO CHURCH.

Semi-Annual Church Parade of the 57th Battalion.

The 57th Battelion presented a very creditable appearance yesterday afternoon, on the occasion of the fall church parade of the corps. The regiment formed up at three o'clock and shortly afterwards proceeded to the George street Methodist church, where an appropriate sermon was delivered by the pastor, Rev S J Shorey. Special music was provided by the choir, and rendered in an acceptable manner. As regards numbers, this was the best showing the corps has made for some time, and the men looked very neat with belts and bayonet-frogs which formed part of the new equipment. Both bands showed up well, and their music was favorably commented upon by the large crowds gathered on the line of march.

Our "Contingent."

The Peterborough "contingent" to the Transvaal left on Saturday for Kingston where medical examinations are going on, and where a portion of the force will muster. Our contingent consisted of one man—Mr Dan Spence, who for some years has been employed by Mr F Mason looking after his greenhouse. Out of twelve who volunteered to go, five were selected, but when it came to the scratch, four of them backed out. Col. Bell, in talking to the Times gave as the impression that he was very much annoyed. Young Spence is a brave, bright, healthy and rugged young fellow, and will have little difficulty in passing inspection.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.

List of Cases to be Held at the Fall Sitting

The fall sittings of the High Cour of Justice open this afternoon at the Court House before Justice McMahon. The cases are as follows:

Taylor vs. Grand Trunk, jury case—John Taylor, farmer, Otonabee, plaintiff claims that on November 14th, 1896, while he and his wife were passing the G. T. R. crossing on the Keene road they were struck by a train and the vehicle destroyed and horses injured and he and his wife hurt and that the bell of the engine was not rung nor the whistle sounded. Taylor claims also that the railway crossing was not properly constructed. He sues for $1000 damages. Stratton and Hall for plaintiff, John Bell for defendants.

Samuel Bonner vs Corporation of South Monaghan, Wilson Montgomery, J. W. Lucas, John Riddell, Henry Hutchinson, Jas. Long and A. McCork, jury case—The defendants named were the municipal officers and Board of Health of South Monaghan. This case has been in court before. The plaintiff charges defendants with neglect of duty during an outbreak of diphtheria in his family in 1897, with the result that two children died and the family were put to great loss and inconvenience. This action has already been tried and judgment of nonsuit has been entered as against the defendants, all except Wilson Montgomery. The plaintiff sues for $600 from Wilson Montgomery. The defendants deny all the allegations in the plaintiff's statement. R. M. Ruddy, Millbrook, for plaintiff. Edmison and Dixon for defendants.

Armstrong vs James, jury case—W. H. G. Armstrong alleges that in July, 1898, the defendant, Sarah James, falsely and maliciously wrote and published words concerning the plaintiff meaning that the plaintiff was a person of unchaste character and had been guilty of adultery. He sues for $1000 damages and costs. The defendant, Sarah James, denies that she wrote the words in question with any of the meanings alleged. She claims that the words she wrote are according to their ordinary meaning true in substance and fact. Stratton and Hall for plaintiff; E. B. Stone for defendant.

McIntyre vs Thompson, non-jury case—Wm. A. McIntyre and Walter Thompson, of Otonabee, farmers on adjoining farms. Plaintiff claims that in April, 1899, and divers days defendant broke and entered plaintiff's land. He claims $100 damages and asks that defendant be restrained. The defendant says that the lands were not the plaintiff's. He claims that the plaintiff entered upon a piece of which he, the defendant, had been in undisturbed possession for over twenty years. Dumble and Johnston for plaintiff; A. P. Poussette for defendant.

Belcher vs Higgins et al., non-jury case—J. E. Belcher, trustee, vs J. C. Higgins, Margaret Higgins and Micheal Burke. Plaintiff claims that he is mortgagee of property in the town of Peterborough for $800 which J. C. Higgins covenanted to pay, also that the defendant, Michael Burke, is the purchaser of part of the lands and is entitled to a share in the equity of the redemption. The mortgage became due Nov. 1st, 1898. Plaintiff asks that he be paid $800. The defendants claim that they paid John Burnham, as solicitor for the Hammond estate, of which Mr. Belcher is trustee, $200 of the principal money and that Burke, who purchased a share of the lands, has since satisfied by payment the mortgage given by him for the balance of the borrowed money. The defendants deny that Burnham acted as agent for Burke in this matter. Defendants ask for a discharge of the mortgages. Dennistoun, Peck and Stevenson for plaintiff; Roger and Bennet for defendants Higgins. D. O'Connell for defendant Burke.

There are only two criminal charges to be investigated, both of theft. John Kirk is accused of stealing $20 from W. F. Nelson. He is the man who was arrested at Port Arthur. Eugene Bailey is charged with the theft of a horse and rig from Norwood.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

Saturday's market was largely attended.

The curlers have not yet got on their skates. The Thistle Club cannot get a meeting of its members.

Men are still at work changing the crossings on Water street. The blunders of those in charge of our streets is costing the town a pot of money.

The Town of Lindsay proposes to buy the waterworks of that town. If Peterborough don't stop wasting money on the streets she will be so far in the hole financially that she will not be able to borrow money to purchase our waterworks.

The circulation of the Times is on the upward grade.

What's the matter with giving weekly band concerts in the market building during the fall and winter?

Lindsay Post: —"No more granolithic sidewalk will be constructed this season owing to the danger of frost. Contractor Hayes, of Peterborough, yesterday gathered up his belongings and left for home." The work still goes on in Peterborough—but then, any old thing in the shape of a walk is good enough for this place, according to our street authorities.

Personals.

Mr. R. J. Griffin, of Lakefield, was in town on Saturday.

Mr. Gus Johnston, town, is the guest of Miss Ethel Westlake, Stratton, Ont.

Mr. Wm. Milburn is home from Trinity Medical College, Toronto, for a few days.

Mr. Sam. H. G. Reid, of the Rathbun Co., is spending a few days at his home in Kingston.

Hon. Henry Atchison, Mayor of Topeka, Kansas, spent a few hours in town yesterday and favored the Times with a call.

Obituary.

We regret to announce the death of Alexander McAndrew, youngest son of Mr G H Noble, which sad event occurred at his father's residence, 342 Hunter street, on the 21st instant. The young man enjoyed good health until last spring when a heavy cold developed into consumption of the bowels. He was only 20 years of age. The funeral will take place at 2:30, from the family residence, to the Little Lake cemetery.

THE CRAWFORD MONUMENT.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—Amongst some of our townspeople there has lately been expressed rather a feeling of doubt as to whether the erection of a monument to the memory of Miss Crawford be strictly within the province of the Peterborough Historical Society.

Is not a principal function of an organization of this nature, to rescue from oblivion and to preserve to posterity anything in the county likely to prove of value or of interest?

A few years ago in Buffalo, I saw unveiled an expensive bronze statue, erected by the Historical Society of that city, over the grave of Red Jacket—a Seneca Chief, the cemetery was crowded with visitors, speeches were made laudatory of the Society's work, while on all sides the President was congratulated upon having heeded the advice of Mr. Winthrop, viz: "The supreme need of this age in America is a practical conviction that progress does not consist in material prosperity but in spiritual advancement. Utility has too long been exclusively worshipped."

The Buffalo Society evidently considered this kind of duty as devolving upon them, and if they so handsomely perpetuated the memory of a dead Indian, it may not seem preposterous that our Peterborough Society, in their smaller sphere, should wish to be the medium of obtaining at least a boulder bearing the name of the talented girl who lived and suffered, and wrote so lovingly of Canada in this very town.

It has also been urged that Isabella Crawford was not a great poet "that so much fuss should be made about her."

Neither perhaps may Walter Savage Laudor be ranked among the great poets of England, yet we see the city of Florence where he is buried thus adjured—

"And thou O Florence; to thy trust
Receive and keep,
Keep safe his dedicated dust,
His sacred sleep.
So shall thy lovers come from far
Mix with thy name,
As morning-star with evening-star,
His faultless fame."

Miss Crawford was a poet, if not a great one, and her unmarked grave in the Little Lake Cemetery is a trust committed to Peterborough. It may be that in the fulfillment of that trust, the Historical Society shall be also building a monument to themselves.

No large contributions are asked for this purpose, but the public are implored to liberally buy tickets for Dr. O'Hagan's coming lecture next Thursday evening in the Y. M. C. A. hall.

Thanking you kindly, Mr. Editor, for your courtesy in publishing, I remain, sincerely yours,

M. M. Wilson.

The Trent Valley Canal.

Trenton Advocate: "As announced last week, Government Engineer Rogers, arrived in town Thursday, and has been busy making arrangements preparartory to the construction of this end of the canal. Mr Rogers has been endeavoring to rent a house, for three years, suitable for a dwelling and offices for the superintendent of the work. It begins to look as if it is the intention of the present Administration to still further carry out the policy of the late Government and complete the Trent waterway. It is understood that the work at this end of the route will be commenced at a very early date and there seems to be little doubt but that the work will be pushed ahead with some vigor. The people of Trenton and others along the route of the waterway, will insist upon such a course being pursued."

The annual meeting of the American Canoe Association will be held in Toronto next week. Mr. Walter English, of town, will be in attendance.

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to-date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surrounding villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

Mr. Bourassa's Statement.

Montreal, Que., Oct. 22.—Mr. Bourassa, M. P. for Labelle, made a speech after mass to-day at Papineauville, explaining his reasons for resigning his seat in the House of Commons. He stated that he had in 1896 condemned the action of the late Government in voting a million dollars for the purchase of rifles to arm the volunteers, and now condemned the present Government using public money to arm and equip men to engage in a war in which we had no interest. The war was not a war of the English people, but forced upon them by Mr. Chamberlain at the instigation of a British Chartered Company.

At the close of the meeting Mayor Desjardin read a resolution condemning the action of the Government and endorsing Mr. Bourassa's course in resigning as a protest. Those not in favor were requested t step aside, only three or four doing so. The meeting was not large, and little enthusiasm was manifested.

Mr. Latchford's Seat.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—The Ontario Cabinet Ministers are very busy to-day clearing up the work of their old departments before stepping into their new positions. This morning Mr. Ross declined to announce the constituency Mr. Latchford would stand for, but promised to make the announcement to-morrow. It is understood that Mr. Ross will keep Mr. Harcourt's present private secretary in the department with him.

The New Cabinet.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—The general shuffle of positions has not begun at the Parliament Buildings, and save that Mr. Hardy is preparing to depart and that Mr. Ross occupies the Council Chamber, there is little change from last week. The Ministers will remain in their old positions until the last of the week. Mr. Stratton will be here to-morrow and Mr. Latchford later in the week.

The Case of Anticosti.

Quebec, Oct. 23.—The case of M. Henri Menier, proprietor of Anticosti, against the Fox Bay settlers, for eviction, comes up before Judge Gagne in the Superior Court at Murray Bay to-day. They have signed notarial contracts before Mr. Couture, N.P., who has visited Anticosti for the purpose and will pay small annual rentals to Mr. Menier.

MORE BRITISH VICTORIES!

A Second Attack on Glencoe Defeated With 300 Boers Killed and Wounded.

HEAVY LOSSES AT BATTLE AT ELANDSLAAGTE.

General White's Force Lost Eighteen in Killed and One Hundred and Twenty in Wounded, Boer Loss is Thrice That.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Britain has struck, and struck home. She has shown to the world that she can wait for eighteen long years to efface the tarnish from her escutcheon, and has in two short weeks restored her prestige in South Africa to the position which it occupied before the lamentable error of Gladstone sowed the dragon's teeth which have produced their crop of armed men. The world has never had a more striking reminder that John Bull is not aroused for a trifle, but that when he sees that the hour is come to strike his repressed power is shown in a manner terribly overwhelming to his foes. It is barely two weeks since Oom Paul Kruger, buoyed up by the courage which ignorant obstinacy alone can give, committed the absurdity of sending an ultimatum to England in the height of her power. It was a repetition of the Helvetians defying Caesar and his legions. It has been followed by the same disastrous consequences. Within less than fourteen days four signal defeats have driven home upon the obstinate minds of the Burghers that England under Gladstone and England under Salisbury is a totally different country, and that to the British lion it is a comparatively easy matter to crumple up and send flying back to their mountain fastnesses all those who had the temerity to place foot upon his territory, fondly believing that a roar was the most prominent part of his composition.

Mafeking, Dundee Hill, Elandslaagte and Glencoe are now names to be engraved in letters of gold upon the standards of gallant British regiments who charged with cold steel in hand and spread dismay among Boer riflemen, rendering them easy prey for eager lancers who, riding with loose rein, hacked their way through fleeing masses and turned defeat into a panic.

This is Britain's reply to President Kruger's ultimatum. It was borne upon the points of British bayonets and lances and delivered personally to the representatives of the Transvaal on four battle fields. If the latest despatch is to be relied upon it has proved amply sufficient, for it is said that the Transvaal is now considering a hasty and unconditional surrender. The news that the British army at Glencoe has inflicted a second defeat upon the Boers, routing the force of General Meyer, and sending it helter-skelter across the plains with the loss of three hundred killed and wounded, should hasten the deliberation of the council which the President has called.

The invasion of Natal by the Boers has indeed proved a miserable fiasco. It has nipped in the bud the project formed by some optimistic Hollanders of forming a great Dutch republic to the south of the Sambesi. It has, moreover taught the Boers that bravery and good rifle shooting are not the only things necessary in war, but that military science counts for a good deal.' It is to be hoped they will take the lesson and return to their ostrich and sheep farms.

The capture of Adolf Shiel in the battle of Elandslaagte is of great importance to the British, seeing that the designer of the Pretoria forts was said by President Kruger to be indispensable for the defence of those strongholds, and was in fact prevented from making a journey out of the Transvaal in order that they might not be left undefended.

London, Oct. 23.—Not satisfied with their defeat at Glencoe, the Boers rallied and made a second on the British on Saturday.

The assault was that of desperate men, for the Boers abandoned their usual tactics and moved against the British camp on the plain near Glencoe.

The issue was not in doubt for a moment.

The British responded fiercely and drove the attacking force helter skelter into the hills.

Three hundred Boers were killed, and several hundred made prisoners, while a large quantity of munitions and horses were taken from the fleeing enemy.

This is the third decisive victory on the Natal border since hostilities began

The British troops are in great spirits at their successes, their elation being somewhat tempered, however, by the heavy list of casualties in their ranks.

DRIVEN OFF PELL MELL.

Glencoe Camp, Oct. 22.—Delayed in transmission—The Boer forces under General Lucas Meyers made another attack on the British position on Saturday, and enabled the British forces to score another signal success. The Boer column were driven pell mell over the plains, losing over three hundred killed and wounded. In addition, the British captured several hundred horses and made many prisoners, who are being well cared for.

The Boer hospital has been taken under the wing of the British hospital corps, as the Boers only had a single doctor with a primitive staff, who were quite unable to cope with the wounded.

As it has been raining all night long and the weather is heavy and misty, it is hardly expected that the Boers will make another attack to-day.

ELANDSLAAGTE'S BATTLE.

London, Oct. 22.—At 2 o'clock this morning the War Office posted this from General Sir Archibald Hunter:

"Ladysmith, Oct. 21.—(3.45 p.m.)—General White rode toward Elandslaagte at 2.30 p.m. The force under General French left here at 4 a.m. by road and rail to Modder's Bridge. By 2 p.m. it had been gradually strengthened to the following total: Fifth Lancers, a squadron of the Fifth Dragoon Guards, two field batteries, the Natal field Battery, the Devonshire Regiment, half the Manchester Regiment, half the Gordon Highlanders, the Imperial Light Horse and two squadrons of Natal Volunteers.

"I remain here in defence of Ladysmith with the Gloucester Regiment, half the Manchester, half the Gordon Highlanders, a mountain battery and 500 Natal Volunteers.

"I learn by telephone from an amored train a mile this side of Elandslaagte that at 5 p.m. the enemy's three guns were silenced and that out infantry were about to charge. The enemy's number this morning was estimated at 1000, and another 1000 is expected to arrive during the afternoon.

"General White's intention was to reopen the railway to Dundee and return here with his troops tonight.

"At 7.45 a report was received by telephone saying we had carried the enemy's position, capturing their camp equipment, horses and wagons. The operators on the instruments say we have some wounded, but have no deaths yet. I expect General White will be late, so I'll wire for him."

London, Oct. 22.—The War Office this afternoon published the following despatch to the Secretary of State for War, the Marquis of Lansdowne, from the general command in Natal, Sir George Stewart White, regarding an engagement yesterday at Elandslaagte, between Glencoe and Ladysmith, when the British under French routed the Transvaal forces under Gen. Jan. H. M. Kock, second in command in the Transvaal army, who was himself wounded and captured, and has since died.

"White, Commander in Natal to the Sec'y of State for War. Filed Ladysmith, Oct. 22.—10.20 a.m.—In the action at Elandslaagte yesterday the troops engaged were the following:

"Cavalry—Fifth Lancers, a squadron of the Fifth Dragoon Guards, the Imperial Light Horse and two squadrons of National Carbineers.

"Artillery—Twenty-first Field Battery, Forty-Second Field Battery and the Natal Field Battery.

"In fantry—The Devonshire Regiment, half a battalion of the Gordon Highlanders, and the Manchester Regiment. The whole force was under General French, with Col. Hamilton commanding the infantry.

"Although desultory fighting took place early in the day, while reinforcements sent out later, on ascertaining the enemy's strength were arriving from Ladysmith, the real action did not begin until 3.30 p.m. At that hour the Boers held a position of very exceptional strength, consisting of a rocky hill about a mile and a half southeast of Elandslaagte Station.

"At 3.30 p.m. our guns took a position on a ridge 4100 yards from the Boers, who all at once opened fire. This fire was generally well directed, but somewhat high. Contrary to previous experiences their shells burst well.

"The Imperial Light Horse moved towards the left of the enemy's position and two squadrons of the Fifth Lancers toward his right. During the artillery duel mounted Boers pushed out from their left and engaged the Imperial Light Horse In a few minutes the enemy's guns ceased firing and our artillery was turned on the mounted Boers, who had engaged the Imperial Light Horse and who at once fell back. After the artillery preparations our infantry advanced to the attack, supported by our guns in the second position. The Devonshires held the enemy in front while the Manchester Regiment and the Gordon Highlanders turned his left flank.

"After severe fighting our infantry carried the position. This was accomplished at 6.30 p.m., the enemy standing his ground to the last with courage and tenacity. The Fifth Lancers and a squadron of the Fifth Dragoons Guards charged thrice through the retreating Boers in the dark, doing considerable execution.

"We captured the Boer camp, with tents, wagons, horses and also two guns. The Boer losses were very considerable, including a number of wounded and unwounded prisoners. Among the former are General Jan Kock and Piet Joubert, nephew of Cammandant General Joubert. Oone goods train with supplies for the regiment was recovered.

"Oou loss, I regret to say, was heavy. It is roughly computed at 150 killed and wounded.

"The collection of the wounded over a large area in the dark and the arrangements for sending them in have thus far occupied our time and attention. A full list will go to you later.

"Our wounded and those of the enemy are now arriving byt rains. Besides Boers we have many Hollanders, Germans and other prisoners of mixed nationalities.

"The behaviour of our troops and of the Colonial forces was admirable."

THE KILLED AND WOUNDED.

London, Oct. 23.—The British troops at Elandslaagte again suffered severely so far as the officers were concerned, though not so many were killed as at Dundee. A colonel killed, a colonel wounded, a major wounded, eight captains wounded and eleven lieutenants wounded is the tally and compares favorably with that at Dundee, where ten officers were slain. Neither does the total list of dead assume such formidable dimensions, the figures being only 18 as compared with 41. The Boers were not fortunate, two of their generals being killed, and two prominent commanders being captured. The following is an official list of the British casualties at the battle of Elandsgaate:

Officers.

Imperial Light Horse—Killed—Colonel Scott-Chisholm. Wounded—Major Sampson, Captain Orr, Captain Mullens, Lieut. Curry, Lieut. Shore, Lieut. Barnes, Lieut. Forbes, Lieut. Campbell, Lieut. Norman.

Second Battery of Field Artillery—Wounded—Captain Campbell, Lieut. Manley, Staff Captain Brooke, Seventh Hussars.

First Devonshire Regiment—Wounded—Captain Lafone, Lieut. Gunning, Lieut. Hayley, Lieut. Green.

First Manchester Regiment—Wounded—Colonel Corran, Captain Melville, Capt. Nowbigging, Captain Paton, Lieutanant Banks.

Rank and File.

Fifth Lancers—Three troopers wounded.

Imperial Light Horse—Two sergeants and four troopers killed, and thirty-five non-commissioned officers and men wounded. One man missing.

Twenty-First Field Battery—Three gunners wounded.

Forty-second Field Battery—Two gunners and a driver wounded.

First Devonshire Regiment—Twenty-nine non-commissioned officers and men wounded.

First Manchester Regiment—Eleven non commissioned officers and men killed and twenty-six wounded.

Boers.

The following is the list of casualties among the prominent Boers at the battle of Elandsgaate:—

General Viljoen, killed; General Kock, wounded and captured, since dead; Gen. Kock's son, killed; Colonel Schiel, German officer commanding the artillery, wounded and a prisoner; Commander Pretorius, wounded, prisoner; several Boer standards captured.

STORY OF THE BATTLE.

Fuller accounts of Saturday's battle at Elandsgaate emphasize the splendid gallantry exhibited on both sides and the superiority of the British in a pitched battle, although the Boers fought with the greatest tenacity to the last, only yielding when further fighting was useless.

An armored train with the men of the Manchester regiment appeared on the left of Ladysmith at daybreak Saturday, in support of the Johannesburg Imperial Light horse and the Natal field artillery, with the object of opening communication at Elandsgaate. The artillery took up took up a position above the town and shelled the railway station, from which the Boers ran out, and the British Mounted Infantry, entering the place, released the English prisoners.

Good Boer Fire.

The Boers, numbering some sixteen hundred men, with three guns, occupied a commanding position. They poured such a well directed fire on the British and their scouts were so active that the British force steadily retired until reinforcements arrived when the mounted infantry was sent to drive the Boer scouts from the ridge at the right.

A large force of mixed cavalry, in the meanwhile, swept over the plain and up the hill on the right. The lancers were me twith a heavy fusilade, while on the left a British battery opened fire with good effect.

The British infantry, who had detrained in the interim, advanced over the plain and up the rocky ridge previously cleared by the cavalry. The Boer artillery dropped shrapnel into the advancing columns, but the British finally scaled the hill, whence they overlooked the broad valley to three rocky hills forming the Boers' position, their camp being in the centre. On the left the Boers had a battery of three large guns. The smaller hills were also strongly held. On the Boer right was the station in a valley on the British left. The latter's cavalry was on both flanks and a battery on the right was busy throwing shrapnel at the Boe batteries. The British infantry formed for the attack in extended order, behind the brow of a hill, the Devonshires on the left, with four companies of the Manchesters and some of the Gordons on the right.

As on Parade.

At about five p. m. the infantry advanced through the valley as steadily as on a field day. Half way down the slope they met a terrific infantry and artillery fire and the men fell rapidly and the wounded were carried to the rear. But in spite of the steady work of the Boer guns and the sharpshooters concealed behind the rocks, the increasing fire of the advancing British infantry gradually gained the upper hand and the Manchesters and the Gordons, edging towards the right,g ained the top of the ridge, thus outflanking the enemy's left.

The "Charge" Sounded.

At six the bugles sounded the charge and the British swept ahead. The Boers fought to the last, only attempintg to escape when further fighting was hopeless.

In the meantime, the Devonshires, pressing steadily up the left, were strongly opposed at the Boer camp and from the flanking hills. But they carried both at the charge, with wild cheers and bugle blasts. By seven o'clock the British had gained the position and "Cease fire" was sounded.

Three 12-pouder Nordenfelts were captured, with quantities of munitions. The Boer wounded among the rocks were numerous. The wounded were attended to.

THE QUEEN'S MESSAGE.

Balmorial Castle Oct. 22.

Lansdowne,
Secretary of State for War,
London.

"My heart bleeds for these dreadful losses again to-day. It is a great success, but I fear very dearly bought. Would you convey my warmest and heartfelt sympathy with the near relatives of the fallen and wounded and my admiration of the conduct of those they have lost."

Victoria, R. I.

AN UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER.

London, Oct. 23.—A special despatch from Cape Town, dated Sunday, says that advices received there from Pretoria report President Kruger as now being in favor of an unconditional surrender. It is added that it is expected the Executive Council will meet on Monday or Tuesday to discuss the advisability of such a step. The report, it is added, must be accepted with reserve.

ELECTRIC WITH SUSPICION.

New York, Oct. 23.—The invasion of Natal has been already repulsed, the London correspondent of the Tribune says, and the field force now in South Africa seems competent to bring the war to an end without waiting a month for the protracted voyage of the great army corps from England.

Everybody is asking why this immense body of reinforcements is going out when every bulletin of victory from Natal proves that a more moderate force would suffice. This is a mystery as dense as London's back fog. There is a glimmer of light from Paris where it is rumored that the Russian troops will not occupy Herat prematurely with the Ameer's consent. Well informed men were asserting last night that these vast preparations were not meant as a grand parade, but were a wise precaution rendered necessary by the possibility that Russia would take advantage of the occasion and make another advance on western Afghanistan, where full control could be secured over Persia. With a British army corps on the ground of South Africa, and in readiness for service in India or Afghanistan, these witnesses were ready to testify that Russia could not advance on Herat. The magnitude of the British armaments for a campaign against the burghers of the two petty republics is evidently creating in Europe what Carlyle described as an atmosphere electric with suspicion.

BOERS IN RHODESIA.

London, Oct. 21.—The first news for a long time from Rhodesia comes in a telegram from Tuli, dated October 18. The despatch says: "Major Pilson from Rhodes' drift with fifty Boers, passed Pont Drift this morning shouting that they would make the British sit up. Another body of Boers has crossed the river at Bain's drift, and is marching on MacLoutsie, where the postmaster declares that he thinks he can hold the Boers at bay. The garrison is throwing up entrenchments." This shows that the Boers have thus far achieved nothing in the direction of Rhodesia.

BULLER AND THE QUEEN.

New York, Oct. 23.—The London correspondent of the Herald says:—"It is reported that the Duke of Connaught was very anxious to take his place among his brother officers fighting for [illegible]. General Sir Redvers felt in a quandary, and tried to persuade His Royal Highness against it. The Duke, after much pleading, prevailed upon the Queen to ask Sir Redvers, but the general was equal to the occasion.

"Madame," he said, "you have many gallant officers, but only three sons. Keep them at home."

The Queen gladly acquiesced, and there the matter ended.

Hats for Fall

The shapes of hats this fall are a little more graceful, and the colors a little more beatuiful than they have ever been.

Particular men will find our Special Stiff Hat the acme of style, and our "Fedora" shape very graceful and becoming. An air of advanced season distinguishes them.

BOER STRATEGY.

The strategy of every war is determined by physical conditions and the physical features of South Africa are strongly marked. The country has been fought over by black and white for nearly a hundred years. The only novelty of this as compared with other wars between the Boers and the British colonies is that the Orange Free State is a belligerent. This may change the strategy of the war by changing its geography. Heretofore this neutral state has lain across the direct line of British advance from Cape Colony and made Natal or Bechuanaland the necessary basis of operations.

To-day the initiative is with the Boers. When their policy was defensive they massed their troops on the old lines of invasion from Natal and Bechuanaland and in assuming the offensive they started in the same way. These are the familiar routes of the Jamieson raid across the veldt from Mafeking and that up to the passes at the tongue of Natal—the triangular part between the Free State and the Transvaal. This is being attacked on all sides. Another vigorous attack is being made on Mafeking where Colonel Powell and his slender force are isolated. Other outposts are being attacked, the evident intention being to capture these and fortify them against a future British advance. Successful in this they may invade along the line of the railroad into Cape Colony, across the Free State and the Orange River to where it is joined by the British railway to Kimberley. With this view Orange Free State troops are now massed at Vryburg, Kraipand, and near Mafeking; Transvaal troops at Laing's Nek, Newcastle, Alberting, Krugersdorp and Johannesburg. If the Boers are successful in their strategy much territory that is now British will have to be reconquered. Newcastle has already been taken by the Boers and they are marching on Dundee. They have also succeeded in cutting the railway between Mafeking and Rhodesia on the north and Vryburg on the south. As there is a strong reserve force at Pietermaritzburg, Natal's capital, the Boers will not be able to cut off Ladysmith by an advance from the Zululand frontier.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

When it comes to reading about prosperity the present volume of trade can't well be overlooked.

If the automobile and the bicycle drive the horse to the race course ultimately, while it won't show that it is extinct it will be a sign it is going fast.

Where there are gold mines in a disputed region England always sees good grounds for claiming it.

AN AGED SOLDIER OF THE EMPIRE.

A MAN WHO FOUGHT UNDER THE GREAT NAPOLEON.

And One of the Few Remaining Heroes of Waterloo Passes Through Peterborough in Company With His Son—He Talks to the Times.

With hair snowy white, but still long and thick, with rosy cheek and erect figure, Leon Favier or Favor, as his Americanized family calls itself, yesterday passed through Peterborough in company with his son, on his way to visit relatives near Lindsay. He recently celebrated his 97 birthday.

Drummer boy under the great Napoleon, veteran of the Franco-Prussian war, after a life spent in his country's service, he at last finds a quiet resting place under a new flag, whose colors, the same as those of France have sheltered many refugees in times of trouble.

Leon Francois Favier was born in 1802 in a small town of Brittany. Unlike most of the inhabitants of this province, his family were staunch republicans, and when the Directoire feel transferred their allegiance to Napoleon Bonaparte.

Upon Banaparte's return from Elba, on the 20th of March, 1815, Favier, then only 13 years old, eagerly applied for some position in the army that was then being mobilized, and was enlisted as a drummer boy, in a regiment of the line.

WITH NAPOLEON AT WATERLOO.

During the Hundred Days he was drilled and trained by the greatest drill master in Europe. With his regiment the drummer boy was hurried to Waterloo. After the battle with a remnant of his comrades he hurried to Paris, where the regiment disbanded.

Favier, however, had grown into a liking for war and he fled to Austria, where he again enlisted as a drummer boy in a foot regiment. From this he was exchanged into a hussar command, and in 1845 he was promoted to a lieutenant. During that year he fought against Kossuth and the Hungarian liberators.

When he was 45 he married the daughter of a neighboring farmer. Upon the breaking out of the Franco-Prussian war he sent his two sons to their country's aid. He, however, could not sit idle and hear the daily advance of the enemy into his beloved France, so in the early months of the war he went again to Paris, although this time he was above instead of below the age limit. The need of men was so great that he was enrolled in a dragoon regiment as sergeant. He went through many of the battles of the war, winning a cross of honor for distinguished gallantry under fire and for saving his major's life in August, 1870.

THE WARRIOR'S OLD AGE.

For some time the Favor family, as they now call themselves, lived near Montreal. About ten years ago they came to Ontario, where they have since lived.

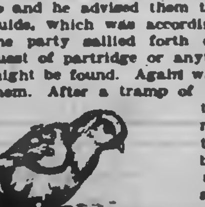
The ancient drummer boy was found at the Grand Trunk station yesterday by a reporter of the Times. The old gentleman smilingly told of his numerous campaigns, his face expressing his joy when he recalled a victory, or his sorrow when it was a defeat. On his breast is a medal of honor, on the wall a battered drum stick and in his heart the glory of Napoleon.

OUT FOR GAME.

Mr. Alman Bulkley's Visit to the North Country.

Mr. Alman Bulkley, a prominent Chicago lawyer, spent a few days in this locality last week, a guest of his neice, Mrs. T. W. Martin. During his brief stay, Mr. Martin, who is the soul of hospitality, took his guest out to see our back lakes. They drove to Buckhorn, and put up at Tom Eastwood's, being accompanied by Mrs. Martin and Miss Helen Bulkley, only daughter of the distinguished guest.

Armed with repeating rifles and shot guns, the male members of the party started out bright and early in quest of game, in charge of a guide. They travelled many miles without seeing anything larger than a squirrel, and returned in the cool shades of the evening, weary with climbing over rocks and boulders, empty-handed. This was hardly what Mr. Martin had led his guest to expect, so they determined to make another try. Tom Eastwood was appealed to and he advised them to change their guide, which was accordingly done, and the party sallied forth once more in quest of partridge or anything else that might be found. Again was fate against them. After a tramp of 15 or 20 miles, they returned more weary than before bearing one small bird as a result of their combined efforts. The Times went across the road to the Spot Cash Grocery and took a snap shot of the "partridge," a cut of which we print herewith.



The party returned to town, having spent a very enjoyable time, notwithstanding their hard luck. Mr. Bulkley is very favourably impressed with the natural beauty of our inland lakes, he having been invited to take a trip as far as Burleigh on the Government steamer.

Mr. and Miss Bulkley left for home on Saturday.

THE OLYMPIC EXCURSION AND THE [illegible] BAND.

Reminiscenses of the Great Event of Last June by the Times Musical Poet.

When the Olympic Club got started on its trip to Stoney Lake,
And everybody was happy, and had all that they could take
Of fun and roaring frolic, of every modern brand,
But best of all to hear was, the famous
Gliddon's band.

"Way Down in Old Kentucky"—such tunes as make you sigh;
And gentle "Annie Laurie," and "Comin'
Thro' the Rye;"
And "Cake Walk" "Midnight Alarm,"— a feller couldn't stand
And keep his feet from shufflin' that day, with Gliddon's Band!

President Lech and Ab. Stratton—they threw their coats aside;
Then Bob Fair he shouted: "Here! make the circle wide!"
The President took the centre—the other gave command;
They danced a Georgia break-down that day to Gliddon's Band!

Then in came Billy Bunton, as lively as could be;
He shouted to the doctor: "Make room
—make room for me!"
Then Jimuel Lundy joined 'em — 'twas fun on every hand,
To see those chaps adancing that day, to Gliddon's Band!

They danced all round the circle—'twas glory in yer soul,
And "Keep the music going, and let the music roll!
This ain't no time for sighin' in this delighted land!"
"Hooray!" the people shouted—"Hooray
for Gliddon's Band!"

There never was such music, or, such a merry day;
The young and old alike danced many hours away!
And when the trip was over, you heard on every hand:
"Three cheers for the Olympic, and one for Gliddon's Band!"

MEN CURED FREE.

A most successful remedy has been found for sexual weakness, such as impotency, varicocele, shrunken organs, nervous debility, lost manhood, night emissions, premature discharge and all other results of self-abuse or excesses. It cures any case of the difficulty, never fails to restore the organs to full natural strength and vigor. The Doctor who made this wonderful discovery wants to let every man know about it. He will therefore send the receipt giving the various ingredients to be used so that all men at a trifling expense can cure themselves. He sends the receipt free, and all the reader need do is to send his name and address to L.W. Knapp, M.D. 1011 Hull Bldg., Detroit, Mich., requesting the free receipt as reported in this paper. It is a generous offer, and all men ought to be glad to have such an opportunity.

THE TURF REVIEW.

Narion, 3, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is said to be showing a good gait and good speed this year.

It is said that Rose Croix, 2:13¼ at three years, has shown a mile in 2:15 at the pace for McHenry, at Pleasanton, Cal.

Nelly R, ch. m., 2:28, by Red Cloud, although 18 years old, has never had a foal until this year. It is by Dan T, 2:08¾.

A horse with the peculiar name of Esaw, by Seesaw, dam by Independence, is to be raced this year by D. H. McGill.

All reports to the contrary notwithstanding, it is thought that Willie O. Foote will be able to be in the sulky this season.

There is a great deal of talk about Directly, 2:03¾, beating all the pacers out this year and taking a record faster than 2:00 besides.

Since the sale of Advertiser, Palo Alto farm has only three sons of Electioneer remaining in the stud, Altire, Azmoor and Mendocino.

A race for a purse of $1,000 is projected for July 4, at Youngstown, O., with Lord Vincent, 2:16½; La Honda, 2:12¼ pacing, and Oddity, 2:10¼ pacing, among the starters.

The 3-year-old bay filly Marion, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanks, is eligible to start in the New England $10,000 Futurity, and is likely to do so if the reports of the speed she is showing are correct.

The first new 2:30 trotter of the year is a dun gelding named Dot, breeding unknown, who took the first heat of the 2:40 race at Norfolk, Va., May 16, in 2:27½.—

A new comedy called "Wheels Within Wheels" is expected to go the rounds.

An elaborate revival of Shakespeare's tragedy of "Macbeth" will be the feature of Frederick Warde's repertory next season.

It is unofficially announced that Rudyard Kipling is to write the fairy play to be produced at the London Lyceum next season.

Some German statistician has discovered that stage dancing is conducive to longevity. Taglioni lived to be 80 and Fanny Elssler to be 74.

Rose Coghlan has been re-engaged for her original role of "Mlle. Fifi" for next season, the piece to open its tour in August in Chicago.

BEE BUZZES.

Beeswax is dark because of the impurities mixed with it.

All excess of drone comb should be removed from the hive.

Bees start to work earlier if the hives face the south or east.

It is essential during hot weather that the hives be well ventilated.

Avoid blowing your breath among the bees while handling the comb.

Dirt and filth accumulating on the bottom boards make a propagating place for the moths.

Bees reared in the spring and summer are shorter lived than those reared later in the season.

The swarming season usually begins about 10 or 20 days after white clover comes into bloom.

Bees will enter a cool hive much more readily than one which had been baked in the hot sun all day.

Honey properly kept will improve with age. The older it is the better it will be, but it must be kept dry.

All bees should be examined now and the hives thoroughly cleaned. No trash of any kind should be left on the bottom boards.—St. Louis Republic.

His Prerogative.

Speaking about speeches in the senate, Don Cameron had the record for the senator with the longest service and the shortest speech. The then senator from Pennsylvania spent a good deal of time in the senate chamber, but he always lolled around in his chair, apparently taking no interest in the proceedings. The whole session seemed to bore him until late in the afternoon, when he used to put enough energy in himself to rise in his seat and say to the vice president, "I move the senate adjourn." Toward the end of his service in the senate Mr. Cameron seemed to consider this motion his prerogative, and no one disputed his claim, as it seemed to be the only way of according his presence.

WAS A GREAT VICTORY, BUT AT GREAT PRICE!

British Loss 40 Men Men Killed and 172 Wounded as a Result of Their Gallant Up-Hill Charge on the Boers.

A GRAPHIC STORY OF THE GREAT BATTLE.

The Boers Are Completely Routed After a Hot Engagement—Irishmen in Front of the Fight—A Fierce Artillery Duel at the Outset—Boer Sharpshooters Pick Off British Officers.

New York, Oct. 21.—The Journal contains the following cabled account of the engagement between the British and the Boers at Glencoe, Natal, furnished by its correspondent at the scene of operations, and dated Glencoe, Natal, Oct. 20:—

After a week of slow crawling through Laing's Nek down into Natal, taking Charlestown, Newcastle and other abandoned towns on the way, the Boer army, commanded by General Joubert, massed at Dannhauser, and prepared for an attack on the British. We knew their every movement, and were prepared for them.

General Symonds dad established his little army of 4,000 men in an entrenched camp, half way between Glencoe and Dundee, in order to protect both towns. The Boers moved down yesterday to Hattingspruit, on the railway, seven miles north of Glencoe, cautiously feeling their way along. They were nearly double our number, but not a man in camp felt the least fear of the result of the forthcoming fight. Last night was a busy one. An attack was certain at daylight. The scouts informed us that the Boers were in great force with a dozen cannon. General Symonds made a thorough inspection of the troops, the ammunition and the entrenchments, and was ready for any kind of attack. The men were enthusiastic and eager for battle.

Just Before the Battle.

All during yesterday there had been little skirmishes and feints along the outposts, which ceased at nightfall. Our men were given a good supper and ordered to sleep on their arms. Pickets were doubled and every precaution was taken against a surprise during the night. The Boers dragged their guns to the top of Smith's Hill, two and a half miles north of the camp, and at the earliest dawn they opened fire. The range, however, was too ggreat for light field guns. They used plugged shells, which fell short, exploding some distance away. The Boer practice soon becoming better, led General Symonds to determine to sally out and meet them on their own ground. Our force consisted of the 13th, 67th and 69th Field Batteries, 18th Hussars, Natal Mounted Volunteers, First Battalion of Leicestershire Regiment, First King's Own Rifles, Second Dublin Fusiliers, and several companies of regular mounted infantry and field hospital corps.

Guns Opened on Boers.

While the troops were making ready our guns opened on the Boers. A fierce artillery duel followed for an hour. The batteries did fine work, succeding in silencing several of the enemy's guns. The weather was fine and clear, the sun was shining brightly, and it was warm. The men cast aside their heavy clothes and prepared for hot work ahead. The Boer army, massed on the hill, was sheltered behind a slope from our artillery, but as soon as they saw our preparations to advance they formed in an extended line of battle. The ground between the camp and the hill in the rolling plain was no shelter for the British as they dashed across. Under the cover of a heavy artillery fire the troops marched out of the camp. The King's Rifles and Dublin Fusiliers led the way in extended order. The dash across the plain was deadly. The Boer volleys of musketry swept throuhg our ranks, but the men kept on without flinching. Our cavalry swept around the flanks and the infantry made a dash and dropped to the ground to avoid the volleys from the Boers. Gradually the foot of the hill was gained, and then began the final charge up the slope. Nothing could stop the Irishmen. It was tremendously hot. The roar of fire was incessant.

British Gain the Hill.

As our men gained the hill our artillery ceased firing for fear of hitting the British, and hastened forward to secure a better position. General Symonds was close behind his men inspiring them with courage. The charge up the hill was magnificent. Nothing could stop our men. They swarmed over the summit and the Boers fell back in disorder. In fifteen minutes more the Boers were routed and fleeing down the slope. Their officers succeded in rallying them and fierce fighting again followed. The Hussars galloped around the sides of the hill and attempted to outflank the enemy. It was here that General Symonds fell. He was shot through the body and fatally wounded. The command then devolved on General Yule. With occasional lulls fighting continued two hours longer. Finally at 1.30 o'clock the Boers gave way at all points and fled northward. Our cavalry and field artillery continued the pursuit, capturing many. Our losses have been sadly heavy, but the victory is complete. Smith Hill, the position taken, was almost inaccessible. It is very steep, and the British were forced to advance 3,500 yards in face of a murderous fire to reach its base.

After the Battle.

The Journal correspondent, cabling today says:—The victory of the British forces over the Boers in the front of this position is known today to be greater than was previously supposed. The pursuit of the fleeing enemy was not terminated at nightfall, and this morning fighting with the Boer detachments that had been overtaken has been resumed to the north of Glencoe. Rain has handicapped both the pursued and the pursuers, but great numbers of Boer fugitives have been captured. The storm greatly increased the sufferings [illegible]. The field and camp hospitals [illegible] with Boer and British sufferers who fell in the battle, and the [illegible] have been choked with heavily laden ambulances. The burial parties are already busy disposing of the dead mostly at the very places where they fell. The chief pre-occupation of the hour is to make the best of victory, by frustrating once and for all concentration of the Boer forces upon the attempted isolation of Glencoe and Ladysmith. The British loss is estimated at 300, and that of the Boers as thrice as many.

The list of British officers killed and wounded, exceeds, as in the war of 1880, all the usual percentages of the number of men engaged. The Boer sharpshooters devoted almost their entire attention apparently to picking them off. General Yule, after visiting Smith Hill, expresses the opinion that if properly defended it would be impregnable. That the British carried it by storm, now seems almost incredible.

THE REGIMENTS ENGAGED.

London, Oct. 21.—War talk reigns supreme everywhere in England. London is teeming with people notable socially, but what cares London for society when troops are piling into transports, and when everybody, from Her Majesty down, is saying "good-bye," "God bless you," and "godo luck to you."

The news of yesterday's fighting in Natal made a tremendous sensation, and the pluck and dash of the King's Royal Rifles and the Dublin Fusiliers greatly stimulated the universal enthusiasm. The total British force at Camp Glencoe, according to the reports immediately preceding the announcement of the engagement, include:

The Eighteenth Hussars, Natal Mounted Volunteers, the First Battalion of the Leicestershire Regiment, First King's Royal Rifles, Second Dublin Fusiliers, Devonshire Regiment, Dorsetshire Regiment, several companies of mounted infantry, three field batteries, total, four thousand men.

These were opposed to a Boer force estimated at twice that number, and possibly reaching a higher figure. This very disparity between the combatants gives an additional element of fascination to the history of the day.

WON'T INVADE CAPE COLONY.

Cape Town, Oct. 21. — Evening — Trains to and from Aliwal North are again running. The fear of a Boer invasion of Cape Colony has subsided and it is generally believed that the commandos have moed to the Basuto border on account of a report of a great massing of the Basutos to raid the Orange Free State in revenge for the robbery and maltreatment of their countrymen. The news of the evacuation of Vryburg has had a bad effect on the Dutch inhabitants of the Rand.

THE NAVAL MOVEMENTS.

London, Oct. 21.—There is considerable speculation regarding the numerous naval movements. The Admiralty has ordered the paying off of the crews of four ships of the training squadron, the Raleigh, Volage, Champion and Cleopatra. This is supposed to be because the crews will be required for the special service squadron which, it is assumed, will be utilised for the defence of home waters.

The officers of the channel squadron, which is under orders to proceed to Gibraltar next Tuesday, believe it is going there for guard duty, as the garrison at the Rock is very weak at present.

REVENGE FOR FASHODA.

London, Oct. 21.—The bitter anti-British feeling that exists in France is voiced in its extreme manifestation by the Echo de Paris, which says:—"We shall join in the whispered prayer that out there beyond the seas and beyond immense Africa, General Joubert, a good old round-shouldered general, whose ancestors were Frenchmen, will give us our revenge, our herois revenge for Fashoda."

TO PUNISH NON-COMBATANTS.

London, Oct. 21.—One of the problems left entirely to General Sir Redvers Buller, in supreme command, is the punishment of non-combatants who take part in the hostilities. The task of distinguishing their status is very difficult, as comparatively few Boers wear a uniform. It is said that the treatment he will administer to the German and Irish volunteers under the Transvaal flag will not be more merciful than were Von Moltke's dealings with the Franc-Tireurs.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. A CLEVER RUSE.

The Auctioneer Was Quick Witted and Finally Made a Sale.

An auctioneer on East Washington street—one of those redoubtable individuals commonly termed "slick"—was the cause of a farcical scene recently that would have done credit to a burlesque show. He had been talking industriously for a long time to a crowd of interested but enthusiastic listeners.

The affable auctioneer conscientiously went through his repertory from beginning to end, but somehow the crowd did not "warm up" to him—to quote his own language. Finally, with a dark look that bordered on despair, he grabbed up a well known pasteboard hatbox containing about 50 spools of silk thread of different colors. With the grace of a conjurer he extracted five of the spools, and, arraying them in a tempting semicircle on the counter, announced that they were "to go at any price."

But the audience, while admitting with nods of approval that they were good spools of thread, displayed no marked inclination to become excited over them. Not a bid was offered.

"I'll sell 'em for 10 cents," suggested the auctioneer timidly. It was plain from the tone of his voice that he was losing faith in himself and in all the world. There were no takers. The man of the red flag added three more spools to the semicircle. "All for 10 cents," he declared. But thread stock was far below par. The auctioneer caught up all the spools from the counter and flung them into the box with an impressive gesture. The light of inspiration flashed from his eyes.

"The whole blamed box for 10 cents!" he cried.

"I'll take it," was the prompt response, and a little man in a washed out overcoat and wearer of red chin whiskers stepped out from the crowd with a dirty 10 cent piece in his upraised hand. The auctioneer clutched the money feverishly, and, turning the box upside down so that all the spools dropped into a basket on the counter, he handed the worthless piece of ancient pasteboard to the anxious customer. A roar of hilarious laughter rose from the crowd that was heard throughout that neighborhood.

"I don't want your blamed old box!" wailed the unfortunate purchaser.

"You said you'd take it," replied the auctioneer. "I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came in a strong chorus from the delighted audience.

"I bought the spools!"

"No, you didn't! You bought the box! I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came the answer again, stronger than ever. The red whiskered man stalked indignantly from the place with the box under his arm.

"What you going to do with it?" yelled the crowd.

"That's what!" cried the speculator as he held the pasteboard box in both hands, football fashion, and kicked it vigorously into the middle of Washington street.

Woes of Millionaires.

An English millionaire has just been adjudged incapable of looking after his property. He imagines himself the Prince of Wales.

Some years ago a rich merchant took the idea that he was penniless. His sons, to stop his worrying, assured him they had rescued his business and was to continue it. They offered him a clerkship at a small salary in his own office. He took it and kept at work nearly 20 years. When he died, he left nearly $15,000,000.

Two English millionaires were noted for their parsimony. One picked up and smoked cigar ends. The other, after fine receptions in his house, would go around carefully collecting candle ends to be used again. Neither of these men was insane. Both were shrewd in business.

Another millionaire imagined for a considerable time that he was a squirrel, and would eat nothing but nuts.

Another was too parsimonious even to buy himself a warm overcoat. Some of his friends made him a present of one, and he promptly sold it at secondhand and pocketed the money.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Was Hanged Over Again.

G. W. Stevens, who traveled extensively in India, tells the following interesting story: A Pathan was being hanged, when the rope broke. The warder bade him go up on to the scaffold again, but he objected. "No," he said, "I was sentenced to be hanged, and hanged I've been."

"Not so, friend," argued the warder; "you were sentenced to be hanged until you were dead, and you're not dead."

It was a new view to the Pathan, and he turned to the superintendent. "Is that right, sahib?"

"Yes, that's right."

"Very well. I didn't understand," and he went composedly up the steps and was hanged again like a man.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

What He Really Owed.

"Doctor," said the grateful patient, seizing the physician's hand, "I shall never forget that to you I owe my life."

"You exaggerate," returned the doctor mildly. "You owe me only for 15 visits. That is the point which I hope you will not fail to remember."

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected In Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the region of myth and fable. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons, do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 6½ inches by 6½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

The Birds Save Us.

A French naturalist says that if the world were to become birdless man could not inhabit it after nine years' time. In spite of all the sprays and poisons that could be manufactured for the destruction of insects the bugs and slugs would simply eat up orchards and crops.

MR. BOURASSA RESIGNS.

Liberal M. P. for Labelle Urges War on the Government for its Transvaal Policy

Montreal, Oct. 21.—J. Henri Bourassa, Liberal M.P. for Labelle, has resigned his seat in Parliament. He urges as cause for his action the sending of a Canadian contingent to the Transvaal, and in a letter to Premier Laurier condemns the conduct of the Government in the most energetic terms. Parliament, he insists, should have been consulted, and that without Parliament's sanction the sending of the troops is unconstitutional. While asserting his unswerving loyalty to the Queen and Empire, Mr. Bourassa declares that British interests are not threatened by the trouble in the Transvaal, that the war has already been condemned by enlightened statesmen of England and that it has no bearing on the interests of Canada.

"The question," he insists, "is whether the Canadian people shall be called upon to take part in all the wars of the empire without the doors of the Imperial Parliament and Cabinet being opened to them, without even being consulted through their representatives and their Government on the advisability of those bloody contests. I have approved and still approve of your administrative policy. But I look upon this last action as the initial step of a new constitutional policy which the majority of your supporters have always denounced, and upon which you have neer consulted either Parliament or the electorate."

Concluding, Mr. Bourassa promises to place the question loyally before the electors of Labelle and appeal to them on that issue.

The Telltale Eye.

"No matter how self-possessed a man may appear on the surface," said a close observer, "there are certain involuntary movements by which he will always betray himself to minute scrutiny. To illustrate the point, here's a neat little parlor trick in mind reading.

Seat yourself directly in front of your subject and tell him to hook his finger tips together before his chest and pull as hard as he can, at the same time thinking intently of some letter of the alphabet. Then look fixedly at his right eye and repeat the letters aloud, beginning with A. When you come to the one he is thinking about, a swift, indescribable change will flash across the pupil. It is purely unconscious and involuntary, and no human being alive can prevent it. The purpose of the finger tip pulling is merely to distract his thoughts and keep him from baffling you by concentration of will. Try it some time."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Bringing Up the Average.

Old Rufus Gogblink, a slow, deliberate sort of man, dropped in one day in a casual sort of way to see his friend, Stephen Nobbler. It was the first time he had been in to see Stephen in 42 years.

"Um-m! You don't come in very often, Rufus," said Mr. Nobbler.

"No," said Mr. Gogblink.

But he went in to see his friend Mr. Nobbler again the very next day.

"Um-m! You're coming in pretty often now, Rufus," said Mr. Nobbler.

"Ya-as," said Mr. Gogblink. "I'm sort a' bringing up the average."—New

How They Used to Kill.

In repairing an old house in Durham, England, not long ago the workmen found several ancient death warrants bearing the signature of the Duke of Portland, minister of King George III. One of them, dated June, 1798, gives an idea of what legal hanging and quartering were like in those days. It runs:

"Whereas, James O'Coigley, having been attainted of high treason and had sentence passed upon him to be drawn upon a hurdle to the place of execution and to be there hanged by the neck, but not until he is dead, but that, being alive, he shall be taken down and his bowels taken out and burned before his face, that his head shall be severed from his body and his body divided into four parts, and that his head and body shall be disposed of as we think fit, and whereas we think fit to remit that part of the sentence directing the burning of his bowels and dividing the body into four parts, our will and pleasure is that he shall be drawn and hanged and have his head severed from his body."

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" cried the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore?" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to break off. "Didn't that man back there yell, 'Toot, mon!' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman, and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and set to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and heavings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproars of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang, and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall, flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Cultivate the young orchard thoroughly early in the season.

In selecting trees, take those with smooth, healthy looking bark.

Ground bone is good for small fruit plants, grapevines and bearing apple orchards.

The deeper the culture the larger the reserve of moisture for the roots in time of drought. To secure quick growth prepare the soil deeply.

Bone dust for raspberries and blackberries may be simply scattered broadcast over the ground, as the necessary cultivation will work it sufficiently in with the soil.

While peach seedlings are usually healthier and last longer than budded trees, one is never sure what kind of fruit a seedling will produce when it comes into bearing.—Exchange

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was gleaned from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses, with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

An Unprofitable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—Youth's Companion.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and sassy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately. I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him. I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my dernedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

"DEATH IN THE POT."

"Death in the pot." That sentence condenses the story of a tragedy. A little family gathering. A fine dinner cooked in the large copper kettle long disused, and the entire family poisoned by the accumulated verdigris. The story was told by the newspapers from one end of the land to the other. But it was soon forgotten. The moral of it is, that the purest of food, put into a foul vessel, instead of ministering to life may become a minister of death.

If the stomach is diseased it is like the poisonous kettle, which taints everything that goes into it. The symptoms are irregular appetite, undue fullness after eating, distressed feeling in the stomach, of fluttering and sinking sensations, palpitation, dizziness, ringing in ears, sour or bitter risings and constipation. Not all these symptoms may be present at the same time, but any of them shows disease in the digestive or alimentary tract.

The intimate relation of the stomach to the blood, heart, liver and lungs makes it a medical maxim in exploring the causes of obscure diseases to "start with the stomach." It is upon this principle that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery effects so many and such remarkable cures. It cleanses the stomach and the system is cleansed. It increases the action of the blood making glands, and the body is enriched by the purified blood. It strengthens the digestive or nutritive organs and these strengthen the whole body by increasing the quantity and quality of its nourishment. It carries off the poisonous, effete matter. In this way it re-establishes health, banishing the bodily aches, which are but symptoms of the stomach's condition.

All medicine dealers sell "Golden Medical Discovery." If they try to substitute something else, it is because "something else" pays better. Insist on "Golden Medical Discovery" if you want to be cured.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

Stowell reports on this cropping $16 80 in gold, immediately upon the result becoming known in Republic, a Mining Supt., through our agent there, Texas Angel, negotiated the purchase of $1,000 worth of Treasurer's stock, the company has authorised me to place a small amount of this stock at 3½cts. Remember the Fairfax and Jim. Hill are less than 800 feet from the Mountain Lion, which is now $1.60 per share, and is an investment at that. The Fairfax at 3½ cts., is a speculation. Work is to be pushed.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

FALL SITTINGS OF THE COURT BEFORE JUSTICE McMAHON.

The Opening of the Court Yesterday—Large Number of Spectators present.

The fall session of the High Court of Justice opened at the Court House yesterday afternoon at one o'clock before Justice McMahon. There was quite a large attendance.

The Grand Jury were empanelled as follows:—J B Peoples, Belmont, chairman, Andrew Allison, Peterborough, J H Burnwell, Smith, Wm. M Bell, Smith, F Bartlett, Peterborough, R Crowe, Cummer, Geoffrey Dinsdale, Allandale, Jos Forster, Monaghan, Sylvester Fife, Otonabee, T M Hunten, Monaghan, J Minogue, Chandos, Eugene Moloney, Ennismore, J H Roper, Peterborough.

Among the counsel present were Messrs E B Osler, Q C, Toronto, W H Moore, Geo Edmison, R M Ruddy, Millbrook, W A Stratton, Q.C., R R Hall, D O'Connell, G M Rogers, E B Stone, D W Dumble and E B Edwards, Q C.

Justice McMahon, in addressing the Grand Jury, stated that the County of Peterborough was to be congratulated on its comparative freedom from crime. Only two criminal cases were to come before them. In this county, as in most of the other counties of Ontario, the county judge's criminal court disposes of perhaps three-fourths of the cases that are sent up for trial. In this way the expense of the administration of justice has been greatly curtailed. The judge then advised the jury on the case of Eugene Bailey, who is charged with stealing a horse and rig at Norwood, and explained to them what constituted theft. He also dealt with the charge against John Kirk, accused of the theft of $20 from W F Nelson.

The Grand Jury adjourned to consider these charges and the suit of Taylor vs the Grand Trunk Railway Co. was taken up. W A Stratton, Q.C., appeared for the plaintiff and E B Osler, Q.C., for the defendant.

Forgot Their Dogs.

Word was received yesterday from the Gold Lake Hunting Club that the lodge had been completed. The buttermilk tank was still holding out, although there are grave chances of its running dry before a relief party arrives with a fresh supply. Should such a calamity occur special runners will be despatched at once with instructions to rush in supplies as fast as horses can travel. It is hoped however, that the second division will arrive with a substantial cargo before the tank gives out. While the party were at Buckhorn, they tied up the dogs in Tom Eastwood's barn, and went off without them. It appears that the difficulty experienced in transporting so much buttermilk over the rough roads, and the anxiety of the club that the tank would not get cracked and thus allow the buttermilk to escape, caused them to forget all about the dogs. The dogs are still at Eastwood's and are giving nightly concerts to the disgust of Tom and his numerous guests.

A CITIZENS' BANQUET.

To Be Tendered Hon. Mr Stratton is Proposed by Mayor Davis.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—At the suggestion of a number of citizens of both shades of politics, I think it is befitting under the circumstances that entirely apart from politics, and viewed in the light of our mutual relation as citizens, that a banquet should be tendered Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary in the new Ontario Cabinet. As citizens irrespective of politics our aim should be to co-operate harmoniously in the work of advancing the interests of the town, and on the same principle it seems to me that it would be a graceful and becoming act to show our appreciation of the honor brought upon the town in the selection of one of its most respected citizens as a Minister of the Crown. Mr. Stratton has always been a pride to the town, a life-long resident, and has lost no opportunities that I know of to serve its interests; therefore, as representing the citizens of all shades of political opinion, and on behalf of citizens, as citizens only, I take the liberty of suggesting that a banquet to be considered as a tribute from the citizens of the town be tendered to Mr. Stratton at as early a date as can conveniently be arranged. To this end I would intimate that I should be glad to meet as many prominent citizens as possible at my office, George street, on Tuesday evening, at eight o'clock, to consider any suggestions, and if it meets approval to arrange details accordingly.

Yours truly,
A. L. DAVIS,
Mayor

The Stints.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Is it true that there has been no changes made in the quantity and quality of cement used on the walks? I was told yesterday that the proportion of cement that is now being put in is five and a half bags to a boxful instead of nine bags. Surely this cannot be possible? If so who is to blame?

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I am,
Yours faithfully,
A RATEPAYER

This pavement matter is now being investigated by the County Judge. As we understand it, the Town Engineer gave instructions to use the lesser quantities of cement, for some unaccountable reason, and the contractors, of course, followed instructions. No one could, under such circumstances, blame the contractors. We will withhold further comment until after the Judge has reported.—Ed. Times.

KEENE.

There is a strong feeling that a club room, reading room, Mechanics' Institute, or something of this kind is quite desirable in the village. Philanthropic villagers should aid this good work and then our young men would not have to resort to street corners and hotels for social intercourse.

A very commodious waiting room has been added to the skating ring. It is in three divisions, a ladies waiting room a general waiting room and a room for the hockey and curling club.

Mrs. Baker and family leaves this week for Pennsylvania, where they will join Mr. Baker, who has been there for some years past.

The Keene Curling Club met on Monday evening when the following officers were elected: President, Robert McIntyre; Vice-Pres., Thos. Stockdale; Sec.-Treas., Dr. Shaw. Committee, S. Mather, M. Kennaley, H. J. English and representatives to Association, Mr. Russell and Wm. Campbell.

Miss Susie Burnham is spending a few days with her grandfather, Mr. John McLachlin.

The grounds about the much admired parsonage is being still further beautified this week by grading, etc.

J. M. Quinn of Toronto, carries off the honors for the fishing season. In two weeks he has captured 21 lunge, three of which weighed respectively 18, 22 and 25 pounds. What lake affords better fishing.

Miss Anna Heffernan of Hunter st., Peterborough, was the guest of Miss M. Quinn last week.

The Hockey club are requested to re-assemble on Saturday evening to discuss business.

How to Improve His Play.

A gentleman who had been arduously practising golf on the Auburn links, and who was making fair progress, was very fond of playing with ladies. One day, in starting on a round with a lady, he said to his caddie, who happened to be a good player, "Now, caddie, I want to improve my game. If you see me doing anything wrong, correct me, and give me any hints you think necessary." The caddie said he would, and after two or three holes had been played (in which the ladies had not distinguished themselves) he called his employer aside and whispered: "Mr. A., if you want to improve your golf, dinna play wi' wimmen'."

The Way They Do in Cobourg.

The pavement being put down on Division St. bids fair to be superior to any that has been done in the past by contractors. The material is of the very best, and the workmanship shows that every care is being taken to make a first-class job of it. There is no reason why every foot that is put down in future should not be done by the town under the direct supervision of the Streets Committee and the Street Inspector. The work would be more satisfactory and cheaper in the end.

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to-date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surrounding villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

A MEMBER SUSPENDED

Patrick O'Brien Says Chamberlain's Hands Are Bloody.

HE REFUSES TO WITHDRAW

And the House on a Vote of 316 to 26 Compels His Withdrawal.

An Exciting Scene in the British House of Commons When an Irish Member Denounced Chamberlain.

London, Oct. 24.—In the House of Commons yesterday afternoon the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks Beach, made a statement on the question of the expenditure entailed by the Transvaal war. He said the expenditure for the year had been increased by the supplementary vote to $[illegible], but, he added, the revenue had increased, and he expected there would be an increase of $15,000,000 over his estimate of the revenue. There would be a considerable contribution towards the unforseen expenditure, and would leave about $35,000,000 to be provided. He thought that the money should be raised by a temporary addition to the floating debt. The Chancellor of the Exchequer therefore asked for power to raise $40,000,000 by treasury bills, the whole question of repayment and the question of fresh taxation to be left over to the next financial year.

Who Will Pay?

As British colonies had been invaded, he considered it to be consistent with all the laws of war if, when it was brought to a successful termination, the Transvaal taxpayer should at any rate have to bear part of the cost. He believed that under a pure and honest government it would be perfectly possible for the Transvaal to bear not only the ordinary expenses of government, but also to provide a reasonable sum towards the expenses of the war, with a reduction at the same time of the taxation of the gold fields.

Continuing, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach said: "If these anticipations are not fulfilled and the sum borrowed proves to be but part of the total cost of the war, we shall appeal to your patriotism next April. If fresh taxation were introduced now it might prolong the debate and produce a division which might be entirely misunderstood abroad.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the leader of the Opposition, agreed that it was not desirable to show a sign of dissension.

389 to 28.

Eventually the proposals of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach were agreed to by a vote of

An Idiotical Remark.

Mr. Patrick O'brien, POarnellite member for Kilkenny City, declared that the hands of the British Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, were as much stained with blood as those of any murderer who had ever mounted the scaffold.

The Speaker called upon Mr. O'Brien to withdraw his remark, but he refused ot do so, whereupon the House, by a vote of 316 to 26, resolved to suspend him, and he left the House remarking:

"You had better bring up another army corps, unless you want it somewhere else."

The House then adjourned.

AN ATTACK UPON THE EMPIRE.

Russia and France May Seize the Present Opportunity.

London, Oct. 24—The sailing of the Channel squadron to-day for Gibraltar is now regarded by the keenest observers as an indication that some unexpected attack upon British interests is possible. The magnitude of the preparations for the war, which are out of all proportion to the requirements of the military situation can be adequately explained on the theory that the Government suspected tha tsome great power would be tempted to seize the opportunity for striking a sudden blow or carrying out a deeply cherished policy.

Russia May Strike.

The quarter from which an attack of this kind may come is unmistakable. The Russian press has had license to criticize the English policy in South Africa in the most acrid way, and a rumor that Herat may be occupied is already in the air. British commercial interests in Persia are so large that a Russian seizure of the commanding position in western Afghanistan would be a serious blow, aimed directly against free trade. That seems a more likely menace than the forcing of the Dardanelles by the Russian Black Sea fleet.

Understanding With Germany.

The movement of a powerful French fleet to the Levant coincides with the circulation of a rumor that the Russian advance may be resumed in Asia while England is preoccupied with the war in South Africa. It also fits in with the explanation of a secret agreement between England and Germany which I have already given in previous despatches. This was that England, in return for a free hand in South Africa in settling the Transvaal question, had agreed not to make any hostile use of her fleet if the German Emperor were to decide to follow up his visit to Jerusalem with a serious attempt o colonize any portion of Asia Minor and to bring it under German influence.

TORONTO MEN THERE.

Four Toronto men figured in the famous charge upon the Boer guns at Elandslaagte. They were R. Lindsay, M. Harnett, F. Ford, and P. Wilson, and are privates in D company of the Manchester Regiment, an officer of which Captain Melville was wounded. The Manchesters outflanked the left of the Boers upon the hill and then took part in the final charge with the Gordons and Devonshires.

THE BRITISH FORCES RETIRE ON LADYSMITH

General Yule is Cut Off From the Main Body and Abandons His Advanced Position.

WHITE CLEARS BOARS FROM HIS PATHWAY.

A Battle Takes Place Between the British Commander-in-Chief and Orange Free State Boers Outside of Ladysmith, Defeating Latter.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The Boers have won a tactical victory. By blowing up the railway bridge at Waschbank they have cut the main line of communication between the British advance guard under General Yule at Dundee and its base at Ladysmith, and throwing large numbers of troops around the British position at theformer place have practically isolated it and prevented it from keeping in touch with the main body. It was to restore the threatened line of communication that the battle of Elandslaagte was fought and won, though the object was not accomplished, as is shown by the announcement that General Yule has been compelled to fall back upon Ladysmith and abandon his position. This fact is further born out by the report of an advance of General White along the Newcastle road and his defeat of a body of Orange Free State Boers in that quarter.

This advance was eidently made to help General Yule to break through the cordon of Boers, which would have prevented his retreat, for the engagement took place on the road down which Yule will advance to effect a junction with White. The two generals will join their forces at Ladysmith this evening, provided no interruption on the part of the Boers takes place, and it is stated that they will thereafter concentrate their whole energy upon the defence of that place, and the keeping open of lines of communication with the coast, until the arrival of General Buller and the first instalment of the army corps, which will create the much-nedded diversion and draw the Boers away from Natal.

GENERAL YULE FALLS BACK.

London, Oct. 24.—The Parliamentary Secretary of the War Office, Mr. George Wyndham, in the House of Commons to-day announced that Field Marshall Lord Wolsely, the commander-in-chief of the forces, sums up the situation in Natal to-day as follows:

"General Yule has fallen back to effect a junction with Sir George Stewart White. He camped yesterday evening about sixteen miles south of Dundee without seeing anything of the enemy during the march, and it has since been reported that All's well on the Waschbank river.'

'General White fought a successful action with an Orange Free State force to-day on the road between Ladysmith and Newcastle, and should join hands with General Yule this evening.

General Yule reports that his wounded are doing well. The Boer wounded on our hands are treated just as our own, and I have every reason to believe the Boers will treat any of our wounded in their hands in a similarly humane manner."

Mr. Wyndham added: "I may remind the House that the Transvaal is a party to the Geneva convention.

"Lord Wolsely further says: 'I have also received from General Walker, at Cape Town, the following: "The last message from Kimberley, Oct. 22, 2 p.m., reports all well.'"

THE BRIDGE DESTROYED.

London, Oct. 24.—In the absence of authentic news there are a number of contradictory rumors afloat, but the most reasonable interpretation of the warious reports seems to point to some artillery practice at Glencoe Saturday and Sunday, but that there was no fighting at close quarters. As, however, communications between Glencoe and Ladysmith, which were though to have been restored by the British victory at Elandslaagte, have again been broken by the destruction of the railway bridge at Waschbank, north of Ladysmith and between Elandslaagte and Glencoe, the difficulties of the British commander in Natal, General Sir George Stewart White, in reinforcing Glencoe have been enormously increased, and until the British forces at Ladysmith and Glencoe are united and the main body of the Boers is broken, the situation must remain disquieting for the British.

Wolseley Criticized.

The afternoon papers here sharply criticise Lord Wolseley's summary of the Natal situation. They say it was a distinct resemblance to the statement of the Spanish Ministry when preparing their countrymen for news of the disaster at Santiago. This, however, is probably an overstrained view. There is no denying, however, the great suspense and anxiety existing, which has been increased by the report in circulation, purporting to emanate from official quarters to the effect that the Boers have secured the services of thirteen thousand natives. The vague and varied estimates of the Boer losses and the absence of anything official on the subject are also arousing misgivings as to whether the beaten enemy suffered proportionately to the disastrous losses of the victors.

A Refugee's Story.

One of the most disquieting stories comes from Ladysmith. It is to the effect that an Englishman, who arrived there from Dundee on Sunday evening after escaping through the Boer lines on the previous night reported that the enemy was then shelling the camp and town with heavy guns, while the shells of the British were unable to reach the enemy's batteries. Subsequently, the man is said to have added, the camp was shifted a mile or so, in order to be out of reach of the Boers, who were firing on the magazine at the town.

NEWS FROM MAFEKING.

London, Oct. 24.—News has at length been received direct from Colonel Baden-Powell, dated Mafeking, Oct. 15. It confirms the statement that in the armored train fight the British had two men killed and fifteen wounded, including Lieut. Lord Charles Bentinck, of the Ninth Lancers, slightly wounded. The Boer loss was estimated at fifty-three killed and many wounded.

The latest advices from Kimberley, under date of Oct. 21, said the Boer attack was still pending and that large Boer forces in the neighborhood had destroyed big sections of the railroad line north and south of the town. Many fugitives from neighboring villages have been imprisoned by the Boers. Several ladies hearing that their husbands had been captured visited the Boer camp and were courteously received. Their intercession for their husbands were successful, and the reunited families have arrived at Kimberley. The prisoners report that were well-treated.

EVEN THE WOMEN FOUGHT.

London, Oct. 24.—A despatch from Kuruman, dated October 19, via the Orange River, says a despatch rider had furnished details of the fight at Mafeking October 14. They confirm the Associated Press accounts and show Col. Fitz-Clarence's squadron was nearly outflanked by the Boers. The armored train was unable to assist the squadron for fear of hitting the British soldiers. Colonel Baden-Powell signalled to Fitz-Clarence to retire, but the latter replied that he was hampered by his wounded, could not desert them and could not return without reinforcements. Lieut. Lord Charles Bentinck of the Ninth Lancers was then ordered, with a squadron to disengage Fitz Clarence, and the retreat was effected in good order.

Women Fought.

The efficacy of the armored train was throughly proved throughout the engagement. The crew did great execution. While the fighting was proceeding outside the townsmen stood by the defences of the town. Splendid spirit is said to have been shown by everyone, even the women shouldering Lee-Metford rifles, which they knwo how to handle.

Ran the Gauntlet.

Major Baillie had an exciting experience near Mafeking while attempting to convey orders from the base to the front. He had to run the gauntlet of the enemy, 250 yards away. A hot fire was opened on him and Ballie's water bottle was shattered. The next moment his horse was shot and fell and Ballie had a narrow escape from capture. But he reached the train.

A courteous note has reached Col. Baden-Powell from General Cronje, the Boer commander, offering facilities for the interchange of wounded and prisoners. This indicates that when the Boers fired on the ambulance train which was attempting to pick up the dead, they did so by mistake.

A native rumor says Colonel Plumer, at Tuli, has engaged and defeated force of Boers

THEY WILL BE TAUGHT.

Washington, Oct. 24.—Colonel Edwin V. Sumner, Major Story, Captain Gibson and Captain Slocum have been detailed to proceed to South Africa and observe and report upon military operations in the Transvaal. Col. Sumner is a brigadier-general of volunteers, his present station being at London where he is military attache to the United States Embassy.

Major Story is stationed at Governor's Island, Captain Gibson is an ordnance officer stationed at Indianapolis, and Captain Slocum, who was United States military attache at Lisbon, is already on his way to Cape Town.

THE DESPATCH EXPLAINED.

London, Oct. 24.—The War Office here this morning has been attempting to explain the summary situation in Natal, furnished by the commander in chief of the forces, Field Marshal Lord Wolsley, to the House of Commons yesterday. His statement is said to have created unnecessary alarm, and it is asserted that what the official note called General Yule's "retirement" would be more accurately described as "a change of position for tactical reasons," and that the alarm for the safety of the wounded was not justified.

It is further explained that the wounded could not be moved, but the fact that they had to be left to their fate while the British forces made a strategic movement to the rear shows the suspence of the public at the absence of subsequent news is amply justified and that the heavy fighting on Friday, and Saturday perhaps is only a prelude to still sterner work. In some quarters the view is taken, that the second attack of the Boers has actually occurred and was so successful that General Yule's withdrawal was imperative and urgent to the extent of compelling him to leave his hospitals in the hands of the Boers, while the more sanguine express the opinion that General Yule, far from retreating, has in reality advanced to meet the attack threatening Glencoe, leaving Dundee behind, safely sheltered from a Boer assault.

WHERE IS STEYN?

It is reported at Cape Town that President Steyn, of the Orange Free State, is close to Aliwal North, near Herschel, on the borders of the Orange Free State. It is added that the Boer camps on hte Orange river are quiet, that plowing and shearing are proceeding, and that there are large quantities of stock on the river banks. A despatch from Pretoria, dated Oct. 20, indicates that the Rhodesians, under Col. Plummer, at Fort Tuli, on the Transvaal border, are taking the offensive. They have attacked a Boer patrol at Rhodes Drift, but apparently not much damage was done on either side. The Boers say they lost three horses.

Lieut. Barnes, who was wounded at the battle of Eldandsgaate, is a brother of Violet Van Brugh, the well-known actress. Germany has sent to follow the British forces in South Africa her military attache in London, Captain Baron Von Luttwitz.

Wireless Telegraphy.

The British military authorities hope to have the wireless telegraph in operation in South Africa within three weeks, when, it is hoped, the difficulties experienced from the cutting of wires will be obviated, as it will only be necessary to establish communication with a point at which the ordinary wires are intact.

GRIM FAMINE STALKS ABROAD.

Koopmansfontein, Oct. 20.—By despatch rider, via Hopetown—Parties of Kaffirs returning home from Jagersfontein, 100 miles over the Free State border, to Kimberley, are unable to obtain food. Already there is a scarcity of supplies throughout Bechuanaland and Griqualand West, near the border of the belligerent states, owing to the total stoppage of the transport service. Famine is almost certain.

INSURANCE ON OUR TROOPS.

Sir Charles Tupper Makes Arrangements with the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Company.

Montreal, Oct. 24.—Sir Charles Tupper has performed an act which will undoubtedly gain for him the thanks of the whole Dominion of Canada. Since it was decided to send a Canadian contingent to the Transvaal the Government has been sharply urged to take steps to insure the Canadians who are going to the far distant Transvaal to risk their lives for the Empire, but the Government absolutely declined to do anything of the kind on the ground that there was no Parliamentary grant to cover such a project.

Sir Charles Tupper made arrangements with the Ocean Accident and Guarantee Co. to place insurance to the extent of one million dollars upon the men of all ranks in the Canadian contingent who will see service in Africa. The necessary money was provided by a prominent Canadian friend of the leader of the Conservative party.

Big Jewel Robbery.

London, Oct. 24.—A sensational burglary has taken place at the Savoy hotel, London, where the rooms of Mrs Stockwell, of New York, widow of a New York jeweller, were entered and robbed of jewellery valued at $50,000 and bank notes and other negotiable currency to the amount of $25,000.

Increasing the Army.

New York. Oct 23.—A Washington despatch says that the Secretary of War has recommended the increasing of the regular United State army to 100,000 men.

Eager to Enlist.

Winnipeg, Oct. 23.—To-day $600 was subscribed at the citizens' meeting at noon for the boys who leave for the east to-morrow en route to the Transvaal. The volunteers are tumbling over each other in their eagerness to go to the front.

Preparing for Home.

New York, Oct. 23.—The crew of the yacht Shamrock have been at work since early morning stripping the racer of her racing rigging, Captain Hogarth says that he expects to take the mast off to-morrow and to have the yacht under jury rig by the end of the week. Captain Hogarth also stated that he called on Designer Fife at the Fifth avenue Hotel recently and found his condition to be very serious.

The Shamrock's crew together with the Columbia's are to be entertained at a smoker to-morrow night.

A TERRIBLE EXPLOSION

A Charge of Dynamite Kills Two Men Near Jack's Lake.

ONE KILLED INSTANTLY

And Another So Severely Injured That He Cannot Recover.

Fearful Catastrophe Which Occurred a Few Miles Back of Stoney Lake at the Gold Mines.

Mr. Wm. Batton, returned from Apsley last night and brings particulars of a terrible accident which occurred at Cameron's gold mine, Chandos, near Jack's Lake, and about eleven miles from Apsley.

It appears that blasting had been going on in the mine. A man named Peter Weese was thawing out several sticks before an open fire, when one of the sticks exploded with terrific force. Weese was killed instantly, while a man named Galbraith had his eyes blown out and one hand and the fingers of the other hand blown off, and one leg broken. His injuries are fatal.

Dr. Caldwell from Apsley and a doctor from Coe Hill were sent for, and are attending the injured man.

Weese had been married about ten months, and leaves a wife. Galbraith is an American, and was a professional miner.

It is not known how the accident occurred. It is supposed, however that while handling the sticks, one of them dropped, and exploded. The explosion was distinctly felt at Apsley and even at Lakefield.

ARMED FOR THE VOYAGE.

Sardinian to Carry Guns—Transport Expected to Sail on Tuesday Next Generous Bill of Fare—Militia Orders.

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—Officials of the Militia Departmen tare working day and night arranging for the departure of the Canadian troops. It is fully expected that the Sardinian, with the thousand Canadians who are to battle in the Transvaal, will sail from Quebec on the 31st inst. Lt.-Col. Sam. Hughes will be one of the majors of the corps. Captain A. McDonnell, it is understood, will be transferred from the command of the Montrel company to one of the western contingents, his place to be filled by Montreal militia man, not yet chosen.

Sardinian Protected.

Should the Sardinian be attacked by any of the French privateers, to whom President Kruger is said to have given letters of marque to prey on British ships, she will be ready for the occasion. The troopship will carry two or three rapid fire guns, and the regiment will take with it two Maxim guns, and 100,000 rounds of ammunition. Permission has been received from the British authorities for the Sardinian to re-coal at Cape town for the home voyage. The Sardinian having thus to carry less coal, will probably shorten the voyage three or four days.

Major Drummond, military secretary, to the Governor-General, goes with the contingent as chief staff officer. He has seen service in the Soudan and in India. The food of the Canadians on the voyage to Cape Town will include fresh meats, fish and vegetables, all kinds of fruits, with a liberal supply of tea, coffee, butter, condensed milk, etc. Puddings are to be supplied two or three times a week, and on pudding days the supply of sugar is to be doubled.

No reply has yet been received to Hon. Wm. Mulock's offer to furnish four or five Canadians for the army postal service. Dr. Coulter, Deputy Postmaster-General, has been in receipt of more than a score of applications from post office employees who desire to go.

Daily Militia Orders.

1. District officers commanding companies in the volunteer force for special service in South Africa will retain the attestation papers of the men enrolled in the special service company raised in their district. (a) They will also prepare, in duplicate, at an early date a list, giving name, corps and post-office address of the men enrolled in their district. One of these lists will be kept in the district office as an index to the attestation papers, and the other forwarded to headquarters.

2. Officers travelling on duty connected with the special service force will send in their travelling expense claims, without fail, before embarkation.

3. A grant of $125 to officers towards defraying expenses of their outfit and the advance of pay to the amount of $60 will be paid at Quebec by the officer commanding the force.

4. Non-commissioned officers and men of the permanent force will be allowed to count their service in the special service force as a portion of the period for which they have enlisted in the permanent force.

5. Volunteers from the permanent force accepted for enrolment in the special service force will proceed to Quebec with the company of the special service force enrolled in the district to which they belong.

6. With reference to the militia order of the 23rd instant, the left half of A Company will arrive at Quebec at 7 a.m. on the 27th, and the right half at 7 a.m. on the 29th, and not at Levis, as indicated in the order.

PROBABLY A SHORT WAR

Friday's engagement at Glencoe has deprived the Boers of their sting. The prestige they enjoyed and the courage they assumed in facing the British, was due the to victory at Majuba Hill, but now that the tables are turned and victory has fallen to those who formerly suffered defeat, prestige and confidence, excellent material in war, now repose once more with the British.

The effect of a defeat like that the Boers suffered at Glencoe cannot be calculated. It is regarded of such importance that many Canadians fear the war will be fought out before the Canadian contingent reaches the Cape. Some military men stated that one defeat would be sufficient for the Boers, and they would abandon the campaign. The future developments of the war cannot be foretold, but with the large body of troops leaving England, and the unflinching bravery of the soldiers already at the scene of hostilities, it is evident the Canadians must hurry along if they wish to be of any service.

SEES THE FINISH

"If the reports of Canada's mineral wealth are half true, Canada would better direct her energies to developing it, instead of trying to divert the grain trade of the lakes to Montreal," remarks the Buffalo Express. What's the matter with Canada doing both? Our contemporary sees the finish of our great Trent Valley Canal.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

A paragraph in the Examiner states: "Another war atrocity is seen in the statement that in Africa the Dutch spell "neck" "nek," just where they are now getting it." The Times is of a different opinion. The reason the Dutch spell neck without a "c," is because Britain is mistress of the "c's."

The putting of a price by the Boers on the head of Cecil Rhodes recalls that gentleman has made a good deal of money out of his own head in his time.

Sir Thomas Lipton is one of the few Irishmen who didn't have better luck by coming to America.

Little as is known of Rorke's Drift, spoken of in Transvaal dispatches, it's of more interest than the late yacht drift.

According to the Philadelphia Record the Boer ultimatum which percipitated the was, dictated by the great principle that

At present, however, it does not seem to be the Boer who really got in the first lick.

London Truth prints a statement of the fighting strength of the two South African Republics, derived from the best authority. The war strength of the Transvaal is fixed at 26,500 burghers liable to service, of whom 14,200 are between eighteen and thirty-four years of age. The number liable to service in the Orange Free State is 20,000, and the only permanent troops maintained by this republic are a force of eight field artillerymen. The gross total on paper comes to 46,500 for the two states, of whom probably about 25,000 are able-bodied men in the prime of life.

A mother of four children, whose husband was dying of consumption and whose baby was suffering from scarlet fever, was evicted from her home a few days ago and thrown with her sick child and her few belongings into the street. Sir Thomas Lipton—"Anybody wants to buy a boat?"

A Word to the Ratepayers.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—It is not too early in the campaign for citizens to do a little quiet looking around for suitable aldermanic candidates. There is always a tendency in Peterborough and everywhere else for the citizens to let these things who until the last minute, with the result that municipal control is liable to get into the hands of a few men who crop up as candidates so regularly each year that they begin to feel that they have a mortgage on the offices of the people, and resent the intrusion into the municipal arena of candidates not in their immediate circle. The same old crowd always see to it that they get nominated, and owing to the fact that other men, and very possibly better men do not get out and hustle, the citizens find themselves on polling day very often reduced to the necessity of picking the best fruit of a very poor basket full. This is not as it should be. It is a matter of dollars and cents with every ratepayer, and every ratepayer should consequently feel a personal interest in inducing solid business men to enter municipal life. The alderman who pays $500 in taxes every year is much more likely to be a careful legislator and discountenance expensive legislation than the alderman who pays only $50 in taxes, while at the same time the heavy tax payer is more vitally interested in supporting measures to benefit the city than the man with but a small stake therein. These are facts the rate payers would do well to act on. Good men should be sought out and bothered to death, if necessary, until they consent to stand. There will be no difficulty about electing them, for the average Peterborough elector knows a good candidate when he sees one.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your

RATEPAYER.

VAST POSSESSIONS OF ENGLAND

Thirteen Million Square miles, with a Population of 420,000,000.

London, Oct. 23.—Interesting statistics in regard to the increase of population, just compiled by Sir Robert Giffon, show that England now has possessions in all five continents, and that a quarter of the population of the entire earth is subject to her suzeranity. The extent of territory owned by England amounts to 13,000,000 square miles, and on this immense tract is a population of 420,000,000. In the last twenty-seven years the English realm has increased by 2,854,000 square miles, and within the same period 125,000,000 have been added to the population.

Since 1871 the population of the United Kingdom—England, Scotland and Ireland—has increased from 32,000,000 to 40,000,000. At the beginning of this century England, Scotland and Ireland had a population of 11,000,000, and France of 26,000,000, yet today the proportion of population in both countries is almost alike. Russia has increased her population by 60,000,000 since 1870, the result being that she has now a total population of 130,000,000. Germany had a population of 20,000,000 at the beginning of this century; now she has between fifty and sixty millions, of whom almost a quarter is the result of the increase of births over deaths. Germany, too, is making vast strides as a colonial power, and her population in those distant possessions already amounts to a big number.

A Sand Cure for Dyspepsia.

A Chicago man, Louis Conners, eats sand as a cure for dyspepsia. His theory is that every human being, like some lower animals, needs a certain amount of sand in the stomach to aid in digestion. Before he began his strange diet, six months ago, Connors was a sufferer from dyspepsia; now he is entirely free from the affliction.

How to Keep Cut Flowers.

A lady who has spent a good deal of time in Japan says that she has often kept cut flowers for an abnormally long period by burning their steams with a piece of wood—not with a match, be it observed, or the sulphur would be injurious to the flower. The Japanese say that the charring process causes the water to penetrate the stem and to sustain the flower. Whatever the reason, it is satisfactory to learn that by charring the stems of chrysanthemums we may keep them in good condition for a month or six weeks.

THE BOXER'S FINISH.

ONE BOUT THAT SETTLED HIS PUGILISTIC AMBITION.

He Didn't Know the Man He Ran Up Against Until He Came Back to Consciousness, After Having Seen a Large Display of Stars.

"When I was much younger," said the portly government official, "I was a husky young fellow, chesty and easy about my pugilistic ability. I got the boxing bee in my bonnet and practiced hard with the gloves every night. I had been sparring with fellows in my gymnasium for about six months and picking up what I thought was a whole lot of cleverness, when I moved to a boarding house on Pierrepont street, in Brooklyn. I had a room on the top floor of this boarding house. The top floor's rooms were all occupied by young fellows like myself—law and medical students, newspaper chaps and that sort. It was rather a scapegrace lot, and I got acquainted with most of them immediately I had a lot of athletic gear along with me—clubs, dumbbells, weight pulling machines and stuff—and from the jump I gave these floor mates of mine to understand that I was some considerable pumpkins as an athlete. When I showed 'em my boxing gloves, I was particular to dwell upon the fact that boxing was my one particular graft, and I think I modestly threw the hint out that I'd never yet met a man of my weight that could put the gloves on with me in the amateur class. For a couple of nights running I let them look at me in the act of punching a bag I had suspended from the ceiling of my room, and they all agreed, I think, that I'd be rather an unsafe proposition to get addled up with in a scrap.

"One of the occupants of that top floor was away when I struck the house, and he didn't return until I had been in the house for about a week. When he got back, the other fellows introduced me to him I didn't catch his name at the time, but he didn't strike me as being a very cheerful chap, and I rather ignored him. Well, all got to talking on my favorite subject, sparring, after awhile, and I invited any of the fellows present to put on the gloves for a little 'go' with me.

"'I won't hurt you, you know,' said I. 'I'll just tap you lightly, and you can hit me as hard as you want. It's raining, and I don't want to go to the gym tonight, and I wish one of you ducks 'ud just slip 'em on with me.'

"I didn't quite understand what they all meant when they exchanged glances and pushed forward the man who had been away since my advent in the house and whom I had just met.

"'Go on and put 'em on with him,' they urged this man. 'He won't hurt you. You've had the gloves on once or twice, anyhow, while none of the rest of us knows anything about boxing. Go ahead and give him a little exercise.'

"'All right,' said this man rather reluctantly. He looked just like an ordinary man with his coat on, and I felt that he would be dead easy as a subject upon whom to practice and to show the other fellows what I knew about the fine points of the game. When he returned from his room, however, stripped to his trousers and his gauze undershirt, I couldn't help but look at the chap. For a man of ordinary size he had the hugest chest I had ever seen, and his arms and shoulders were simply knotted and twisted with muscles. He was as quiet spoken a duck as ever I saw, though, and he didn't look to be lively on his feet, so we went at it.

"Well, say that was a one man bout, and the other fellow was the one man. There was nothing to it but him. From the very minute that we squared off I could see by the way he handled his dukes that the boxing game was his'n and that I was like six lead nickels in comparison with him. He just fooled with me at first—rapped me here and there at will, adding insult to injury by quietly announcing where he was going to jolt me next—and I never got in a lick or a dab on him. I tried my dernedest when I saw I was totally outclassed to get in just one belt at him somewhere or other, but it was no go. He had a lightning guard for every essay I made to crack him one, and after about five minutes I was puffing like a tree toad and still taking whacks all over my hide, while he was as cool as a cucumber.

"'You're pretty good,' I gasped when we took a momentary rest. 'You've been at this game often, haven't you?'

"'I've had 'em on a few times,' he replied quietly. 'Let's have another short go.'

"Then we went at it again. He fiddled around for a minute, and then he caught me one with his left fist right under the chin. I went sailing up into the air—I saw enough stars to have gone sailing right up among 'em—and I was out when I came down—good and out, as clean a case of knocked out boxer as ever happened in a prize ring. It was fully ten minutes before I came to, and when I did the other fellows were all fanning me and rubbing my head with ammonia and wondering if I was a sure enough dead 'un. I was all right after I got my head under the cold water spigot, and then one of the fellows took me into the center of the gang and said to me:

"'Maybe you didn't quite catch the name of the man you boxed with when you were introduced to him, hey?'

"'No, I didn't,' said I. 'Who is he—John L. Sullivan?'

"'Not exactly. Mr. Ford, step up and shake hands again. This,' went on the young fellow doing the introducing addressing me, 'is Malcolm W. Ford, the champion all around athlete of America. He has held that title for three years, earning it each year in competition with the best men in the whole country in athletic games. He holds the record for the running broad jump, the standing high jump, the pole vault, hammer throwing, shot putting, and he's among the best in the world as a 100 yard sprinter. He's all right.'

"'Yes,' said I. 'I think he is—even if he is a party to this awful job on me,' and we shook hands. When the gang saw I was game enough to take my roasting good naturedly, they let up on me. But my pugilistic ambition wilted absolutely from that night."

The Hint That Failed.

The landlady looked solemnly in the direction of the delinquent one.

"It's a rule in this house to pay as you go," said she.

The delinquent one smiled.

"It's a good plan," said he. "You get it all in a bunch then or nothing."—Syracuse Herald.

THE SPECTRAL BELL.

A Superstition of the Sea Sometimes Met With on Land.

The tolling of a spectral bell is one of the familiar superstitions of the sea, and especially is the illusion common along this section of the gulf coast. What causes it nobody has ever learned, but there is hardly a luggerman from Mobile to the passes who has not, at one time or another, heard the sound. They describe the note as extraordinarily sweet and clear, rising and falling in solemn cadence and always seemingly close at hand. It is entirely different, they say, from any other noise of the ocean, and they scout the theory that it could possibly be produced by waves.

"It isn't water," said an old seafaring man the other night, "and, for that matter, it's sometimes heard on land. I know, because I've listened to it myself. Back in 1877, if you care to hear the story, I quit sailorizing for awhile and went out west and tried mining. I had a partner named Whitcher, and, away up in the Sierra Madre range, in north New Mexico, we found an outcropping of rotten quartz that showed gold. It looked so good that we started to sink a shaft, although it was the most God forsaken spot you ever laid eyes on. It was in a little canyon, a thousand miles from nowhere, ugly black rocks all around us, and lonely—well, lonely is no name for it.

"One day, while Whitcher was in the hole and me at the windlass he heard the bell. It was clear as my voice and seemed right over a mountain spur, where we knew there was no living being for three days' travel. It rang awhile and then stopped. Next day it rang again, slow, solemn and plainer than ever. It was broad daylight, and that made the thing all the worse, which sounds funny, but is true. We stood it four times, and then Whitcher climbed out of the hole and said, 'Let's go.' I was willing. I believe we had a good thing, but that bell—it was too many for us. It makes my flesh crawl to think about it even, now."

"ADMIT WITHIN FIRE LINES."

An Extraordinary Motto For a Reporter's Funeral Emblem.

In his story of "The Last of the Mulberry Street Barons," in The Century, Mr. Jacob A. Riis, author of "How the Other Half Lives," tells a rather gruesome but very amusing anecdote of a fellow reporter attached to police headquarters in Mulberry street, New York.

There had been a feud of long standing between the reporters in Mulberry street, and in consequence news was plentiful. There were mutual scores to be paid off, and we paid them off in the coin of the realm. The coin of Mulberry street was murder, fire and sudden death (we had passed the stage of boxing gloves and did not speak as we passed by), and it went a long way. I do not mean, of course, that we murdered or burned up one another, but these things were the staples of our daily work as police reporters, and when we were "out" the precinct returns received an extra sifting, with the result that many a grain of newspaper wheat that would otherwise have escaped was rescued from the dust bin.

We had our specialties in this contest of wits. One was distinguished as a sleuth. He fed on detective mysteries as a cat on a chicken bone. He thought them out by day and dreamed them out by night, to the great exasperation of the official detectives, with whom their solution was a commercial, not in the least an intellectual, affair. They solved them on the plane of the proverbial lacking of honor among thieves, by the formula, "You scratch my back, and I'll scratch yours."

Another came out strong on fires. He knew the history of every house in town that ran any risk of being burned, knew every fireman and could tell within $1,000, more or less, what was the value of the goods stored in any building in the dry goods district and for how much they were insured. If he couldn't, he did anyhow, and his guesses often came near the facts, as shown in the final adjustment. He sniffed a firebug from afar and knew without asking how much salvage there was in a bale of cotton after being 24 hours in the fire. He is dead, poor fellow. In life he was fond of a joke, and in death the joke clung to him in a way wholly unforeseen.

The firemen in the next block, with whom he made his headquarters when off duty, so that he might always be within hearing of the gong, wished to give some tangible evidence of their regard for the old reporter, but, being in a hurry, left it to the florist, who knew him well, to choose the design. He hit upon a floral fire badge as the proper thing, and thus it was that when the company of mourners was assembled and the funeral service in progress there arrived and was set upon the coffin, in the view of all, that triumph of the florist's art, a shield of white roses with this legend written across it in red immortelles: "Admit Within Fire Lines Only." It was shocking, but irresistible. It brought down even the house of mourning.

RAILROAD TIES.

It is proposed to construct a railway in French Guinea.

Khartum will be reached by the railroad by November next, barring accidents. The railroad is now 50 miles south of the Atbara river.

The original capital of the Pennsylvania railroad was $650,000. The system on its fifty-third birthday represented an investment of $900,000,000. Last year it carried 71,000,000 passengers.

An Unpalatable Bone.

Last summer a friend presented us with a tortoise. I do not know whether our dog had heard of turtle soup or whether he regarded the creature as a new kind of bone that walked about; at any rate, he determined to eat it.

Whenever the tortoise started out on a constitutional down the garden path Gyp arrested it and carried it into his kennel, where he gnawed at the impenetrable armor till his jaws ached.

The calm and philosophical manner in which the tortoise resumed its interrupted promenade irritated the dog exceedingly, but no failure discouraged him. Whenever we reminded him of the tortoise, he would go in search of it all round the garden, peering into every crevice, till eventually the creature was found, and then fresh but futile attempts were made to extract the meaty portions from the shell.—Woman's Companion.

The Case of Anticosti.

Quebec, Oct. 23.—The case of M. Henri Menier, proprietor of Anticosti, against the Fox Bay settlers, for eviction, comes up before Judge Gagne in the Superior Court at Murray Bay today. Mr. Gibson, advocate of Quebec, represents Mr. Menier, and the settlers are represented by Mr. W. H. Davidson. All the other old residents on the island have been settled with. They have signed notarial contracts before Mr. Conture, N.P., who has visited Anticosti for the purpose and will pay small annual rentals to Mr. Menier.

Steam in a Tin Can.

A ten-year-old Cmemee lad named Chas Cochrane, with a [illegible], was amusing himself by getting up steam in a can partly filled with water. THE TURF REVIEW.

Streck, 2:14¼, is to be tried this year at the pace, by George Saunders, according to report.

Narion, 3, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanka, is said to be showing a good gait and good speed this year.

It is said that Rose Croix, 2:13½ at three years, has shown a mile in 2:15 at the pace for McHenry, at Pleasanton, Cal.

Nelly R, ch. m., 2:23, by Red Cloud, although 16 years old, has never had a foal until this year. It is by Dan T, 2:08¾.

A horse with the peculiar name of Esaw, by Seesaw, dam by Independence, is to be raced this year by D. H. McGill.

All reports to the contrary notwithstanding, it is thought that Willis O. Foote will be able to be in the sulky this season.

There is a great deal of talk about Directly, 2:03¾, beating all the pacers out this year and taking a record faster than 2:00 besides.

Since the sale of Advertiser, Palo Alto farm has only three sons of Electioneer remaining in the stud, Altire, Azmoor and Mendocino.

A race for a purse of $1,000 is projected for July 4, at Youngstown, O., with Lord Vincent, 2:16½; La Honda, 2:12½ pacing, and Oddity, 2:10¼ pacing, among the starters.

The 3-year-old bay filly Marion, by Arion, dam Nancy Hanka, is eligible to start in the New England $10,000 Futurity, and is likely to do so if the reports of the speed she is showing are correct.

The first new 2:30 trotter of the year is a dun gelding named Dot, breeding unknown, who took the first heat of the 2:40 race at Norfolk, Va., May 16, in 2:27¼.

How They Used to Kill.

In repairing an old house in Dartford, England, not long ago the workmen found several ancient death warrants, bearing the signature of the Duke of Portland, minister of King George III. One of them, dated June, 1798, gives an idea of what legal hanging and quartering were like in those days. It runs:

"Whereas, James O'Coigley, having been attainted of high treason and had sentence passed upon him to be drawn upon a hurdle to the place of execution and to be there hanged by the neck, but not until he is dead, but that, being alive, he shall be taken down and his bowels taken out and burned before his face, that his head shall be severed from his body and his body divided into four parts, and that his head and body shall be disposed of as we think fit, and whereas we think fit to remit that part of the sentence directing the burning of his bowels and dividing the body into four parts, our will and pleasure is that he shall be drawn and hanged and have his head severed from his body."

How He Misunderstood.

There were loud cries from a man in the back of the hall, and the cornetist went at it again.

There were more cries from other parts of the hall, but, with that one still ringing in his ears, the cornetist kept it up.

"What are you trying to do?" cried the manager. "That's no encore."

"No encore?" exclaimed the cornetist when he had been induced to knock off. "Didn't that man back there yell 'Toot, man' four or five times?"

"Not any," answered the manager. "He's a Scotchman and what he said was, 'Hoot, mon!'"

THE NEW SPAIN.

About the worst that can be said of Spain now is that it is the Washington Baseball club of nations.—Chicago News.

Nothing seems to be said about what Spain is going to do at the Paris exposition. It might at least make a display of mananas.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

Now that we are friends with Spain once more, she may give us the contract of building her new navy. She has reason to know that we build a fairly good article of warship.—St. Louis Republic.

They Keep Moving.

The religion of a Bedouin tribe seems to be to "move onward." Having once begun the nomadic life, it becomes almost necessary for them to keep it up. In the first place, they don't want to settle down, and they wouldn't have any place to stop if they wanted to. Sometimes it becomes expedient that they make great haste in these long journeys. Wandering around over the plains are other tribes whose only occupation is "moving on." There is frequently enmity between two of these Arabian families, and should one pursue the other it behooves the pursued to hasten onward with all the speed their animals are capable of. Or it may be that the springs of water are so widely separated that hard travel is necessary to make the distance from one to the other in a day.

When either of these contingencies arises, they cook and eat while on the march. They don't eat much. Two or three dinners such as American boys and girls are used to every day and something extra for Sundays and company are supposed not to agree with Bedouin children's stomachs. When on the road, bread is their chief food. This is baked while riding. One woman will mix the coarse flour which is carried in a sack on the back of her camel, another will roll and shape the dough, which is brought to her in small quantities, and a third will make a fire in an earthen vessel and attend to the baking. Women or boys on foot run along from one cook to the other and carry the material, and when the feast is ready they distribute it among the various members of the tribe.

Light and Airy.

The Abyssinian soldier's ordinary dress is not very attractive. It consists, it is said, of a white linen shirt down to his knees and a pair of light linen trousers to half way down his calf. Over this he wears a belt of folded linen, and, as a rule, a "shamma," or white cotton sheet, draped round him. Cloaks of blue, red, green, yellow or violet, ornamented with rough embroidery, leopard skins, sheepskins and even lion skins are worn on special occasions by the officers and small chiefs, and the army then presents a noble show.

Any man who has killed a lion or an elephant or has distinguished himself much in battle wears an aureole, or lion's mane, on his head. For each five men he has killed he wears a silver band on his sword scabbard. The highest recompense for valor is a sort of velvet top hat ornamented with silver, and great officers are given shields covered with velvet and ornamented with gold and silver.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

One Exception.

"Do you love me so much," she demanded, "that you would be willing to give up your all for me?"

"Yes," he replied, "I would willingly give up all for you; but, of course, that doesn't include what I expect from your father."—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

Looking Ahead.

"It is only a matter of time," said Golfer, "when the expansion policy will carry us into Canada."

"What makes you think that?"

"Oh, we will need the land on the other side of the border for golf links!"—Philadelphia North American.

They Keep One Eye Shut.

A recent traveler in Mexico, who visited the mines there during his journey, says that he was much astonished at seeing the men who carry the ore come out of the mine, each with one eye shut.

The foreman, seeing his surprise, explained the matter. He said the candles belonging to the tarateros (who drill and blast) do not give sufficient light in the drifts, where it is consequently quite dark, but where, nevertheless, the tarateros see well enough not to run their heads against the rocks, but, on emerging into daylight, they would be blinded did they not take precautionary measures.

For this reason, as they approach the mouth of the shaft, at the point where they catch the first glimpse of light they drop the eyelid of one eye and keep this down while they are discharging their ore and until they have redescended the shaft. When they are again in the dark, they open the eye kept hitherto in reserve and at once see everything distinctly, while the other eye, previously open and [illegible] blinded by the daylight, perceives nothing

A SIMPLE LITTLE MIX UP.

How It Helped One Man at the Expense of Another.

How a bunch of roses sold a couple of high priced railroad tickets is the basis of a queer little comedy of errors enacted the other day at a leading city hotel. Among the guests of the house was a wealthy Texas merchant who was en route with his wife for a visit to New England. The Texan has a local business representative here in the person of a hustling young man about town, who was especially anxious to make the stay of his principal as pleasant as possible. Accordingly he rushed to a florist's as soon as he saw the names on the register and ordered him to put up the handsomest bunch of roses he had in the shop and send them over to Mrs. Blank at such and such a hotel. In his hurry he forgot to leave his card for inclosure, and, supposing it was omitted inadvertently, the florist proceeded to prepare a magnificent bouquet, which he dispatched forthwith by messenger.

It so happened at the moment the flowers arrived that a city passenger solicitor for one of the north bound roads had just handed over his card to be sent to the Texas gentleman's apartment, and quite naturally the pasteboard and the roses went up together. The visitors were both astonished and pleased. "This is certainly a princely way of soliciting business," exclaimed the merchant, examining the flowers. "Why, these things must have cost all of $10. Show the gentleman up."

The solicitor was shown up, received most cordially and given an immediate order for through transportation both ways. He departed, chuckling merrily, but a little dazed by the facility of his deal and puzzled to understand the many references to his "courtesy" and "thoughtfulness."

An hour or so later the local representative dropped around and was met by his employer in the lobby. The greeting was painfully matter of fact, and not a word was said about the flowers. The young man was greatly chagrined and began to believe he had made a bad break. Next day he accompanied the couple to the depot, and incidentally something was said about the route.

"We decided to go this way on account of the gentleman who called to sell us tickets," explained the lady. "He was so courteous and pleasant! Why, would you believe it," she continued, "he actually sent me an enormous bunch of beauty roses with his business card!"

Light dawned on the local representative, and he groaned. In his pocket was a florist's bill for $12.75.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A JUMPING TOOTHACHE.

How It Won Its Victim Credit For Bravery In Battle.

"It was a toothache," said the veteran, "that won me a reputation for daring at the battle of Bull Run. That was the only fight I was ever in where I didn't wish I could find a hole to crawl into. All this talk about coolness on the eve of battle is nonsense, invented by people who have never been there or old soldiers whose tongues get away with their memories. Our men and officers were as brave as any in the war and made good records, but they all had the ague and longed for sick leave just about the time the bullets began to fly. But I had the toothache for two days before that battle, and if there is an aggravation on earth that will make a man want to bat his best friend in the face that is it.

"On the night before the fight I did not sleep a wink. The old tooth got to jumping like a goat, and I couldn't have suffered more from an amputated leg. I was also furiously mad. I felt that I'd either got to bolt for the rear in search of relief or encourage some rebel to put a ball through my head.

"We'd been waiting in battle line for an hour, and the boys had grown white and were all choked up. I had been entirely occupied with the old tooth, and the first thing I knew the fight was on. We were holding them in check, but that didn't suffice me. As I got hold of my gun and pulled the handkerchief off my jaw I yelled out for the boys to follow, and we struck a whole brigade and whirled it around and sent it back half a mile. I felt that I could lick the whole of Lee's army for an hour or two! They told me that I yelled and dodged death a thousand times, but I remember nothing but the jumps of that tooth. When they stopped, or for what particular reason, I could never say, but after a couple of hours I came to myself, as it were, and was being complimented on all sides, and the jumps had ceased."

Vastly Different.

As will be seen, it makes a great difference how one uses the muscular resources at one's command.

A member of an athletic club, after swimming the length of the large tank in the basement of the institution, came out puffing and blowing, apparently exhausted.

"You don't manage your breathing right," said the swimming instructor. "It ought not to tire you so. As to the upper part of your body, including your arms, you use exactly the same muscles and in very much the same way, in swimming as in sawing wood."

"No, sir!" gasped the swimmer. "When it comes to sawing wood, I use the muscles of some other man."—Youth's Companion.

Minutes and Seconds.

At least 25 centuries B. C. the Babylonians used a sexagesimal system of notation, consisting of sari and sossi, of which we have vestiges when we reckon 60 minutes to the hour and 60 seconds to the minute, or 3,600 [illegible]—that is, a saros of sossi—to the hour. That we count 12 inches to the foot, 24 hours to the day, 360 degrees of longitude around the equator, 90 degrees of latitude from the equator to the poles and 60 miles to a degree may also be traced to the same duodecimal Babylonian system of numeration, which originally reckoned 60 shekels to the mina and 60 minas to the talent. All these numbers are factors or multiples of the sarus, or 60. Our measures of time, money, of linear and angular space, are all derived from the Greeks, who obtained them from the Babylonians probably through the

REVOLUTION IN COLUMBIA.

Mr. Bourassa's Statement.

Montreal, Que., Oct. 22.—Mr. Bourassa, M. P. for Labelle, made a speech after mass to-day at Papineauville, explaining his reasons for resigning his seat in the House of Commons. He stated that he had in 1896 condemned the action of the late Government in voting a million dollars for the purchase of rifles to arm the volunteers, and now condemned the present Government using public money to arm and equip men to engage in a war in which we had no interest. The war was not a war of the English people, but forced upon them by Mr. Chamberlain at the instigation of a British Chartered Company.

At the close of the meeting Mayor Desjardin read a resolution condemning the action of the Government and endorsing Mr. Bourassa's course in resigning as a protest. Those not in favor were requested to step aside, only three or four doing so. The meeting was not large, and little enthusiasm was manifested.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sung it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Mr. Latchford's Seat.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—The Ontario Cabinet Ministers are very busy to-day clearing up the work of their old departments before stepping into their new positions. The readjustments of the sub-departments will be made at to-morrow's Cabinet meeting and after that the Ministers will assume their new duties. This morning Mr. Ross declined to announce the constituency Mr. Latchford would stand for, but promised to make the announcement to-morow. It is understood that Mr. Ross will keep Mr. Harcourt's present private secretary in the department with him.

The New Cabinet.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—The general shuffle of positions has not begun at the Parliament Buildings, and save that Mr. Hardy is preparing to depart and that Mr. Ross occupies the Council Chamber, there is little change from last week. The Ministers will remain in their old positions until the last of the week. Mr. Stratton will be here to-morrow and Mr. Latchford later in the week.

Early Impressions.

Memory plays queer antics at times. As our ideas of things develop and make progress the relation to ourselves, as we were of a remembered place or incident, keeps pace with the advance. When we were in youth, we thought the house in which we lived in those days a veritable mansion and the yard was as large and commodious as a park now seems to us. Our memory keeps them thus, although we have long outgrown our little selves.

But when we again visit the haunts of the early years we find that the mansion has diminished to a cottage and the yard seems miserably small. We have outgrown them. There seems to be a self adjusting lens that, as we fare farther from the scenes and surroundings we once knew well, keeps magnifying them so that they are always the same to us.

And it must be so of incidents and people as well. Memory is kind and throws a mantle of softening mist over whatever comes into her realm. And when we go back and find the old neighborhood or see again our long remembered friends we must not put all the blame of changing upon them. It is we who have changed, perhaps far more than have they, only we do not stop to realize the fact.—Exchange.

SIR JOHN WATERS A FINE SPY.

Thrilling Adventure When Captured by the Spaniards.

Sir John Walters was the most admirable spy ever attached to an army. In the Penninsular war he gave to Lord Wellington accurate and valuable information about the Spaniards. Once he was taken prisoner by Spanish dragoons while clad in the English uniform. He was supposed to a stupid Brittisher who could not understand a word of French or Spanish, and his captors talked freely about him. Then he learned that they were going to kill and rob him at an old mill where the company was to stop for dinner. They would pretend that they had shot him because of his attempt to escape. On reaching the mill the dragoons dismounted and went into the house, leaving their prisoner outside, in the hope that he would try to escape. As soon as they were out of sight Walters threw his cloak on a near-by olive bush and put his cocked hat on top. Empty flour sacks lay on the ground and he crawled into one of them. A moment later the dragoons came out, fired their carbines at the supposed prisoner and galloped off, intending to return later to rifle the body. A horse loaded with sacks of flour stood near the door and Sir John, still enveloped in the sack, managed to throw himself on the horse's back, as if he were part of the load. The owner came out, mounted and roade away without dedecting the peculiar contents of one of the sacks. When far enough away for safety, his position being uncomfortable, Sir John freed himself from the sack and sat up. The horseman, happening to look around, saw the man covered with flour and imagined a ghost was perched behind him.

He fell in a faint and the supposed ghost threw him to the ground and galloped off. Sir John reached the English camp without further adventures.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

After a good soaking shower is the best time for hand weeding.

A good plan is to keep the growing orchard in cultivation until it comes into bearing well and then seed to clover.

Increased sunlight among the trees brings increased growth and blossom and decreases the tendency to mold and rot.

Peach, cherry and pear trees will bear very little forcing, and on this account wood ashes are better for them than ground bone.

Fruits, especially the apple, are largely controlled in character by soil and climate. Get varieties that are adapted to your locality.

Scraping the moss and old dead bark off the mature trees in the orchard and washing the trunks with some alkaline liquid can always be recommended.—Exchange.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algus with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 50 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist as good natured and happy now as she wuz when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer or somethin will be sp'iled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeared uv the old serpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never forgit ef I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wuz only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven er eight head uv fine horses, and, one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves perticklar on, for they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wuz yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wuzn't a funeral percession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week er ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough for me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin for the lady in less than no time.

"The team wuz feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wuz a dozen or more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wuzn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wuz gittin anxious, though she wuzn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 300 yards from the upper turn, and there wuz no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heerd a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wuz Jim a-comin lickety spit. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wuz comin after us wuz like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let em go for all they wuz wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wuz fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wuz comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wuz.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wuzn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist sared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forrerd as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there for a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wuz in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wuz that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wuz, I'm afeard I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I wuz dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wuz killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hunderd pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let themselves out on a spurt that wuz chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wuz, and so wuz Mandy, for before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wuz up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wuz ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

"Mandy wus in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it was only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uv a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

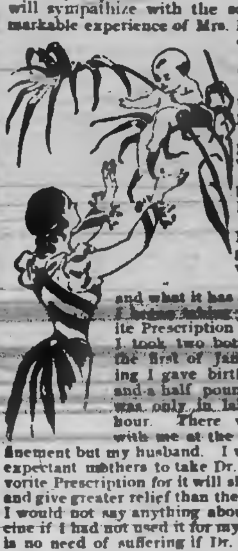
Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all those golden sovereigns for so much paint!"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.

A BABY BOY.



Every expectant mother in the world will sympathize with the somewhat remarkable experience of Mrs. Rev. Walker, of Fillmore, Montgomery Co., Ills. "I take pleasure in dropping you a word of praise," she writes in an interesting letter to Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N.Y., "in regard to your wonderful medicine and what it has done for me. I began taking your 'Favorite Prescription' in October. I took two bottles, and on the first of January following I gave birth to a nine-and-a half pound boy, and was only in labor half an hour. There was no one with me at the time of confinement but my husband. I would advise expectant mothers to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for it will shorten labor, and give greater relief than the doctors can. I would not say anything about the medicine if I had not used it for myself. There is no need of suffering if Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is used during pregnancy. May God bless you for a medicine that will preserve life. I am getting so I can do some of my own work without getting tired."

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

FIRE NEAR OMEMEE.

The Narrow Escape of the Rutherford Family—House Burned.

The dwelling of Mr. John Rutherford, a farmer living about three miles southeast of Omemee, was burned at an early hour Sunday morning, and the family had a very narrow escape. Mr. Rutherford was away visiting friends, and his daughter and four sons had retired at an early hour.

Miss Rutherford, who was the first to detect the danger; she was aroused by a crackling sound and smelling smoke, she called to her brothers, who ran down stairs to see what was the matter. Wilmot was the first down, and on opening the kitchen door was met by a burst of flames, and was severely burned about the head, face and hands. He was unable to close the door, and the fire invaded the others parts of the dwelling so rapidly that the inmates were obliged to flee with only what clothing they could grasp on their way out.

Mr. Rutherford had a considerable sum of money in a bureau drawer upstairs, and this was, of course, destroyed. The loss is estimated at $2,500; no insurance.

OBITUARY.

Death of Mrs. John Comrie.

We regret to announce the death of the wife of Mr John Comrie, at the early age of 31 years, at her home 294 George street, Toronto. Mrs Comrie died on Monday night after an illness of five months. The deceased was the youngest daughter of Mr Wm Redpath, Otonabee, and was well and favorably known in Peterborough, having a large circle of friends and relations. Her death was a particularly sad one, she having only been married one short year and a half, leaving a child five months old, a loving husband, father and mother, brothers Walter of Toronto, Frank of Otonabee and one last surviving sister, Mrs Hugh Gillespie of Ashburnham.

The body was brought down on the 9 o'clock G T R train last night, and will be buried from the home of her parents in Otonabee, at Keene cemetery on Thursday afternoon at 2.30.

Action to be Taken.

The Board of Works proposes to endeavor to compel Messrs Sheehy and Dolan, contractors for the sidewalk on Charlotte street on the south side from George street 115 feet, and on the north side east of the creek, to rebuild the walk. The Council alleges that it slants inwards instead of outwards, and is thus not according to contract.

Police Court

At the police court yesterday two men named J. S. Miller and John Sweeny were charged with trespassing on the premises of T. Guerin. The evidence showed that they came to Guerin's house about twelve o'clock and asked for bread. They were sent away, but returned about an hour afterwards and wanted to get a pail. The police were sent for and the two were arrested. Miller pleaded that they were drunk and did not know what they were doing. The Magistrate fined them $5 each and as they had no money they were sent to gaol for thirty days. Miller had a couple of discharges as a seaman from the steamer Scotsman. One of the stokers on the Scotsman on her last trip was named Sweeny and it is not improbable that the two had wandered up from Montreal.

Moose, or What?

On Thanksgiving day, Mr. R. C. Strickland, of Lakefield, while out shooting, heard a noise amongst his cattle in the field, and listened to see what caused the commotion. He was very much surprised to see an enormous bull moose in the midst of the cattle, and forthwith fired a charge of fine shot at the animal, who started off at a sweeping pace, and has not since been seen. The animal, Mr. Strickland thinks would weight a thousand pounds, or even more. Had this story come from the region of Gold Lake, it would have been attributed to nightmare, occasioned by overwork in guarding the buttermilk tank, but coming as it does from Lakefield, where fiction is comparatively unknown, the editor of this g. f. j. has no alternative but to accept it as gospel truth

"MOTHER'S NOTIONS"

Good For Young People to Follow

"My little grandson often comes up to show me how large the muscles of his arms are.

"He was a delicate child, but has developed into a strong, healthy boy and Postum Cereal Food Coffee has been the principal factor.

"I was induced to give him the Postum coffee because of my own experience with it.

"I am sixty years old, and have been a victim of nervous dyspepsia for many years. Have tried all sorts of patent medicines and had treatment from many physicians, but no permanent relief came. I believe nervous dyspeptics suffer more than other sick people, as they are affected mentally as well as physically.

"I used to read the Postum Cereal advertisements every week in our paper. At first I gave but little attention to them, thinking it was a fraud like so many I had tried, but finally something was said in one of the advertisements that made me conclude to try it. I was very particular to have it prepared strictly according to directions, and use good rich cream. It was very nice indeed, and about bedtime I said to the members of the family that I believed I felt better. One of them laughed and said, 'That's another of mother's notions,' but the notion has not left me yet.

"I continued to improve right along after leaving off coffee, and taking Postum Cereal Food Coffee, and now after three years' use I feel so well that I am almost young again. I know Postum was the cause of the change in my health and I cannot say too much in its favor. I wish I could persuade all nervous people to use it. I have no objection to your using my name, if it will do good to only one sufferer." Mrs. M. L. Turner, 203 Capitol Ave., Omaha, Neb.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.

Fall Sittings of the Court Before Mr. Justice McMahon.

At the Assizes Monday afternoon the Grand Jury brought in true bills in the cases of John Kirk and Eugene Bailey, both charged with larceny.

The Grand Jury then proceeded to make an inspection of the county buildings and prepare its presentment.

THE TAYLOR CASE.

The case of Taylor vs. the Grand Trunk Railway Company, occupied the attention of the court the whole of Monday, afternoon. It was an action instituted by Mr. John Taylor, of Otonabee, against the Grand Trunk Railway, for injuries he sustained in November, 1898, at a railway crossing on the Keene road. His charge was that the railway company was under a duty either to ring the bell or to sound the whistle of their engine at least 80 rods before they came to every railway crossing and to continue ringing the bell or sounding the whistle at short intervals until the locomotive engine passes the crossing. Mr. Taylor was coming to market at Peterborough, and was struck by the engine at the crossing and suffered severe injuries, and he says that all the trouble was caused by the omission of the company's servants to perform their statutory duty. There was a mass of conflicting evidence adduced by both parties, but the jury found a verdict for the plaintiff for $120 and costs, concluding that the whistle was sounded once only, and had not continued sounding.

W. A. Stratton, Q.C., and R. R. Hall for plaintiff; B. B. Osler, Q. C., and W. H. Moore for defendants.

John Kirk, a resident of the town of Peterborough, is charged with the theft of $35 from W. F. Nelson. The Crown alleges that Nelson gave the money to Kirk for the purpose of buying a horse, which the prisoner said he knew could be bought for $35. Instead of purchasing the horse, as agreed, Kirk, it is said left the community and appropriated the money to his own use.

Frank. L. Webb, Colborne, is actin Crown prosecutor, and D. O'Connell appears on behalf of the prisoner.

THE SAMUEL BONNER CASE.

Bonner vs. South Monaghan, et. al. was next taken up. This case had been tried once before as against the Township of South Monaghan, the Medical Board of Health of South Monaghan, and Dr. Wilson oMntgomery, Medical Health Officer, resulting in a non-suit, excepting against the defendant, Wilson Montgomery, M. D., and against whom the court directed a new trial.

The plaintiff with his family were in 1897 residents of the Township of South Monaghan. Diphtheria, it appears broke out in the family of the plaintiff and he lost by death two of his children. He alleged wrongful treatment and negligence on the part of the Medical Health Officer and also endeavored to prove that his dwelling was burned down by the careless manner in which the Medical Health Officer fumigated the building.

There were a great number of witnesses called for both the plaintiff and the defence.

Mr. Justice McMahon held that there was not sufficent evidence to support the plaintiff's contention to let the case go to the jury and dismissed the case with costs.

R. Ruddy, Millbrook, for plaintiff; E. B. Osler, Q. C., and George Edmison for defendant.

A COMPLIMENTARY BANQUET.

To be Tendered to Hon. J. R. Stratton, Provincial Secretary.

The suggestion made by the Times of Monday's issue, of tendering a complimentary non-political citizens' banquet to Hon J R Stratton, the new Provincial Secretary, was acted upon, Mayor Davis taking the initiative by calling a meeting of citizens in his office last evening. The meeting was largely attended by the representative men of the town of both political shades, and a resolution moved by Mr Peter Hamilton, seconded by Mr Robert Fair, was unanimously carried, to the effect that a complimentary non-political citizens banquet be tendered to the Hon Mr Stratton, the new Provincial Secretary, at a date to be agreed upon, and a committee to be appointed to complete necessary arrangements.

Mayor Davis read letter of regret from Mr R M Dennistoun at being unable to be present at the meeting, and endorsing the idea of a non-political citizens banquet to Mr Stratton. Similar letters were received from Mr Poussette, Mr T E Bradburn, and other prominent townsmen.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES.

The Bobcaygeon curlers are getting a move on. At a meeting held the other evening it was decided to build an addition to the skating rink for the sole use of the curlers, so that the game may be enjoyed without interfering with patrons of the other sport.

The Haliburton correspondent of the Bobcaygeon Independent, in an item referring to the high price of hardwood, says: "I don't know how it feels to you, but to me it feels a great shame that birds eye maple should be cast into the stoves for fuel. A cord of such wood in Liverpool or Paris would be worth $80. And we are burning it in our kitchen stoves to dry diapers."

A note in the Times a few days ago found the heirs of Jennet Homel. Her daughter is now living in Midland.

The demand for the Times is rapidly increasing.

A western town has established a municipal lodging house at which an applicant is furnished with a supper, bath, lodging and breakfast on condition that he works at street cleaning half a day. A meal is furnished for one hour's work. The system has put an end to the tramp nuisance.

To-day the Peterborough Cheese Board will meet for the last time this season.

The 57th Battalion band is preparing a special programme for a concert which will be given in the Market Hall at an early date.

Over 150 men are now employed on the Orillia power scheme contract at Ragged Rapids, 19 miles from the town. Work will be prosecuted night and day on the dam, which will be 30 feet thick at the base, tapering to 6 feet at the top, all of solid rock and cement.

The dismal sound of the coal man heaving coal and the presence of the falling leaves upon the sidewalks, reminds us that winter is fast approaching and makes us wonder what we have done with our summer's wages.

Forty-five citizens of Napanee were before Magistrate Daily on Tuesday, charged with procuring liquor during prohibited hours. All the local hotelkeepers were summoned as witnesses against them. All the parties were fined $2 each. According to the above despatch Napanee must be a boozy town.

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to-date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surroundiug villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

Hon. Mr. Stratton's Re-Election Assured.

NO OPPOSITION OFFERED.

The Conservative Party Decide Not to Put Up a Candidate.

They Take the Advice of the Times, and Decide Not to Oppose Mr. Stratton's Return—A Very Commendable Act.

The officers of the West Peterborough Conservative Association met yesterday in Mr. Poussette's office, for the purpose of deciding as to what course to pursue in regard to bringing out a candidate to contest West Peterborough in the election which is to take place in a few days.

After considerable discussion it was finally decided not to contest the riding, and a resolution to this effect was put and carried. It was agreed that there was nothing to be gained, as there was no hope of a successful issue in a fight with Mr. Stratton under existing circumstances.

This is exactly as it should be. Mr. Stratton will now be able to devote his time exclusively to his important duties in Toronto, in which he is sure to advance the interests of his native town on every possible opportunity.

OFF TO THE WARS.

Detachment of Six Men From Lindsay Passed Through Here.

A detachment of six brave fellows, representing the 45th Battalion, left Lindsay on Tuesday for Kingston, thence to Quebec, where they join the Canadian Contingent going to South Africa. They passed through Peterborough on Tuesday, per Grand Trunk. The men are:—

Lieut. Suddaby, Burnt River.
Sergt. McCrea, Omemee.
Corp. Dodd, Burnt River.
Pte. Williams, Lindsay.
Pte. McGregor, Lindsay.
Pte. Corbett, Lindsay.

The sum of five pounds was given each man by the Council. The Y. M. C. A. gave each man a pocket testament.

Williams is the luckiest boy of the lot. When he returns from the Transvaal he will find his old situation waiting for him, and also his back pay. Mr. J. D. Flavelle made a statement to that effect at a public meeting.

Mr. A. B. Terry, confectioner, with commendable forethough, provided a nice lunch for the contingent, to partake of on board the train, as they would not have time to stop for dinner on the trip to Kingston.

Previous to their departure the volunteers were introduced to Mrs. Lieut. Col. Sam. Hughes by Surgeon-Lieut. Shier, at that lady's request. She spoke a few kind words to each, and the men appreciated her interest and thoughtfulness.

A BIG TURN OUT.

To See the Toronto Members of the African Contingent Pass Through.

Last night at eight o'clock a special train passed through on the C P R carrying the Toronto members of the Canadian contingent for South Africa. There was a very large turn out of citizens at the station to give the boys a parting cheer.

The 57th Battalion band and the bugle band were present, and as the train arrived amidst a shower of rockets, the 57th battalion band played "See the Conquering Hero Comes." The train only stopped long enough for the engine to take water, and it pulled out, five thousand people who were present, cheered a hearty farewell and Godspeed, to the departing redcoats.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.

Continuation of the Proceedings of the Court of Assize.

When the civil action of Bonnar vs. South Monaghan et al was concluded at the High Court of Justice Tuesday, the criminal business was proceeded with.

John Kirk was charged with stealing $20 from W. F. Nelson. He pleaded not guilty, and was defended by Mr. D. O'Connell. He was found guilty, but was allowed to go under suspended sentence, he making restitution.

Eugene Bailey charged with stealing a horse and rig at Norwood was also found guilty and was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison. He was defended by Mr. E. B. Stone.

ARMSTRONG vs. JONES.

This is an action brought by the plaintiff, Mr. Wm. H. G. Armstrong, of Town, mechanic, against the defendants, Mr. Charles James, of Town, gingerbeer manufacturers, and his wife, to recover damages for libel. The plaintiff complains that the defendent, Mrs. James, on or about the 5th July, 1896, falsely and maliciously wrote and published of and concerning the plaintiff a certain letter addressed to the plaintiff's wife, which, it was said, meant that the plaintiff was an unchaste character. At the suggestion of his Lordship a settlement was agreed upon. Mr. Stone, as counsel for the defendants, announced to the Court that the defendants now withdraw the letter complained of and the particulars furnished, and that the defendants now retract the libel complained of any agreed to pay the plaintiff's costs of the action. The plaintiff announced that he accepted this as an ample apology. Stratton & Hall, solicitors for the plaintiff; E. B. Stone, solicitor for the defendants.

ALL ENGLAND IN SUSPENSE ABOUT GEN. YULE.

As Yet There is No Official Statement That He Has Effected a Junction With General White's Force at Ladysmith.

GENERAL WHITE AGAIN REPULSES THE BOERS.

An Engagement Near Ladysmith in Which British Forces Lose Over One Hundred Men in Endeavoring to Succor Gen. Yule.

Germany Did Not Promise to Intervene.

LONDON, Oct. 25.—The military censor is hard at work these days, and is doing his best to hide the fact that a portion of the British force in Natal has been forced to retreat. The despatch of the London Daily Mail, which has evidently gone through the censorial mill converts the retreat of General Yule into "a brilliant strategical movement," which is anything but the true state of the case. As a matter of fact, General Yule is making an exceedingly long detour to join General White at Ladysmith, which is another evidence that his direct line of communication with his superior officer has been cut so effectually as to isolate the force at Glencoe and render its position untenable. By the direct route Ladysmith and Dundee are not more than forty miles apart, whereas the route which General Yule's retreating army is taking carries it widely to the eastward, and causes it to cover at least eighty or ninety miles.

The movement of General White up the Newcastle road was a feint to draw the attention of the Boers from the direction of Helpmakarr and the pass through which General Yule had to go in his retreat, and so render it easier for the latter to break through the cordon of Boers which surrounded him.

Despite the efforts of the War Office to conceal the fact the British have sustained a temporary check in Natal, and the Boers have won a tactical victory by causing the abandonment of a large stretch of territory in that country. However, the lion is only drawing back in order to make a stronger bound upon his prey, and the result will not be in doubt.

Whether General White and General Yule have joined forces or not is not yet definitely known. The British War Office has certainly not received news to this effect though certain journals profess to have done so. The suspicious silence is giving rise to the greatest anxiety, and official news is being eagerly awaited by the crowds who read the War Office bulletins. It is useless to disguise the fact that General Yule's march is attended with the greatest of danger, owing to the difficult country through which he is compelled to pass. It is to be hoped that General White's covering attack served its object by drawing away the Boers, though the absence of news gives rise to the belief that it was not wholly successful.

IS GEN. YULE SAFE?

London, Oct. 25.—The retreat of General Yule by a circuitous upon Ladysmith from Dundee is confirmed, as is also the report of a brush between the Boers and General White, who advanced to cover his retreat. Until the two forces have effected a junction, however, great anxiety will exist, for it is plain that the small force under General Yule is far outnumbered by the Boers.

GENERAL WHITE'S DESPATCH.

The following despatch from Gen. Sir Geo. Stewart White to the Marquis of Lansdowne, Secretary of State for War, received last evening at 11 o'clock, was posted at the War Office shortly after midnight:

Ladysmith, Oct. 24, 9 p.m.

"Information received yesterday showed that the Boers had established themselves in considerable numbers in an exceedingly good position west of the main road leading from Ladysmith to Dundee.

"I also had information that the Dundee force, formerly commanded by General Symons, and since his wound commanded by General Yule, was falling back on Ladysmith by way of the Helpmakaar road, Beith, and the valleys of the Waschbank and Sunday rivers, and was expected to reach Sunday river valley to-day.

"I, therefore, moved out a strong force to cover the movement of Yule's column. The enemy was discovered about seven miles out of Ladysmith, in a position of exceptional natural strength, west of the road. When he saw that the preparations were being made against him, he opened fire with one gun with great accuracy.

"Our artillery soon got into position and the gun was silenced. Troops were ordered to occupy a strong ridge, parallel to the enemy's position, but nearer to the road.

"I confined my efforts to occupying him and hitting him hard enough to prevent his taking action against Yule's column. Numbers of the enemy fled to the west, and the firing had practically ceased at 2 o'clock."

General White evidently encountered the Free State force, which had taken up a position in the Biggersberg hills, and blocked the road between Ladysmith and Glencoe, also threatening Gen. Yule's flank. The dispersal of the Orange Free State force sensibly improves the British position at Waschbank, if Gen. White decides to wait there for Gen. Joubert.

The Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Mail cables:

"The fighting to-day outside Ladysmith was a mere brush. The losses on either side were insignificant. It was merely an artillery duel, in which the Boers came off decidedly the worse."

TWELVE KILLED, 89 WOUNDED

London, Oct. 25.—General White has telegraphed to the War Office from Rustfontein, under date of October 24, saying that in the fight near Ladysmith twelve of the British force were killed, eighty-nine wounded and five are missing, the casualties being mostly among the Gloucester regiment.

This is probably another version of yesterday's fighting, as already known. General White this morning officially notified the War Office that the bullet had been extracted from General Symons's wound and that he was doing well.

Other despatches from Cape Town say that advices from Mafeking confirm the statement that fifty Boers were killed by the explosion of two trucks of dynamite purposely sent out by Col. Baden-Powell to draw the Boer fire.

The offer of General Cronje, the Boer commander in the vicinity of Mafeking to Col. Baden-Powell to exchange prisoners referred to Captain Nesbitt and others of the armored train wrecked at Kraaipan.

Some significance is attached at Cape Town to the proclamation issued at Pretoria by the Transvaal Government with the view to safeguard British property.

The situation in the west is becoming complicated. The Boer proclamations of annexation and the claims of a victory at Glencoe are liable to induce the Dutch to side with their countrymen already in the field. It is said for instance that the Boer forces have evacuated Vryburg, which, it is added, will be garrisoned by the local Dutch, among whom are prominent Bunditers and Government employes.

It is also believed that the Dutch beyond Griquatown are only awaiting encouragement to declare for the Transvaal.

Advices from Philipstown yesterday say that the searchlights of the Kimberley defences were visible the night previous and that therefore Kimberley is still intact.

DID GERMANY WITHDRAW?

Berlin, Oct. 25.—The Tageblatt denies the statement of the Eclair, of Paris, that Germany, after promising assistance to France and Russia for the purpose of intervention in the Transvaal, seems now to withdraw it.

The Tageblatt declares: "We believe we are well informed when we state that the German Government did not participate in any combination for intervention."

TOKEN OF ESTEEM.

Mr. Wm. Lewis the Recipient of an Address and Handsome Present.

The employees of the Times Printing Company, to the number of about forty, assembled in the manager's office yesterday, when the following address was read by Mr. Chas. H. J. Mitchell, to Mr. Wm. Lewis, on the eve of his marriage:

Peterborough, Oct. 25, 1899.

Mr. Wm. Lewis,

Dear Sir,—We the undersigned employees of the Times Printing Company desire to tender you on the eve of your marriage a slight token of our regard and esteem.

During the years which you have been associated with us in the capacity as chief of the bindery department, we have always found you kind and obliging—ever ready and willing to assist those who need help. A kind and thoughtful master, you have earned the hearty good will of those immediately under your charge as well as the respect and esteem of those in the other departments.

In asking you to accept this small token of our regard, we do so not on account of its real value, for it but feebly represents our feelings, but as a very slight momento of our respect and admiration for you.

Wishing you and the lady who is to become the partner of your joys and sorrows, a long, happy and prosperous life, we are,

Yours respectfully,

Chas. H. J. Mitchell. Geo. W. Heap.
Geo. F. Cairns. Fred H. Thomas.
Lizzie Whitcroft.

On behalf of the several departments.

The gift consisted of a beautiful banquet lamp with an onyx-top table and jardinier.

Mr. Lewis, who was taken entirely by surprise, replied briefly and feelingly.

Mr. Campbell, member for South Renfrew, resigned to permit Mr. Latchford's election for that seat.

There is every probability that no opposition will be offered Mr. Stratton.

A MATRIMONIAL EVENT.

Marriage of Mr. Samuel L. Crawford and Miss Margaret Sharpe.

The home was tastily decorated with palms and flowers. The bride was assisted by Miss R L Robertson, while Mr Fred Crawford, brother of the groom, acted in a similar capacity for the groom.

The bride was charmingly attired in a dress of cream grey, while the bridesmaid wore cream silk.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS

Opening of the Investigation Before Judge Weller.

BIG ARRAY OF COUNSEL.

Several Witnesses Examined, But Nothing Very Startling Elicited.

An Interesting Argument Among the Legal Lights With Reference to the Charges Under Investigation.

The much talked of investigation into the alleged irregularties in connection with the paving contracts opened yesterday before Judge Weller. Nearly all the members of the council and town officials were present. Mr. E. B. Edwards, acted for the council, while Mr. R. M. Dennistoun looked after Mr. Sheehy's interests, Mr. R. F. McWilliams appeared for Ald J. B. McWilliams. Messrs. Evans and Langford were represented by Mr. D. W. Dumble.

Mr. Armstrong, town clerk, was the first witness called by Mr. Edwards for the purpose of proving the contract between Mr. Sheely and the town.

Mr. Dennistoun asked on what charge Mr. Edwards would proceed first.

Mr. Edwards—Into the charge against Mr. Sheehy.

Mr. Dennistoun stated that he had a list of what purported to be charges and that they one and all referred to matters which were under the control of the town engineer, from whom there was no appeal.

Mr. Edwards then placed the contract with Mr. Sheehy before the court.

Mr. Dennistoun referred to section 1 of the general condition of the contract. This clause refers all changes in material, etc., to the town engineer. Mr. Dennistoun pointed out that the first four charges in the Council's resolution were of this nature. The engineer had full control. It was not fair, therefore, that they should hold any charges over the contractors where such power was placed by these contracts and the authority to investigate them is vested in no one else. The contractors should not have to be put to the expense of defending themselves to anyone else first.

Mr. Edwads did not see that anything had occurred which had taken away from the contractors their responsibility to carry out their contracts.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams pointed out that there was really a charge that the contractors had defrauded both the engineer and the town.

Mr. Dennistoun submitted that unless charges of a different nature were made there was no jurisdiction in His Honor Judge Weller to launch upon such an investigation. He quoted from the statutes in support of his argument.

Judge Weller held that if this investigation was an action by the corporation against the contractors the latter might invoke the aid of the section quoted by Mr. Dennistoun. But this is not an action for damages and the Judge held that the clause quoted did not apply to an investigation of alleged fraud. He thought he ought to investigate it. There is an allegation of wrong doing somewhere on the part of the town officials and the Judge held that it should be investigated.

Mr. Dennistoun held that in the charges laid before the court there was no allegation of wrongdoing on the part of his client, Mr. Sheehy. The particulars should be given. The Judge had so ruled when the matter was first brought up last week.

Mr. Edwards made an explanation regarding the charges which he had been asked to submit. He had invited all parties to call upon him and had received no information except some in a letter from Messrs. Poussette and McWilliams. Mr. Edwards read this letter. Acting on this letter he had subpoenaed all the town officials and aldermen.

The Town Clerk's Evidence.

Hearing of evidence was resumed. Mr. Armstrong produced the contracts with the contractors, the report of Inspector Ranney on the materials in the contracts and other papers and minutes dealing with the matter.

Mr. Ranney, as shown by the minutes, was appointed inspector on Mr. Sheehy's first contract on July 10th last. He served till the contract was completed. On Aug. 7th F. Bartlett and T. M. McFadden were appointed inspectors. Mr. McFadden was inspector on Mr. Sheehy's second contract and Mr. Bartlett and afterwards Mr. Dawson, on Messrs. Evans & Langford's contract. Mr. Armstrong testified that the work was carried on under the Board of Works. Ald. Davidson was the first chairman of the Board of Works. On June 5th Ald. Langford was appointed acting chairman. On Aug. 7th Ald. Langford expressed verbally to the Council that he did not wish to act as chairman. The Council appointed nobody to the place and the Mayor took the chair at meetings afterwards held.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams asked whether at any of the Council meetings there was ever anything done to alter the contracts of the specifications. Mr. Armstrong replied that there was not.

Ald. Langford asked a question regarding the time the tenders were received. Mr. Armstrong replied that the tenders for the contracts afterwards awarded to Messrs. Evans & Langford were received on the 24th of July, the tender of Messrs. Evans & Langford at 11.45 a. m., of Mr. Hayes at 11.50 a. m., and the others later. They were put in the vault and were opened at the Board of Works that evening.

Mayor Davis on the Stand.

Mayor Davis was then called by Mr. Edwards. He testified that he had been acting as chairman of the Board of Works since Ald. Langford quit. Asked what he knew regarding the investigation he stated that the first he had definitely

LET US FLY TOGETHER.

Despite the fact that a young English inventor of great promise has just been killed by a fall from a flying machine of his own construction, the problem of aerial navigation will assuredly be solved in the near future. Flying will become the sport of the next generation!

Sailing over water a mile deep and scudding along the stratum of air found at an equal elevation above the earth's surface does not differ materially. If one has to go to the bottom, the finish is far less lingering in one case than in the other. A parachute, properly made, is a far surer life preserver than a corkwood belt.

When flying takes the place of rowing and yachting, we shall find every well-regulated family provided with a parachute outfit, and may expect to see the athletic boys and girls of that period covertly practicing its use from housetop or balcony. A girl's education will not be thought complete unless she be prepared to jump overboard and descend to the earth in the event of accident to the aerial car in which she may be enjoying the fresh air.

BLACK RACES IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Both British and Boers have reason to fear the attitude of the blacks in the war. There is a native question in South Africa that grows more perplexing as the Kaffirs thrive and multiply.

Their districts and reservations are the most densely peopled parts of South Africa. In Cape Colony they outnumber the whites five to one, and in Natal fifteen to one. In Basuto Land there are only 600 whites to 218,000 natives. In spite of the large influx of white men in the Transvaal, the blacks of that country were estimated in 1896 to outnumber the whites three to one. The Orange Free State alone has no native question of a serious nature, the Afrikanders equalling the blacks in numbers. But the State has had frequent troubles with the natives outside its frontiers, and particularly with the Basutos.

The Basutos are now said to be rising against the Boers, whom they accuse of having ill-treated them in the gold fields and of robbing native miners of their wages. Their district is a British crown colony surrounded on all sides by British and Boer territory. There is no certainty that the quarter of a million Basutos would not turn against the British as readily as against the Boers if opportunity [illegible]. Their grievances against both Dutch and English are deep-seated and of long standing. They have had repeated wars with the Orange Free State, which secured a slice of Basuto soil before the remainder was taken under British protection. The attempt of Cape Colony to disarm them resulted in a war that cost the Cape $20,000,000. The prohibition of liquor, the collection of the hut tax, the suppression of many of the chiefs, are among other causes of discontent that, at times, have led to disorder. Their mountain valleys are most fruitful and the people have made considerable progress in civilization, but, after all, they have the mountaineer's love of independence, as they have shown in their hard-fought battles with the whites around them. There is no telling how far they may be able to intensify the present troubles, but that they may oppose one or both of these hostile nations is the fact that excites anxiety.

The Zulus, whose country is now a part of Natal, are arming, and despatches from Durban say that they and the Swazis will make common cause against the Boers. These tribes and also the Basutos have very few guns; but the warfare they can wage with the Kaffir assegai has proven their prowess on many a battlefield, in some of which they have annihilated their white enemies. There is no doubt that the millions of Kaffirs of South Africa can give serious trouble to one or both of the white contestants.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

In the Transvaal war, England buying mules in the United States would indicate there's going to be something stubborn in the contest.

•• • ••

Those who talk of Peterborough expanding, and becoming a city by taking in Ashburnham should not forget that when they come to the Otonabee River they put their foot in it.

•• • ••

Another reason for England not thinking of throwing up the sponge in an affair of this kind is its needing it to wipe Transvaal off the map.

•• • ••

It's fully time to say that the Columbia won as a matter of course.

•• • ••

No level-headed girl will insist, merely from the fighting going around there, that Kimberley diamonds are the only ones suited for engagements.

•• • ••

Regarding that America's cup it's almost a pity so good a fellow as Sir Thomas Lipton should have to sup disappointment from it.

•• • ••

About the only proof the English soldiers coming from India and elsewhere to the Transvaal are happy, is their being in transports.

•• • ••

At the same time, as in all cases of actual war news, the thunders of the cannon in the Transvaal will be the most reliable reporters.

•• • ••

After centuries of ridicule and jeers the humble mule is beginning to receive the recognition which his merit deserve. He is a necessity of modern warfare. Next to gunpowder, he is the most essential munition of war. Indeed, without him there would be no gunpowder available in campaigns like that in Cuba and also the one in South Africa. He is the carrier and upon him depends the movements of armies. He endures all climates and all climates and all fodder. Strong, agile and shure-fotted, his uncertain temper is his only failing—a failing which can well be overlooked when his many virtues are considered. The mule is destined to fill a higher place in warlike heraldry. The lion does not fittingly symbolize the genius of war. The honor belongs to the mule—the great Canadian mule with a paint brush tail and ears a foot long. He is the modern Mars.

CAUSE OF THE BOER WAR.

OVER ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF STRIFE AND BITTERNESS.

Some Things That Led to the Present Outbreak of Hostilities in South Africa.

Rightly to understand the present situation in the Transvaal, the history of South Africa since its occupation by the British should be taken into consideration. The first white men to make settlements in the Cape were the Dutch. They went there in the 17th century, and they were joined by the British in 1795. The British Government captured the territory by force of arms in 1806, and the Cape of Good Hope became definitely a colony of the British Crown in 1814. The white population then consisted largely of men of Dutch descent, though with a considerable admixture of Huguenot blood. English immigration followed British sovereignty, and in 1820, not less than 4,000 British colonists arrived at the Cape.

Meanwhile the Boers, as the Dutch settlers were called, resented the autocratic rule of the British, and were especially incensed at the interference made with their "right" to enslave the negro races. The emancipation of slavery in the colony in 1834 was the cause of the "Great Trek," or exodous, of 1836, which led to the formation of Natal, the Orange Free State and the Transvaal. One grievance of the Boers was that when slavery was abolished the slave owners received as compensation orders on London, where they were compelled to cash on the spot at ruinous rates, practically impoverishing them. Another was that by order of the Government they were obliged to surrender certain valuable lands on the Kei River, which had been annexed. In rage and disgust the Boers began to go north and went into the wilderness. Those who went north across the Vaal River were practically unmolested by the English. They were, however, still claimed as British subjects, and on August 21, 1845, the Government of the colony issued a proclamation against them.

THE TERRITORY ANNEXED.

In 1848, after quelling a native uprising beyond the Orange River, the Cape Government formally annexed the territory between the Orange and Vaal, under the name of the Orange River Sovereignty. To accomplish this pacification, the Government became involved in a conflict with the Boers of the Orange district, who were joined by the farmers from beyond the Vaal under the redoubtable Andries Pretorious.

A Kaffir war being then in progress, Pretorious took advantage of the predicament of the British, and proposed "a permanent pacific settlement," and on January 16, 1852, received from the Crown officers a guarantee that the farmers north of the Vaal had "the right to manage their own affairs and to govern themselves according to their own laws, without any interference on the part of the British Government." Two years later, at a convention signed at Bloomfontein, Great Britain also repudiated sovereignty over the Orange territory.

Such was the origin of these two Free States, together containing about 4,000 adult males. Under enlightened governments the Orange Free State prospered. Such was not the case in the Transvaal, for within its borders there were at least four so-called republics, each claiming sovereign power. Finally, one of these rose above the others, and in 1858 the Volksraad passed the "Gronwet," or fundamental law, which is still nominally the constitution of the country. But it was not until 1864 that all the Boers north of the Vaal agreed to recognize M. W. Pretorious, son of Andries, as head of the State. The white population then numbered about 30,000. Wars with the large native population were frequent, the Boers refused to pay taxes, their paper money was worth about one-fourth of its face value, and the country was going from bad to worse.

THE BRITISH INTERVENE.

In 1876 matters came to a crisis, which led to the intervention of the British Government in Transvaal affairs, and finally to the annexation of that State on April 12, 1877. It came about in this way. The weakened and disorganized republic was hemmed in by the Kaffirs on the north and Zulus on the south, and not only in danger of extermination itself, but, by failing to repel the common foe of white men, became a menace to every civilized community in South Africa.

It was then that the British Government sent Sir Theophilus Shepstone as a special commissioner to "territories adjoining the colony of Natal," to inquire into the recent disturbances. He was empowered "in certain events to exercise the jurisdiction of Her Majesty over such territories or some of them." On his arrival in Pretoria he explained to the Executive Council of the Transvaal that his mission "was to confer with the Government and people of the Transvaal with the object of initiating a new state of things, which would guarantee security for the future." After three months' enquiry, the Commissioner became convinced that the only method of effectually bringing safety to the Boers and of protecting British interests in other colonies was by annexing it to Great Britain, and he issued a proclamation to that effect. The majority of the people readily accepted annexation as affording protection against savage foes that threatened them with annihilation. Of the Executive Council only, President Burgers and Paul Kruger, entered a protest, and refused to serve under the new form of government.

As Sir Theophilus Shepstone entered the Transvaal with only 25 mounted police to back up his authority, it cannot be said that he annexed the country by force of arms. But he has been blamed for too precipitate action, for had he waited two or three months more the Boers would undoubtedly have been compelled to seek British protection. His step probably saved the colony from being absorbed by Germany or some other European power, but when little aid came from the British, the former slight opposition to annexation became real. Paul Kruger went to England to protest, while a memorial protesting against his protest, and signed by many Boers, was also sent to London. Kruger's protest was rejected, and the Home Government was now definitely pledged to maintain her authority in the country and to see that the promises of local self-government was fulfilled.

THE ZULU WAR.

The outbreak of the Zulu war in 1877 kept the hands of the authorities full, and, in part, at least, prevented them from carrying out the proposed reforms. The Boers complained at this neglect, especially as the British Government had failed to give them protection against the Zulus. This had been one of the chief reasons for accepting annexation. A second deputation, consisting of Paul Kruger and P. J. Joubert, went to England to protest again. Meantime, many of the Boers were serving against the Zulus, and fully half of the population were still in favor of British rule. The Government assured Kruger and Joubert that it was impossible to withdraw the Queen's sovereignty from the Transvaal. This was in 1878.

Soon after the return of these delegates, Sir Bartlet Frere proceeded to Pretoria. He reported that many loyal Boers claimed that they were being intimidated by the disaffected members of the State, and testified that substantial improvements had been made in the administration since annexation.

Sir Bartle also visited the camp of the malcontents and argued the case with a committee, who demanded a restoration of their independence. To them he replied that annexation was "irrevocable." This was the fifth time that British sovereignty had been asserted. He also reported that the malcontents were far from forming a majority of the white population. It is now admitted that neither the Government at home nor the administrator, Sir Theophilus Shepstone, had been vigorous in their efforts to effect reforms or to protect the Boers. But in 1879 the most urgent danger in which they stood—that of being slaughtered and plundered by the Zulus and Kaffirs—was removed by the victories of Lord Chelmsford and Sir Garnet Wolseley. But Lord Wolsley's settlement was far from successful. He announced a new constitution in December, 1879, the chief feature of which was a nominated and not an elect Council, as the Boers had been promised. He declared that malcontents Boers were the "most formidable enemies the Transvaal had ever had." He caused the arrest of Pretorious on a charge of high treason, but, quickly changing his mind, dragged him from prison and nominated him a member of the Legislative Council.

THE BOERS RISE IN REBELLION.

In England, Mr. Gladstone, in his campaign speeches, was proclaiming the action of the Conservative Government in South Africa "an invasion of a free European, Christian and republican community," but when the Liberals came into office, the Cabinet decided that "the sovereignty of the Queen over the Transvaal could not be relinquished." Sir Bartle Frere was succeeded by Sir George Colley as High Commissioner, and in December,

THE ENTREE AN ECONOMY.

It Dulls the Eater's Appetite For the Dinner Proper.

In the French and Italian cuisine, where economy is studied far more scientifically and thoroughly than in the English or American kitchen, the entree is not considered an extravagance. On the contrary, it is looked upon rather as an attractive economy—like soup, which dulls the eater's appetite so that he partakes less heartily of the more costly meat courses that follow. On the continent the luncheon never begins, as with us, with the chief dish of substantials. There is an introduction in the shape of a soup, or a dish of eggs, or of rice, or of macaroni, or semolino prepared in appetizing mode. Upon this the luncher tries the first edge of his appetite, so to speak. The piece de resistance comes afterward.

In the same manner, at dinner, the soup is almost invariably followed by one or two entrees. In the more ambitious menus these may consist of fish or poultry, or even of meat, prepared in croquettes or rissoles, or vol-au-vent. If there are two entrees, the vegetable will come second. But when, as is the case at many tables, there is only one entree, this is nearly always a vegetable and is served directly after the soup.

It must be borne in mind that the old fashioned custom which prevailed so generally some years ago in America, and is still to be found in certain places, of serving a number of vegetables with the principal meat dish is not followed on the continent. In England it is not unusual to see half a dozen dishes of vegetables appear with the roast. There they have even less idea of variety than is common with us, for precisely the same vegetables are offered day after day until one grows weary of the very sight of them. This, of course, is not the case among those people who have made a study of dinner giving and have grafted French customs on the British stock.

On the continent, however, things are done in a different fashion. At a simple dinner, containing, let us say, five courses, the first will be soup, the second a vegetable entree, the third meat of some kind, with one, or at the most two, vegetables, and one of them rarely fails to be a salad. Then comes a sweet, and after it fruit or cheese. The vegetable that appears as an entree need not of necessity be costly or unusual. Perhaps it is only a cauliflower, served with a good white sauce, or spinach, not cooked as we see it here—the stems and leaves coarsely chopped—but minced to a powder and then put through a colander, so that it is deliciously smooth and soft before it is dressed with butter or cream and surrounded with three cornered bits of toast or friend bread, or the entree may be nothing more elegant than white turnips or young carrots cut into small pieces, stewed tender and served with a cream sauce, or celery divided into three inch lengths, fried brown and seasoned with a tomato gravy. The name of the combination is legion, but they all have one point in common—that they are comparatively inexpensive.—Harper's Bazar.

Poison Bottle Ornaments.

At the Metropolitan Museum of Art, in New York city, there is a great collection of ancient jewelry, much of it in gold richly adorned with precious stones. Jewelers in the metropolis frequently visit the museum for the purpose of obtaining suggestions. This collection at the Metropolitan museum is in fact the finest assemblage of antique objects of personal ornaments in existence. Some of them date as far back as 900 B. C. Those of them which are made of silver have been practically destroyed by oxidation, but the gold ones being cleaned are as bright and new looking as they were 2,500 or 3,000 years ago. The jewelry from Cyprus is the work of ancient Phoenicians and Greeks.

One thing very noticeable is the frequency of tiny gold bottles attached to objects of jewelry derived from those ancient times. All evidence points to the conclusion that they were employed to hold poison, for in those days life was by no means secure, and at any time an emergency might arise where a man or woman would be glad to end existence promptly to escape lifelong imprisonment or indescribable torture by the horrible means used by the ancients.

CRIMINAL ANIMALS.

A Naturalist's Study of Thoroughly Wicked Wild Beasts.

E. Seton Thompson, naturalist to the government of Manitoba, gives in his book, "Wild Animals I Have Known," some curious examples of depravity among wild beasts.

The best story is that of the New Mexican wolf who led a band that killed a cow a day for five years. Finally the ranchers offered $1,000 for this wolf's pelt. He was easily distinguished. His track was an inch wider than that of other wolves.

A professional wolf hunter tried to earn the bounty, but the wolves killed his dogs, and he gave it up. Then Mr. Thompson took the case. He melted cheese in the fat of a heifer in a china dish, cut it into lumps with a bone knife to avoid the taint of metal and put in strychnine and cyanide in odor proof capsules. He wore gloves steeped in cow's blood and avoided breathing on the baits.

The baits were picked up. He followed the track and found that the wolf had laid all four together and scattered dirt over them.

The wolves then took to killing sheep. Traps were set to the number of 130 in different parts of the ranch. The trails of the big wolf and of the pack were traced up to one set of traps, and the doings of the leader were marked in the dust.

He had stopped the rest, warned by scent, and scratched around the trap till he found the buried chain and picket. On another part of the ranch he entered an H-shaped series of traps and detected the danger. The trail showed that he had slowly backed out on his own track, putting each paw down backward until out of the dangerous ground. He had then sprung some of the traps by scratching clods and stones backward at them with his hind feet.

He was at last caught by dragging over the traps the body of a female wolf, the scent of which he followed.

No more skillful criminal than this wolf was ever known. Old Eph, a lame grizzly, which in two years ruined half the hog raisers in the Sacramento valley by his wasteful love of pork, was a close second. A bobtailed wolf kept the whole city of Paris in terror for ten years at the beginning of the fourteenth century, and the Lochnee panther, in India, killed 300 human beings in less than two years.

A famous rogue dog of Derbyshire was conspicuous by its faithful care of sheep in the daytime, but was savage and ugly toward man strangers. It slept in the house and was never suspected, though sheep worrying took place on the farms near.

At last it was tracked in the snow from a fold where 20 sheep had been killed to the farm where it lived, the dog having forgotten that the track would show, though it took partial means to conceal it by running along the top of a stone wall.

True Boston Culture.

"Fifty cents for this beautiful little vase," called the auctioneer. "Going going for 50. Do I hear 55 for this beautiful little vase?" and no one thought anything about the auctioneer or the vase which went for 50 cents until another one was put up, an immense affair of cloisonne. "Now we will show you an exquisite piece, not to be duplicated in this country," he went on. "An exquisite cloisonne varse"—and there the Wellesley girl said excitedly to her companion:

"Now, that is what I call true Boston culture. Would you expect a man of that kind to make such a delicate distinction? He must have been educated at a woman's college. When he is selling a 50 cent article, he says vase in the ordinary way, with the long sound of the 'a,' but when he comes to a big piece of cloisonne it is varse, with the broad 'a' every time. That is according to rule. Over $10 in price you find a varse, but under that nothing but an ordinary, everyday vase."—New York Times.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it have an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile" (1, 257).

There is another version of the fable however, which is more often referred to in literature, and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how > the mournful crocodile

> With sorrow snares relenting passengers."
> —"2, Henry VI.," 1, 228.
> —"Poet's Lore."

A MEMBER SUSPENDED

Patrick O'Brien Says Chamberlain's Hands Are Bloody.

HE REFUSES TO WITHDRAW

And the House on a Vote of 316 to 26 Compels His Withdrawal.

An Exciting Scene in the British House of Commons When an Irish Member Denounced Chamberlain.

London, Oct. 24.—In the House of Commons yesterday afternoon the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks Beach, made a statement on the question of the expenditure entailed by the Transvaal war. He said the expenditure for the year had been increased by the supplementary vote to $806,025,000, but, he added, the revenue had increased, and he expected there would be an increase of $15,000,000 over his estimate of the revenue. There would be a considerable contribution towards the unforseen expenditure, and would leave about $35,000,000 to be provided. He thought that the money should be raised by a temporary addition to the floating debt. The Chancellor of the Exchequer therefore asked for power to raise $40,000,000 by treasury bills, the whole question of repayment and the question of fresh taxation to be left over to the next financial year.

Who Will Pay?

As British colonies had been invaded, he considered it to be consistent with all the laws of war if, when it was brought to a successful termination, the Transvaal taxpayer should at any rate have to bear part of the cost. He believed that under a pure and honest government it would be perfectly possible for the Transvaal to bear not only the ordinary expenses of government, but also to provide a reasonable sum towards the expenses of the war, with a reduction at the same time of the taxation of the gold fields.

Continuing, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach said: "If these anticipations are not fulfilled and the sum borrowed proves to be but part of the total cost of the war, we shall appeal to your patriotism next April. If fresh taxation were introduced now it might prolong the debate and produce a division which might be entirely misunderstood abroad.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the leader of the Opposition, agreed that it was not desirable to show a sign of disunion.

326 to 28.

Eventually the proposals of Sir Michael Hicks-Beach were agreed to by a vote of

An Idiotical Remark.

Mr. Patrick O'Brien, Parnellite member for Kilkenny City, declared that the hands of the British Secretary of State for the Colonies, Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, were as much stained with blood as those of any murderer who had ever mounted the scaffold.

The Speaker called upon Mr. O'Brien to withdraw his remark, but he refused to do so, whereupon the House, by a vote of 316 to 26, resolved to suspend him, and he left the House remarking:

"You had better bring up another army corps, unless you want it somewhere else."

The House then adjourned.

Cost Her Her Reason

A once renowned French actress lost her reason through a trifling occurrence. She was visiting at an ancient chateau, in the vicinity of Mentone, when a friend challenged her to pass the night alone in an alleged haunted chamber. She accepted the challenge. During the night she called for aid, and an attendant found her in a state of pitiful fright through certain uncanny sounds she had heard. Finally she developed a nervous disorder, which culminated in insanity. The ghostly visitants were rats.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. Eager to Enlist.

Winnipeg, Oct. 23.—To-day $600 was subscribed at the citizens' meeting at noon for the boys who leave for the east to-morrow en route to the Transvaal. The volunteers are tumbling over each other in their eagerness to go to the front.

Preparing for Home.

New York, Oct. 23.—The crew of the yacht Shamrock have been at work since early morning stripping the racer of her racing rigging, Captain Hogarth says that he expects to take the mast off to-morrow and to have the yacht under jury rig by the end of the week. Captain Hogarth also stated that he called on Designer Fife at the Fifth avenue Hotel recently and found his condition to be very serious.

The Shamrock's crew together with the Columbia's are to be entertained at a smoker to-morrow night.

London, Oct 24.—A sensational burglary has taken place at the Savoy hotel, London, where the rooms of Mrs Stockwell, of New York, widow of a New York jeweller, were entered and robbed of jewellery valued at $50,000 and bank notes and other negotiable currency to the amount of $25,000.

Increasing the Army.

New York, Oct. 23.—A Washington despatch says that the Secretary of War has recommended the increasing of the regular United State army to 100,000 men.

THE MAGICAL MIRROR

A CURIOUS GLASS OWNED BY A WASHINGTON MAN.

Several Well Known Persons Have Seen Portentous Pictures Reflected in Its Oval Surface, Although It Will Not Work For All.

While all of us have heard in early childhood of the tales of magical mirrors, in which impossible heroes saw impossible heroines in danger, from which said heroes proceeded to rescue the fair maidens, yet such things have been relegated by most of us to the region of the imagination. We regard such things as being outside of the real world of today and belonging to the [illegible]. Yet, in spite of our prosaic nineteenth century, it is nevertheless a fact that a Washington gentleman is the possessor of an article which might be classed as appropriately belonging to the time of Aladdin and the wonderful lamp.

This strange acquisition is a mirror which came from India, and in which one can see the events which the future will bring forth. That such is its power is attested by some of the best known gentlemen of the city, who, for obvious reasons do not wish their names to be mentioned.

This mirror came into the possession first of a Washington lady who was traveling in India, and, being interested in the religion of the country, took a trip to the famous temple of Alora, which lies in a rocky side of the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. This temple is now but a ruin of jagged rocks, jutting out harshly into the soft greensward that rolls smoothly down into the valley below. Above tower the vast mountains with their glittering caps of snow looking down on the peaceful tropical scene where for ages the followers of Brahma have performed their sacred rites.

The ruins of the temple stand open to the weather, and its ancient glory, which shone in such splendor before the English came to India, is now diminished. But a small band of Brahman monks still kept the sacred secrets and ceremonies alive. Few Europeans ever penetrate this section of the mountains, but the Washington lady mounted and visited the monastery. While there she managed to secure possession of one of the mirrors made by the monks and reputed to possess wonderful properties.

The lady brought the mirror with her on her return to town, and at her death it came into the possession of Mr. Lowdermilk. From him it was bought by a gentleman who takes great interest in such matters, but who would not like the fact of the existence of the mirror in his house to be known, as it would attract thousands of seekers after the curious. After paying quite a large sum for the glass the mirror was brought home and put to the test.

The mirror is oval in shape, about a foot long and is surrounded by a wooden frame two inches in width and painted a dark green. The back of the glass is coated with asphaltum and then covered with dark linen, so that the whole has the appearance of a lustrous opal. The method of use is by sitting with the mirror in one's lap and holding the glass so that there is no reflection of other objects shining on the surface of the glass. If the test is a success, there will appear in about a quarter of an hour a thin, cloudy mist, which will slowly float over the surface, and then the images of future events will be mirrored in the seemingly fathomless depth of the dark glass.

The gentleman who owns the mirror has never been himself successful in seeing anything, but a friend of his, a prominent judge and a thirty-third degree Mason, had a remarkable experience. He placed the mirror in his lap, and, after half an hour, a mist floated over the surface; then he saw reflected in the glass a picture of a coffin, within which was the still, white face of a dead man. At first glance the features seemed those of the gazer, but on looking closely it was seen that they represented exactly the brother of the gentleman—a man then in perfect health. In a second the picture shifted, and another face—that of a friend—appeared within the sides of the coffin. The gentleman in two weeks afterward lost his brother, and in a short while his friend, whose face he had also seen, passed to another world.

A son of the owner was one evening looking into the mirror, when he saw within a picture of a house in flames. There were the servants leaping from the porches, then returning to drag out the furniture. The glare shone around on a yard which the gazer recognized as that of his own farmhouse down the Potomac. By the mail two days afterward he received from his housekeeper an account of a fire which had destroyed his home, and the description tallied exactly with the picture seen in the mirror.

Another man, a gentleman employed in the bureau of ethnology and well known as a scientist and linguist, has also seen many pictures in the mirror—pictures of events in his life which were afterward realized to the letter.

By a student of occultism the following directions were given in a treatise on that subject, which dealt with the methods employed in making such mirrors: The materials used are one glass, 8½ inches by 8½ inches, free from flaws and concave in shape; a small amount of turpentine asphaltum, a pint of spirits of turpentine, a small hairbrush, a box in which to case the mirror, and a half a yard of new cloth.

The glass is placed in a clean, light and airy room, the materials washed perfectly clean; then the brush and the glass are wiped over with turpentine. Afterward the back of the glass is coated smoothly with a thin varnish of the asphaltum and left to dry, the operation being repeated for the two following days. At the end of that time the mirror is magnetized by placing the hands above it and slowly waving them to and fro, so that the animal magnetic force may be well absorbed by the asphaltum. The asphaltum is the best known material for absorption of the aura of the human body, and this is the reason for its use. The test should be made also in a clean, airy chamber when alone and when the mind is composed, and by perseverance the inquirer is sure to be rewarded—so say the books on magic.—Washington Post.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

Mrs. James M. Barrie, wife of the author of "The Little Minister," is said to be a very pretty woman.

Mme. Navarro's (Mary Anderson's) sister is Mother Dominica, a nun in the Convent of the Assumption in London.

Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer disposes of some $75,000 each year on her whims and never asks the price of an article that strikes her fancy, but orders it sent home.

Erie, Kan., has two newspapers edited by women. Mrs. Belle Harbaugh edits The Republican Record and Miss Elizabeth Frazier has charge of the Erie Sentinel.

Helen Gould's income is the largest of any unmarried woman in the country. She does not spend much on herself. On churches and charities she spends $100,000 a year.

Mme. Loubet greatly resembles her friend, Mme. Carnot, in her charitable tendencies. She disposes of large sums among the poor, and is a regular visitor at the hospitals.

Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont, formerly Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, is said to be the most extravagant woman in society. She spends quite $100,000 each year on trifles and knickknacks.

Mrs. S. V. Harkness of New York city, formerly of Cleveland, has offered to build a chapel at the College For Women of the Western Reserve university in Cleveland. She had previously founded a biblical professorship in that college.

The young Duchess of Marlborough and several other ladies of much wealth and rank are going in for falconry. It is an expensive form of sport, an ordinary hawk costing as much as $500 and requiring quite an outlay for maintenance and training.

Mrs. William Rockefeller's hobby is for carnations, one of the greenhouses at her country place at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson being devoted exclusively to their culture. She is said to spend thousands of dollars every year for the plants she imports for her own pleasure.

At a public dress rehearsal of a new play in Paris Mme. Casimir-Perier, wife of the former president of the French republic, was requested to remove her hat, but declined to do so. When she learned that the rule would be enforced in her case as in all others, she left the theater in disgust.

Lady Randolph Churchill is thus described by T. P. O'Connor in his weekly: She is still a very pretty woman. Her raven black hair does not show a single thread of gray; her figure is slight and svelte, and the deep, dark blue eyes have all their vivacity undimmed by their years of tears. She is certainly one of the most widely accomplished women of her time.

The Theater in China.

The dresses are magnificent, as bewilderingly curious as any stage manager at home ever conceived. All the talking is in strained falsetto, and there are yelling and posturing and wailing and confusion. Suddenly the band breaks in with an awful crash—such a marvelous band, five drums and ten pairs of cymbals—such a deafening smashing and banging! With hoarse screams dozens of imps, green faced and yellow eyed and horned, rush on the stage and gyrate and flout banners and draw up in lines and swing partners and set to places. An ochre faced, villainous chief demon, a heap of fantasticalness, twirls like a teetotum, and there is more banging and jumping and swinging and mad pandemonium, and the cymbals and the drums rend the air. It is terrific. At it again, with mighty clatter and heavings, spinning, flag waving, contortioning—it is the accumulated uproars of the world all pressed into one Chinese theater.

You sit tight, with fixed gaze, waiting for the drums of your ears to crack, and when the top of your head is about to fly off there is one awful thunderous bang, and the demon king, chorus, orchestra, the whole crowd, fall, flop, and the act is over.—Travel.

A Curious Old Ad.

A Boston paper has unearthed this curious old advertisement from the Boston Post Boy and Advertiser for March 16, 1767: "The Bell-Cart will go through Boston, before the End of next March, to Collect Rags for the Paper Mills at Milton, when all People that will encourage the Paper Manufactory may dispose of them; the best Price will be given. They are taken in at Mr. Caleb Davis's Shop, at the Fortification; Mr. Andrew Gillespie's, near Dr. Clark's; Mr. Andrew Randale's, near Phillips's Wharf; and Mr. John Boies's in Long Lane; Mr. Frothingham's in Charleston; Mr. Williams's in Marblehead; Mr. Ellson's in Salem; Mr. John Harris's in Newbury; Mr. Daniel Fowle's in Portsmouth; and at the Paper Mill in Milton.

"Rags are as Beauties, which concealed lie;
But when in Paper, how it charms the Eyes!
Pray save your Rags, new Beauties to discover,
For Paper truly, every one's a Lover:
By th' Pen and Press such Knowledge is displayed,
As wouldn't exist if Paper was not made.
Wisdom of Things, mysterious, divine,
Illustriously doth on Paper shine."

But They Weren't Civilized.

Traveling in southern India, one day I was taken into the country to see tapioca roots gathered and ground for use. The adults working in the grove, men and women, had each a rag around the loins, but the boys and girls, with their black, glossy skins, were free of all incumbrance.

Our guide explained to these people that we were from a country so far away and so different from theirs that the waters were sometimes made solid by the extreme cold and we could walk upon them; that sometimes it was so intensely cold that the rain was frozen into particles and lay on the earth so deep that people could not walk through it, and that three and four layers of heavy clothes had to be worn.

This happy people, as our guide told us, wondered why we staid there, why we did not come and enjoy life in their favored clime.—Andrew Carnegie in North American Review.

No Ring in the Dark.

"How can you account for the well known fact that a cigar when smoked in the dark loses much of its flavor?" was asked of an alleged philosopher.

"The reason is," said the philosopher, "that when all the senses are active each sense is more active than it would be if it were doing duty alone. So that when the eye ceases to work the palate and nose become dulled. To express it figuratively, the eye is endowed with a rudimentary power of smell and in the dark loses not only its sight, but its contributing power of smell."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

ARMED FOR THE VOYAGE.

Sardinian to Carry Guns—Transport Expected to Sail on Tuesday Next—Generous Bill of Fare—Militia orders.

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—Officials of the Militia Department are working day and night arranging for the departure of the Canadian troops. It is fully expected that the Sardinian, with the thousand Canadians who are to battle in the Transvaal, will sail from Quebec on the 31st inst. Lt.-Col. Sam. Hughes will be one of the majors of the corps. Captain A. McDonnell, it is understood, will be transferred from the command of the Montrel company to one of the western contingents, his place to be filled by a Montreal militia man, not yet chosen.

Sardinian Protected.

Should the Sardinian be attacked by any of the French privateers, to whom President Kruger is said to have given letters of marque to prey on British ships, she will be ready for the occasion. The troopship will carry two or three rapid fire guns, and the regiment will take with it two Maxim guns, and 100,000 rounds of ammunition. Permission has been received from the British authorities for the Sardinian to re-coal at Cape town for the home voyage. The Sardinian having thus to carry less coal, will probably shorten the voyage three or four days.

Major Drummond, military secretary, to the Governor-General, goes with the contingent as chief staff officer. He has seen service in the Soudan and in India. The food of the Canadians on the voyage to Cape Town will include fresh meats, fish and vegetables, all kinds of fruits, with a liberal supply of tea, coffee, butter, condensed milk, etc. Puddings are to be supplied two or three times a week, and on pudding days the supply of sugar is to be doubled.

No reply has yet been received to Hon. Wm. Mulock's offer to furnish four or five Canadians for the army postal service. Dr. Coulter, Deputy Postmaster-General, has been in receipt of more than a score of applications from post office employees who desire to go.

Daily Militia Orders.

1. District officers commanding companies in the volunteer force for special service in South Africa will retain the attestation papers of the men enrolled in the special service company raised in their district. (a) They will also prepare, in duplicate, at an early date a list, giving name, corps and post-office address of the men enrolled in their district. One of these lists will be kept in the district office as an index to the attestation papers, and the other forwarded to headquarters.

2. Officers travelling on duty connected with the special service force will send in their travelling expense claims, without fail, before embarkation.

3. A grant of $125 to officers towards defraying expenses of their outfit and the advance of pay to the amount of $60 will be paid at Quebec by the officer commanding the force.

4. Non-commissioned officers and men of the permanent force will be allowed to count their service in the special service force as a portion of the period for which they have enlisted in the permanent force.

5. Volunteers from the permanent force accepted for enrolment in the special service force will proceed to Quebec with the company of the special service force enrolled in the district to which they belong.

6. With reference to the militia order of the 23rd instant, the left half of A Company will arrive at Quebec at 7 a.m. on the 27th and the right half at 7 a.m. on the 29th, and not at Levis, as indicated in the order.

ON THE TROLLEY.

The red is melting in the river,
The red is dying in the sky,
The evening star begins to quiver,
Belated birds go darting by—
Come, let us follow, follow, follow,
And find how fine it is to fly.

By pine woods where when noon was sunny,
The air with spicy balsams flowed,
By gardens full of sweets and honey
Where summer long the rose has glowed,
By weary wife and loitering lover,
Come, flash along the river road.

The forest wall across the river
Darkens within the curling tide,
The fragrant winds about us shiver,
We rock, we soar, we rush, we ride,
Thrilled with the sweep of airy motion
And glad because the world is wide!

The night soars up the purple spaces,
The whirling winds divide the deep,
Strange gleams are on familiar places,
Swift lightnings underneath us leap,
As forward flying, flying, flying,
Upon the thunderbolt we sweep!

CAUSE OF THE BOER WAR.

1880, the Boers rose in armed rebellion and killed or wounded 157 British soldiers. This outbreak was brought on by wilful misrepresentation of British policy by the chief agitators, who were aided with money from the Fenians. But the grievance which gave vital force to the revolt was the failure to grant self government to the Transvaal, as promised by Sir Theophilus Shepstone. For this failure both parties in Great Britain were to blame. Following their first victory, the Boers proclaimed the independence of the country. The small force of British troops was defeated in several disastrous engagements, notably that of Majuba Hill. Instead of sending a large force and quelling the uprising, as is the universal custom of the English, the home Government yielded to the armed and victorious rebels. The Transvaal was restored intact to the Boers, who received "complete self-government subject to the suzerainty of Her Majesty."

This convention was signed in Pretoria in August 1881. No appeasement of the animosities between the Dutch and the English inhabitants of the Transvaal followed the conclusion of the convention. The Boers never respected its terms, but continued to importune the British Government for an ampler measure of independence.

CONCESSIONS MADE.

Lord Kimberley, who occupied the Colonial Office when the convention of 1881 was signed, was followed by Lord Derby. The latter listened with favor to the arrogant and overbearing demands of President Kruger, and in 1884 the convention, which forms the present basis of the relations between Great Britain and the Transvaal, was signed. By its terms the latter was permitted to call itself the South African Republic, while the control of its foreign policy was reduced to the provision that the republic would conclude no treaty with any State or nation, other than the Orange Free State, without the consent of the Queen. It is maintained that as Great Britain retains the power of vetoing foreign treaties she still exercises suzerainty over the South African Republic.

These further concessions were granted in the vain hope that amity would be restored thereby between the two white races in South Africa. But this act of abnegation appeared to the English residents to set up a rival ruling power in the British sphere. The Boers had unwillingly agreed to confine the Transvaal within fixed limits, but to hold them to that promise has been no easy matter, and the British Government has been obliged to interfere by force of arms to protect British rights and prevent the Boers from annexing all the neighboring native States.

Ever since 1884 the Transvaal Government has been trying to accomplish two things—first, to shut off the Cape from the north and to acquire a seaport of its own, and, second, to retain all power in the hands of the Boers, and to deny the franchise to all settlers within its borders. By the foresight and sagacity of such men as Cecil Rhodes, Sir Hercules Robinson and others, the Boers have in the main been defeated in the first of these objects, although they have thus far succeeded in the second.

THE CASE OF THE OUTLANDERS.

The chief cause of discord throughout South Africa is the treatment of the Outlanders (non-Boer settlers) in the Transvaal. By the law of 1882 any male could obtain the rights of citizenship after a residence of five years. There was then a fair number of Englishmen resident in the Transvaal, especially in the Lyndenburg mining district. But, with the gold discoveries of 1884 and 1886, came a rush of English immigrants, and by the end of 1886 Johannesburg was a large and flourishing city. By 1894 the Boer population of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State was estimated at 70,861, and the Outlanders at 77,000, including 62,500 British subjects. But the registered voters numbered only 13,126. Many of these Outlanders have been in the country since 1887, and yet in 1894 not one of them had a voice in the Government, although its Treasury, formerly bankrupt, had been replenished as a result of their industry.

This denial of the franchise had been brought about by the act of 1887, by which the Volksraad raised the period of residence necessary to obtain a vote for President and members of the Volksraad to 15 years, and by a subsequent amendment by which no alien could obtain full burgher rights. It is true that in 1890 a second Raad was created, membership in which might be attained after four years' residence, but this has proved a sham, as all acts may be (and are) overruled by the first Volksraad. Other grievances are the dynamite monopoly and various restrictions to trade.

Reforms were agitated by the British subjects, but the petitions of the Transvaal National Union to the Raad were rejected with jeers and insults. The British Colonial Office tried again and again to obtain for the British residents the electoral franchise after five years' residence, but in vain. Jamieson's raid, made in response to an unauthorized and injudicious appeal of a few Outlanders in Johannesburg, was an attempt to bring the Boers to their senses by force of arms. It was a proceeding entirely unauthorized by the British authorities, and the great mass of the Outlanders were entirely innocent of complicity with it. It not only failed of its immediate object, but materially strengthened the Boer Government as an upholder of the law and order, and tied the hands of the British Government, and prevented the application of pressure.

Recently the Volksraad has begun to interfere with the judges in the discharge of their duties, and the Outlanders have lost confidence in the one institution of the country which has hitherto commanded their respect. In four out of the five States which comprise South Africa, the Dutch and English enjoy absolutely the same privileges, while in the fifth a Boer minority has all the power, and the large British element none of it.

The outbreak of the war was preceded by long and tiresome negotiations. They were provoked by the presentation to the British Government of a petition signed by 21,684 Outlanders, praying for redress of grievances and a restoration of the political rights guaranteed to them under the conventions of 1881 and 1884. This was presented on March 28, and was shortly afterwards endorsed by Sir Alfred Milner, British Governor of Cape Colony. On May 31, a conference was held at Bloemfontein between Sir Alfred Milner and Mr. Kruger. The British representative proposed a five years' (retrospective) franchise, a naturalization oath similar to that of the Orange Free State, full rights to vote upon naturalization and a fair representation of the new voters in the Volksraad. In declining this proposal, President Kruger offered a seven years' franchise, not fully retrospective, under which every man would have to abandon his old citizenship and not gain a new one for several years. Even at the end of that period his Transvaal citizenship would be only partial, and would be granted not as a matter of right, but on suffrance, at the will of Boer officials. The conference ended in failure.

FRUITLESS NEGOTIATIONS.

President Kruger returned to Pretoria and secured the enactment of a law on the basis of his proposals. The British Government pronounced it unsatisfactory, and on July 12 the Transvaal adopted another law, granting the seven years' (retrospective) franchise, but again made its application depend upon the pleasure of Boer officials, and not upon right. Obscure and unsatisfactory as this proposal was, the British Government was inclined to accept it, and on July 31 proposed another conference to examine it. Not until August 19 did the Transvaal Government reply, meanwhile collecting ammunition and making military preparations. It then practically declined the British offer, and substituted therefor a five years' retrospective franchise and increased representation, provided Great Britain would pledge itself never again to intervene in Transvaal affairs, no longer to insist upon the assertion of suzerainty, and to concede arbitration, from which governments other than that of the Orange Free State should be excluded. On August 28, the British Government replied that, while it hoped no further intervention would be necessary, yet it could not pledge itself not to protect its subjects in the Transvaal; that it still retained suzerainty, and that it would consider the scheme of arbitration proposed, but that some matters fell outside the domain of arbitration, and required prompt settlement. It renewed its proposal for a conference. In replying, on September 2, the Transvaal offered conditionally to enter a conference, but withdrew the whole franchise offer, and insisted upon absolute abrogation of British suzerainty and the erection of the Transvaal into a "sovereign international State."

To these demands Great Britain replied, on September 12, practically renewing the Transvaal's own proposal of August 19 of a five years' franchise and increased representation, with non-foreign arbitration, but leaving the sovereignty question as before, and suggesting that the Outlanders in the Transvaal Legislature should be permitted to speak English. To this the Transvaal replied on September 19, accusing the British Government of bad faith, withdrawing all former offers and guardingly agreeing to a conference or joint commission of enquiry. Since that time the British Government has denounced as false the charges of bad faith, has withdrawn its former offers and announced its intention of submitting a new plan of settling the controversy.

Before this plan was announced the Transvaal Republic sent to the British Government a peremptory ultimatum calling on the latter to acknowledge its sovereignty as an international power and to withdraw its troops from the Transvaal border within 48 hours. When the British troops were not withdrawn the Boers began the war.

HIS HAIR TURNED WHITE.

Peculiar Experience of the Man Who Dealt in High Explosives.

"Nitroglycerin, sir; high explosives accomplished it," said a well dressed man with a youthful face and snow white hair to a chance acquaintance at the Great Northern.

"But your face is not scarred? It would seem that an explosion"—

"An impending explosion it was. Two years ago I was the most successful well shooter in America. I could make the oil gusher up where others had failed. The secret lay in the explosives I employed. I made them myself and had the business down fine. At that time I went to New York to figure on a big blasting contract that would have made me a pile. I failed to make the arrangement, and the very day the negotiations fell through I started suddenly for England on a similar mission.

"'Is there such a thing as high explosives ripening?' asked the Englishman I was accompanying on the second day of our voyage.

"The question brought me to my feet and caused an exclamation of horror to escape from my lips. Many explosives undergo a ripening process, which adds greatly to their destructive power, at the same time decidedly increasing the danger of handling them. That made by me was this character. Indeed 25 days after it compounded it was almost certain to [illegible]ode of its own volition, so to speak. [illegible] on the upper shelf of the checkroom [illegible]y New York hotel I had left a large grip containing a 20 pound can of this compound, the ripening of which meant destruction and death.

"For an hour I was almost in a state of frenzy, freely denouncing myself as a multimurderer. In vain I drew an awful picture of the devastation that would overwhelm a certain New York hotel in exactly 17 days and called upon the captain to put his ship about. He promised to transfer me to a west bound steamer if an opportunity presented itself, but fortune failed me, and I was obliged to cross the ocean. On the morning of the twenty-fifth day of the life of my ripening high explosive I sprang from a carriage and rushed into the hotel.

"No reprieved murderer ever experienced greater joy than I did as I saw the last of the terrible fluid disappear in a catch basin. Ten minutes later I started back from the mirror of the hotel bar, where I had gone for a 'bracer,' in absolute dismay. My jet black hair had turned white as snow."

VETERANS UNDER FIRE.

The Reason They Don't Stoop When the Bullets Are Flying.

"The temptation to stoop when under fire is almost irresistible," said a veteran, "and that accounts for so many of the wounds received by raw troops. You see, when a man happens to be hit in a stooping posture the chances are that the bullet plows right through his body from end to end. On the other hand, if he is standing erect, the probabilities are in favor of the wound being slight, anyhow not mortal. Old soldiers are well aware of this, and while they will drop flat and hunt cover every chance they get they never stoop.

"After a soldier has been in a few engagements he learns such tricks, and, as far as the rest of it is concerned, he becomes simply a fatalist. There is nothing strange about it, for almost all his experiences appear to lend color to that doctrine. For instance, he never dodges, because he has seen men dodge and get killed when it really seemed as if they had reached for the bullet. In fact, the strangest things are continually happening, all apparently the pure whim of chance.

"I remember near Petersburg a comrade of mine, as brave a fellow as ever lived, took refuge behind a little hut. He was wornout under fire and wanted to get a moment's breathing space. Twenty feet in the rear and a little to one side was a pile of crossties full of wrought iron nails. A bullet came along, splintered a tie and drove out one of the nails at right angles. The jagged iron struck my chum in the side, penetrated his kidneys and killed him.

"That's the blind chance of war, and after getting a few such object lessons a fellow is apt to acquire a sort of sang froid that is immensely impressive to a recruit. It isn't because he has a contempt for danger; he has merely learned the folly of trying to evade it."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Proud of Him.

When he was 50, he returned to his native town "just to see how the old place looked." He found it unchanged. The old store, where as a lad he had clerked it and sold calico and groceries to the old farmers, was just the same. He contrasted the sleepy old place with himself and felt a glow of satisfaction when he thought how much those 30 years had done for him. "They ought to be proud of me," he said to himself.

Presently he met one of the old inhabitants.

"Waal, I declare, is it really you, Hank?" said the old man incredulously. "We've heard you've been prospering fust rate sence you went west. They've made you a railroad president or suthin of the sort, ain't they? I heard so, but I couldn't believe it. It's really true, is it? Waal, all I've got to say is they must be pretty hard up for railroad presidents out there."

He took the next train for the west.

You need a doctor many times when you don't call one. You say to yourself, "Oh, I'm not sick. I'll feel all right after a while—and doctors' visits are expensive." And so you work along enduring your pain till the pain puts you in bed and then the doctor comes. Maybe he helps you—maybe not. But his bill follows just the same.

Why not avoid both severe sickness and bills by writing to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Write fully stating all your symptoms and Dr. Pierce will prescribe for you free of charge. He is chief consulting physician to the great and world famed Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute and when you write to him you are consulting one of the most experienced and successful specialists in the world.

In his thirty years' constant practice Dr. Pierce has tried and proven the marvelous efficacy of certain prescriptions of his and these are on sale by all dealers in medicines.

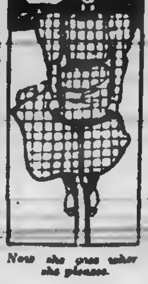
Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a cure for diseases of the throat, lungs, blood and nerves. It works on the stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys. It is a tonic, alterative and blood-maker.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a specific for all diseases of women.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure biliousness and constipation and so help to cure nearly every disease of mankind.

Miss Emma Lee, of Williford, Sharp Co., Ark., writes "I was suffering severely and tried several doctors but received only very little relief. Your medicines have done wonders for me. I had bronchitis, catarrh, and also female complaint. As soon as I had taken the first bottle I could see the medicine was helping me.

"My sister has also taken 'Favorite Prescription.' She was down in bed and could not walk and now she goes where she pleases."



Now she goes where she pleases.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

TURNED IN A BLANKET.

Pain Too Severe From Rheumatism to Have Even the Nurse's Trained Hand Touch Him—South American Rheumatic Cure Got Him Out of Bed in 24 Hours.

"Some time ago I was attacked with very severe rheumatic pains. My joints swelled and stiffened. I had to be turned in bed on a blanket. I had best doctors and best nurses, but could not get relief. Death would have been welcome. A friend called and recommended South American Rheumatic Cure. I procured it and in twenty-four hours after taking it there was a wonderful change. I was able to get out of my bed into a chair without assistance. I have continued using it, and although 60 years of age I do not feel within 20 years of it. I am my natural self again, free from pain. I trust you will use the testimony as you think best for suffering humanity's sake." Samuel Haight, Sparta, Ont. Sold by Ormond & Walsh and H. S. THE PAVING CONTRACTS.

heard of anything being wrong was when Mr. Ranney's letter was received. He had previously to that heard little rumors about Mr. Sheehy's men.

Mr. Dennistoun—I object. There may be all kinds of nasty rumors.

Mayor Davis—I heard rumors but paid no attention to them as I had every confidence in Mr. Sheehy. The first evidence I had of wrongdoing was the letter of Inspector Ranney, dated September 18th. Previous to that I did not believe anything was wrong. I do not remember of the matter being discussed in the Council or committee before that. I cannot remember the exact course the Council took after receiving the report of Mr. Ranney but it was largely on the strength of this report that the investigation was asked for. This report and statements made by Ald. McWilliams in the Council, had led up to the investigation. Ald. McWilliams had stated that certain men had been approached with offers of consideration for their influence. Mr. Sheehy had put a letter in the papers stating that he was doing right and accusing Ald. McWilliams of stirring up a mare's nest. Mr. McWilliams had charged that some alderman had been at the root of this, and in a speech at the Council had charged that "there were some aldermen that were worse than Mr. Sheehy". Now, as Mr. Ranney's report had refered to a "steal," I consider his statement of Ald. McWilliam's as a very serious one. Mr. McWilliams also went on to show that the contractor had an advantage over the town of $1,400, and had stated that someone had betrayed this trust as the Board of Works had endorsed no changes in the specifications. And I understand it Mr. McWilliams was alluding that someone had changed the specifications without the authority of the Board of Works. Mr. McWilliams also repeated the words of Mr. Ranney that Mr. Sheehy was one of the most dishonest contractors he had ever dealt with. From these statements I at once favored a thorough investigation. I, personally, did not do any wrong knowingly.

Mr. Edwards—Was any alterations made in the specifications by the Council or the Board of Works? Ans.—No.

Did you in any way interfere with the carrying out of the contract? Ans.—I did not.

Did anyone approach you in the way referred to? Ans.—No.

R. F. McWilliams asked the Mayor regarding the specification in the first contract of Mr. Sheehy. The Mayor replied that it was two of granite to one of cement.

Mr. McWilliams—Did you examine the way in which the work was carried out?

Mayor Davis—I saw it at various places and, as far as I know, the work was going on all right, being under the charge of the engineer and inspectors.

Mr. McWilliams asked if the Mayor knew that a number of the tests were made on starting the work. The Mayor replied that he did not.

Mr. McWilliams—When Mr. Ranay got about half way through his contract he found out that it took seven bags instead of five and a half bags to make a yard of cement. Are you aware of that?

Mayor Davis—That was when Mr. Ranney had found out.

Mr. Dennistoun objected.

Mr. McWilliams—Had you any knowledge of the re-measurement?

Mayor Davis—There was one circumstance that was laughed over in court, viz., that Mr. Ranney had stated that the measure he applied to the sidewalk to measure the surface thickness had been reduced by someone for the purpose of lessening the amount of material used. This was when the work was about at St. Paul's church.

Mr. McWilliams—So that you knew from that that one of the contractors or some of his men had tried to defraud the town?

Mayor Davis—It might easily have been somebody else than those mentioned.

Mr. Dennistoun—This is something I must object to.

Mr. McWilliams—Do you know that Mr Bartlett had trouble with Messrs. Evans and Langford in the starting of their contract?

Mayor Davis—I did not know of any trouble until Ald. McWilliams made a remark in the Council about Evans and Langford threatened exposure. I suppose that they were using the same proportions as Mr. Sheehy and did not know that his were questioned until Mr. Ranney's report was received.

Mr. McWilliams—When Mr. Rose was laying the pavement west of St. Peter's cathedral did Mr. Rose tell you of any change that had been made in the works?

Mayor Davis—Mr. Rose was supposed to go on with the work according to the specifications. Mr. Rose must have got as far down as Charlotte street, some member of the Council learned that Mr. Rose had heard of Mr. Ranney's mixture and instead of 5 1-2 bags of cement 2 1-2 or 3 were being used.

Mr. McWilliams—Were you aware at any time that Mr. Rose was carrying out the contract according to specifications? Mayor Davis—No.

Mr. McWilliams—Did the engineer at any time prior to Mr. Ranney's letter make you aware that the contracts were not being carried out according to specifications? Ans.—No.

Mr. McWilliams—At the meeting of Aug. 7th you were aware that it was alleged that Ensign cement was being used instead of Star cement.

Mayor Davis—That was a matter that was in the engineer's hands. He has the power to say what quality shall be used and, if cheaper, the town gets the benefit of the reduction in price.

Mr. McWilliams—Then you consented to the use of Ensign cement?

Mayor Davis—There was no action by myself or the council. The question was not raised. I had no objection to it nor did I approve it.

Mr. McWilliams—Then the use of Ensign cement was authorized Mr. Hay on his own responsibility.

Mayor Davis—He was solely responsible.

Mr. McWilliams—Did you take any steps to protect the town in this matter? Did you take any steps to see that the town got the benefit of the reduction?

Mayor Davis—As the council did not I did not. The responsibility was left with Mr. Hay.

Mr. McWilliams—Did you know anything of the quality of the work done according to the specifications and the work actually done

Mayor Davis—I telegraphed to the engineer of Toronto asking him the makeup of their cement. He answered that they had two grades, the first grade being composed of two parts of cement and one of granite and the second grade of less cement.

Mr. McWilliams—Mr. Sheehy's first pavements are guaranteed for five years. His second contract and that of Messrs. Evans & Langford are guaranteed for only two years. Why this reduction?

Mayor Davis—It was done at a meeting.

Mr. McWilliams—At whose suggestion?

Mayor Davis—I do not recollect whether it was Langford or not. It was thought to be a safe arrangement for the town. It was looked at in the light that the change would enable men without much money or long credit to take contracts.

Mr. McWilliams—Can you say who suggested the reduction in time

Mayor Davis—I cannot. I may have done it myself

WEDDING BELLS.

A Very Pretty Wedding Celebrated Yesterday Evening.

A very pretty wedding was celebrated last evening at the residence of Mrs. Neil MacDonald, 468 Reid street, when her youngest daughter, Miss Ada MacDonald was united in marriage to Mr. Wm. A. Lewis, of Peterborough. The nuptial knot was tied by the Rev. Mr. Gunton, of the Gilmour Memorial Church, in the presence of the near relatives of the contracting parties. The bride was assisted by Miss Elva Best, while Mr. Lionel Yorke, of Toronto, acted as groomsman.

The bride was becomingly attired in castor brown, trimmed with cream satin, while the bridesmaid wore an elegant gown of fawn, with cream brown trimmings.

After the ceremony a very luxurious dejeuner was partaken of.

Conductor Morris Dead.

Mr. Wm. Morris, the well-known conductor, who for years past was in charge of the train between Belleville and Peterborough, died at his home in Lindsay, where he had been residing since he left Peterborough some time ago. Deceased had not been in good health for some time, having suffered from rheumatism, which was followed by dropsy, which proved fatal. He had, however, been on active duty up to a very short time ago, and his death will come as a shock to many friends in Peterborough. Deceased was widely known and was universally popular, being of a genial, courteous disposition that made him a favorite with all who knew him. He leaves a wife and family to mourne his loss. He was a member of Peterborough Lodge, I.O.O.F., and of Mt. Hebron Encampment, and will be buried under Oddfellows' auspices. The funeral takes place to-day, the body being taken to Port Hope for interment. It will pass through here on the 11.58 train, and Peterborough brethern will join the Lindsay brethern and proceed to Port Hope where burial will take place.

Given Pointers.

The Ontario License Department has received a number of complaints from License Inspectors throughout the province, that it is almost impossible to secure witnesses on account of a decision made by Justice Falconbridge, under which a witness who purchased liquor after hours, may refuse to give evidence on the ground that he would be incriminating himself and a charge might be laid against him for buying liquor after hours. The Department has sent out instructions advising inspectors to prosecute such witnesses for infraction of the law, and their case being over, they can give evidence against the hotel keeper.

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surrounding villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

GALLANT BRITISH CHARGE!

A BRILLIANT ENGAGEMENT AT REIFONTEIN.

Boers Driven Over Ridge After Ridge and Forced Back Upon Matawanaskop, From Which They Were Dislodged by Splendid Artillery Fire.

London, Oct. 26.—Details of the battle of Tuesday at Reitafontein, near the Newcastle road, Natal, which General White attacked in order to draw attention from the retreat of General Yule, [illegible] to hand. The despatch says...

"On the discovery that the Boers were massed to the westward of the main road to Dundee, an attempt was made by a train to discover the body of Colonel Scott-Chisholme, killed at Elandsgate. The train was fired upon and obliged to retire and General White moved out to attack the Boers, believed to be Free Staters, who should have joined the Transvaalers at Elandsgate. General White commanded personally. The Fifth Lancers were placed on either flank. They came in touch with the Boers below Modderspruit, to the east of the road seven miles from Ladysmith, where 1,500 burghers occupied a strong ridge, whence they opened fire at 1,500 yards, hitting several of the British. In the meanwhile the Hussars and the Natal carbiniers advanced unscathed through an opening in the ridge, under the fire of a Boer gun, while the Imperial Light Horse took part of the crest of the ridge, the Boers retiring. At about nine, however, a Boer gun stationed on the crest on Matawanaskop, a hill five miles to the northwest of the road, opened fire with great accuracy, on the main force, which in the meantime had come up, but the shells failed to explode and the British artillery silenced the opposition. The whole British force then advanced and the action then became general. A large body of Boers occupied strong positions at Matawanaskop and the precipitous ridges surrounding it.

A Fearful Fire Zone.

"The British guns shelled the positions and the infantry advanced under cover of the fire. The Gloucesters and Devons crossed a fearful fire-zone beneath Tuitanyoni Hill, whence the Boers poured a withering fire with such effect that thirty of the attackers dropped within a distance of two hundred yards. Seeing the peril of the Devons and Gloucesters, General White despatched the carbineers and Liverpools to take the enemy in the rear. A fierce rifle and artillery duel was maintained for some time. The British Maxim rattled, but the Boers under cover of the rocks remained cool and replied with an incessant rifle fire. The British artillery swept the face of the hill, and at length the shells became so destructive that the Boers retreated to another ridge, whence they were dislodged by the volunteers in the face of a galling fire. The Boers soon re-formed and took up a position on another ridge, but the volunteers dashed across the intervening plateau again, rushed the Boer position and drove them back to the main force, occupying Matawanaskop. The British then shelled the latter until clusters of Boers were seen leaving and retreating westward, when the engagement closed.

The Official Account.

An official British account of the fighting at Rietfontein, given out at Cape Town, says...

"The enemy posted a battery two miles south of Modderspruit and opened with infantry fire at long range on the British advance guard, consisting of the 19th Hussars. This was followed by artillery fire directed with considerable accuracy against the British guns. An action lasting six hours ensued at Ristfontein farm. The enemy were driven from the hills commanding the roads. Sir George White's object being accomplished, the column returned to Ladysmith. The enemy is believed to have suffered. Several Boers own officially that they lost over 100 killed at Elandsgaate. Three hundred prisoners, wounded and unwounded, are in the hands of the British, including several of high position. The Transvaal force defeated at Elandsgaate was the Johannesburg corps."

Severe Rifle Fire.

Other accounts dwell on the severity of the rifle fire at Rietfontein. They say that when the Boers finally retreated the Lancers cut them off from their horses and inflicted severe loss on them. The retreat, it is added, ended in a general rout. It is announced to-day in a despatch from Ladysmith, dated October 23, that strong reinforcements of infantry and artillery have arrived there from Pietermaritzburg.

WHY YULE FELL BACK.

London, Oct. 26.—A special despatch from Glencoe Camp, dated Oct. 23, says... After the victory on Friday the British imagined they were free from further molestation for some days, but they soon found that the earlier reports of a sweeping success were exaggerated. The reported capture of all the Boer guns was incorrect, the burghers succeeding in removing some of them before the British carried the hill, leaving only the riflemen behind to cover their retreat.

On Saturday news was received of the approach of General Joubert's main column, threatening Dundee. General Yule quickly recognized the impossibility of defending both Dundee and Glencoe against such superiority of numbers, sent word to Ladysmith of his dangerous situation, and ordered the evacuation of Dundee. Most of the inhabitants went southward on Saturday. The British camp was also removed in anticipation of an attack on Dundee, which commenced with long range firing by the big guns at daybreak on Sunday. The Boers made excellent practice and the shells from a forty-pounder occupying the Impati Mountains dropped in and around the town. In the meanwhile the British had reached Glencoe in safety. The orders reached General Yule on Monday to fall back on Ladysmith. At the same time he was informed that a large force was awaiting at Elandsgaate to assist his retirement.

Glencoe camp accordingly was quietly evacuated. The precarious position of the British was not known to the Boers.

London, Oct. 26.—Orders were issued to-day for an additional five thousand troops to sail for South Africa between November 4 and November 18.

YULE'S COLUMN SAFE.

London, Oct. 26.—The War Office has received the following despatch from General White...

Ladysmith, Oct. 25.—12.40 p. m.—General Yule's column has just marched in here after a very hard march during a night of exceptionally heavy rain. The men, though done up, are in good spirits and only want a rest. The enemy did not molest them.

Armstrong vs. James.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir—In Wednesday evening's papers I notice that the report of the termination of this suit, at any rate, did not convey the true terms of the settlement. The facts are these:—

The defendants actually refused to apologize or to pay the plaintiff any costs whatever, stating they had nothing for which to apologize; but did consent, at his Lordship's suggestion, to withdraw the letter which was the basis of the action and the particulars served, and to allow the plaintiffs credit for their costs in this suit upon the judgment now held by Charles James, as next friends to Florence James, against the present plaintiff and his wife.

The reason for this as stated in open court, was that the defendants considered the judgment held against the plaintiff and his wife utterly worthless, and did not therefore think they were paying anything in allowing the costs in this action to be credited against their judgment; and further, it relieved them from being forced to put in evidence which they disliked very much to call.

The defendants never had the slightest doubt as to being able to succeed if the trial had proceeded, and so expressed themselves in court, and consented to this settlement solely for above reasons given.

E. B. STONE.

WAR WAS INEVITABLE

Some Stirring Scenes in the Imperial Commons.

HOT WORDS WERE SPOKEN.

Mr. Chamberlain Defends His Actions in Regard to the Transvaal.

Whatever May be the Result of the War, Equal Rights Will be Given the Dutch.

London, Oct. 26.—The exit of Mr. Davitt from the House of Commons yesterday was not the only exciting event there. Mr. Dalziel, Liberal, charged that Mr. Chamberlain was responsible for the belief of President Kruger that he, Chamberlain, was in league with Cecil Rhodes.

The Speaker ruled such references out of order.

Then there was a tilt between Mr. G. B. Clark, Radical, ex-agent of the Transvaal, and Major Rasch, Conservative. Mr. Clark denied Major Rasch's statement that he was in the Boer camp at the time of the fight at Majuba Hill, and characterized the assertion as "a sample of the misrepresentation now prevailing."

Rasch replied that Clark himself told him so, and that if he again denied the statement, he, the major, would take the first opportunity of repeating the statement to him outside of Parliament, when he could take what steps he liked.

Alleged Provocation.

Excitement No. 4 was caused when Sir William Harcourt alluded to Mr. Chamberlain's "provocation" during the Transvaal negotiations. This was repudiated by the Secretary, who remarked:—"It was necessary to impress upon President Kruger the seriousness of the step he was called upon to take and the consequences which would follow any mistake on his part. It was not desirable to include in an official despatch collateral suggestions and indications of opinion; but semi-official warning was frequently conveyed in a speech. I am still absolutely unrepentant. Respecting to-day's speeches, they are simply a rechauffee of old arguments from Irish members, whose boast is that they are England's enemies, and from the Radicals who in principle oppose the war. What would have been the Irish argument in the Spanish-American war, in which Spain showed herself infinitely less capable of defending herself than the Transvaal—"

Here Mr. William Redmond shouted: "The Transvaal did not blow up your warships!"

Why the Interference.

Continued Mr. Chamberlain, "We have never denied that the Transvaal was a foeman worthy of our steele. Not only was the disparity between the forces in the Spanish-American war as great as those now engaged, but the contention of the United States and their right of interference arose from the fact that at some distance from their territories there was oppression not of American citizens, but of another race and people, and that justified the intervention of the United States in the mind of the civilized world, or, at any rate, in the eyes of Englishmen and Irishmen. But we are interfering in behalf of our own people. It is perfectly certain that Mr. Davitt, but for his hatred of England, would sympathize with us, as he did with America."

After the Speaker replied to criticisms that he would not accept the mediation of Mr. Hofmeyer, the Afrikander leader, he concluded thus:—

War Was Inevitable.

"I believed that, from first to last, President Kruger never intended to give anything approaching equal rights to the white race, or any acknowledgment of British supremacy. War, therefore, was inevitable. We are told we shall lose South Africa. Our foreign friends are convinced of it, yet they are not happy. Such predictions were made before, and were even current in the days of Elizabeth. But I am not alarmed. One great Teutonic people want to hold in subjection another great Teutonic people, but this has never been our course. It is impossible to pretend that the Dutch at the Cape are crushed by our rule, when they have all the rights Englishmen possess, and even, in individual cases, are permitted to talk and write treason. Whatever may be the result of the war, and the premature talk of the result of the present war does anyone imagine that we shall fail to do for others what we claimed for ourselves, or refuse equal rights to the Dutch in the Transvaal, which they refused us?"

The second reading of the appropriation bill passed by a vote of 224 to 28.

Premier at Guelph.

Guelph, Oct. 26.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier arrived here yesterday. A stop-over was made at London and the Ministerial party took luncheon with Col. Leys, after which he held an informal reception at the Tecumseh House. To-day the Premier will visit the factories here and at 1 o'clock will leave by special train for Fergus, where he is to address the electors of Centre Wellington.

Deer Hunting.

The game warden's department is preparing for the approaching deer season, which commences on November 1st. Licenses have been sent out to the various deputy wardens with the usual instructions. Every effort will be made to put a stop to illegal shooting this fall and extra wardens will be appointed to patrol the northern country in conjunction with the regular wardens. Parties shooting deer without a license are liable to a fine of $25.

THE PAVING CONTRACTS

Investigation Before Judge Weller Proceeding.

MAYOR DAVIS EXAMINED.

And is Followed by Ald. McWilliams and Several Others.

Very Interesting Reading for the Ratepayers Who Have to Pay the Piper.

Mr. Dennistoun, counsel for Mr. Sheehy, examined Mayor Davis, when Mr. McWilliams concluded.

Mr. Dennistoun—You referred to the fact that Mr. Ranney claimed that someone had tampered with his straightedge. Are you aware that Mr. Ranney afterwards had all his straightedges changed to correspondend with this one?? Ans.—No.

Q.—You are not aware now that the specifications have been changed?

A.—That depends on the way the contract is interpreted.

Q.—You are aware that large powers are given to the engineer. He can authorize the use of sand or dust. Can you say that the specifications or the contract have ever been broken? Ans.—I cannot.

Q.—Do you remember a Council meeting at which Ald. McWilliams asked Mr. Hay whether he had authorized any change in the specifications. Mr. Hay replied that he had not "till the work was half done." Is that a correct report of Mr. Hay's words?—Ans.—It is.

Q.—Then you knew and the Council knew that the work just finished was carried out to the end as it had been all the way through. You allowed the work to go on? Ans.—Yes.

Q.—Then there was no question of fraud? A—No.

Mr. Dennistoun—If it had been a matter of fraud you would have stopped the work.

Q—You have every confidence in Mr. Hay as an engineer? A—I knew nothing of Mr. Hay as an engineer till this year. I am not a judge of engineering.

Q—You do not think he would do any crooked work?? A—o.

Mr. W. A. Stratton, Q. C., questinoed the witness.

Q—Has the engineer been accused of fraud? A—No.

Q—Has there been any specific charge of fraud against any town official? A—No.

Q—If the engineer has in good faith made any changes and the town has lost has the town any remedy? A—The contract gives the engineer power to fix the price to be paid by the town in accordance with any changes made. The town has sufficient protection in this way. The engineer fixes the price as he has power to fix the formula. The town might not be protected in case an utterly bad sidewalk were built.

Ald. McWilliams' Evidence.

Q—State what led to the investigation? A—Last year we decided to have the best walks and this year also, that is for top dressing two parts of granite to one of cement. We also decided that only Star cement was to be used.

Q—How was this expressed? A—It was decided and discussed in Council and in committee.

Q—Where did you first learn of any difference in the contract? A—I first learned in the beginning of August of the using if Ensign cement. The other, the top finish, I did not know till September 16th or 18th. I returned to town on the night of the 15th and brought it up in Council on the 18th.

Q—From whom did you learn this? A—I firrst heard it in rumors, I think from Mr. Quinn or Mr. Clegg, who had heard that some of Sheehy's men were boasting that they could steal from under Mr. Ranney's nose. I then saw Mr. Ranney between the 16th and 18th and he told me that when he first measured 5 1-2 bags had been found to fill the box. He claimed that some of Mr. Sheehy's men had purloined some of the bags. Mr. Ranney said that Mr. Sheehy was the most dishonest contractor he had ever met and that some of Mr. Sheehy's men had apparently been trained to steal. Mr Ranney told me that he first became aware that something was wrong by hearing Mr. Bartlett say that the box would hold more than the 5 1-2 bags of cement. I believe that Mr. Ranney first discovered it on his own account about the 7th of August. He did not make me aware of it at the time.

Q—What else did you learn? A—When the driveways were being changed I saw that the foundation was composed of only loose sand and gravel and could be moved easily with the hand or a stick. It was work that should be taken off nobody's hands.

Q—Who was in charge of the work? A— Mr. Ranney was inspector. The engineer had control, but he would be too busy to personally supervise all work.

Q—Did Mr. Ranney ever report to you that the thickness on these crossings was not all that was called for? A—No.

Q—Has there anything else come to your knowledge that should be investigated here?? A—Nothing that I know of. I moved in Council that the inspectors should report to the Council as well as to the engineer, but this was voted down. The matter narrows itself down to the contractors, the engineer and Mr. Davis or Mr. Langford, both of whom acted as chairman of the Board of Works.

Q—Reference was made to improper influence. A—That is a matter on which Mr. Sheehy can answer better than I.

Q—Have you definite information on that point? A—I have what I consider to be definite information regarding Mr. Sheehy approaching a person, not a member of the Council, regarding the influence of a particular member of the Council.

Ald. McWilliams—I believe there has been fraud against the town. I do not blame Mr. Sheehy as much as I do the engineer and the chairman of the Board of Works, whether Mayor Davis or Ald.

BOER ARTILLERY SPEAKS!

Colonel Powell's Position is Being Heavily Bombarded by the Boer Gunners.

GEN. SIR WM. SYMONDS DIES OF HIS WOUNDS.

Decease of the Gallant Soldier Announced Yesterday. Official Announcement That White and Yule are Together.

A Summary of the Situation.

London, Oct. 26.—The floodgates of news which have been practically closed for more than a day are at last open. The curtain of cannon-smoke which hung over Northern Natal and British Bechuanaland has been lifted.

Reports from these quarters show that the balance is telling slightly on the side of the burghers, who are in possession of a stretch of territory in Natal sixty miles square, including the valuable Dundee coal fields, with several important towns, and are in addition beleaguering Mafeking on their western border, held by the brave Powell. Paradoxical as it may seem the Boers, though defeated, have become victors so far as Natal is concerned. Despite the winning of three battles the British have been compelled to fall back.

The only wonder is that the Boers have been so slow in comprehension as to miss a splendid opportunity of cutting off and annihilating the British advance guard, for it is now known that had they made a massed attack upon Glencoe that town would have fallen. But their warlike instincts are not sufficiently developed and they allowed a small force which might have been crushed to steal away and strengthen the main body for the real conflict of the campaign at Ladysmith.

Happily for the honor of British arms General Yule shortly after midnight arrived at Ladysmith after his long detour around the Boer forces and his men fatigued with a two day's forced march during which attack was hourly expected, are now numbered in the force with which White hopes to meet Joubert at no distant date.

The battle waged by General White and the Boers just outside of Ladysmith in order to cover the retreat turns out to have been one of the most daring affirs in the annals of British colonial wars. The British infantry at Reitfontein advanced through a zone of fire which almost paralleled Ciudad, Rodengo, and Badajoz. From hill after hill were the Boer's advance posts dislodged by brilliant charges of infantry, the way for which was paved by splendid artillery practice. Finally the burghers were driven back upon their main body occupying Matawanaskop, a rocky and almost inaccessible eminence, whence they were dislodged and put to flight by a shower of shells aimed by the best artillerymen in the world.

But English enthusiasm over the victory is dampened by the death of that gallant soldier General Symons, who died as every good soldier wishes to die—on the field—and by the report that the bombardment of Mafeking is progressing satisfactorily, from the Boer point of view, and that portion of the town are in flames. As this information comes from Pretoria there is hope that the wish of the burghers has proved father to the thought.

BOMBARDMENT OF MAFEKING.

Pretoria, Oct. 24.—Via Lourenzo Marquez.—The bombardment of Mafeking by General Cronje's commando began this morning. The women and children were given ample time to leave the town.

HOUSES IN FLAMES.

Pretoria, Oct. 25.—Via Lourenzo Marquez.—The shelling of Mafeking was resumed at daybreak this morning. Several houses are in flames.

COLUMNS ARE IN TOUCH.

Cape Town, Oct. 25.—Evening.—It is officially announced that General Yule is in touch with General Sir George Stewart White at Ladysmith.

GENERAL SYMONS DEAD.

London, Oct. 26.—The death of Gen. Sir William Penn Symons, the British commander at Glencoe, who was shot in the stomach in the battle with the Boers there, October 20, was officially announced in the House of Commons to-day.

DEARLY WON SUCCESSES.

London, Oct. 26.—The despatches from the front are so diversified and contradictory that it is difficult to outline the situation with any degree of exactitude. Three or four main facts, however, stand out prominently. Gen. Symon's fight at Glencoe was not anything like the decisive victory at first alleged, and General Yule would in all probability have been annihilated or have met with the same fate as the captured Hussars if he had not retreated.

Distressing Cost.

General White's artillery duel at Rietfontein was a very severe engagement in which the rifles did great execution and which success was only achieved at a distressing cost. The bombardment of Mafeking has commenced, with unknown results, and the Boers have got their Hussar prisoners safely in Pretoria. Altogher the campaign is being rushed by the Boers so strenuously and on such sound strategical lines that the situation of the British must in all probability give them cause for deep anxiety for some time to come.

Prospects at Ladysmith.

It is difficult to see how the concentrated force at Ladysmith will be able to take the aggressive immediately. Apart from the fatigue regiments like the Gordon Highlanders and Royal Rifles have been practically without officers since the fight and one hundred and thirty-five officers have been ordered to leave England as speedily as possible.

NEWS CAME FROM JOUBERT.

London, Oct. 26.—The Parliamentary Secretary of the War Office, Mr. Geo. Wyndham, in announcing the death of General Symons in the House of Commons, said: "The news was considerately sent to General White by General Joubert, which confirms the impression that General Yule had to leave his wounded at Dundee. We hope to have shortly full information on the dispositions made by General Yule for his wounded before leaving.

"As the establishment of the Eighteenth Hussars was complete, there is no explanation why infantry officers fell into the enemy's hands at the same time and it is assumed that they were mounted infantry."

Replying to Mr John Dillon, Irish Nationalist, member for East Mayo, Mr. Wyndham declared that the British troops were not using expanding bullets and had no such bullets.

BOERS OCCUPY WINDSORTON.

London, Oct. 26.—There is little news from the western border. The cordon around Kimberley is drawing closer, but hopes are expressed that a flying column will shortly be sent to its relief.

The Boers have occupied Windsorton, an unprotected town. The magistrate with the consent of the inhabitants surrendered on demand, conditional upon the lives and properties of the people being respected. It is alleged, however, that the Boers refused to respect the property of absentees.

There is intense anxiety for further news from Mafeking, where it is believed a number of officers who were supposed to be on furlough joined Col. Baden-Powell.

The Portuguese have sent over the Transvaal border five hundred white and black prisoners whom the Boers released from their jails and turned loose in Portuguese territory.

A BAD ACCIDENT.

Two Freight Trains Collided on the G. T. R. at Brand.

A report reached Times office early this morning before going to press, to the effect that a bad accident had occurred on the Grand Trunk Railway at Brand. It appears that two freights collided with the result of a very bad smash-up and two firemen were badly scalded, one probably fatally. Owing to lateness of report we are unable to give any particulars of the sad accident.

Repudiates Laurier.

Montreal, Oct. 26.—Mr. Thos. C. Casgrain M.P., one of the leading French Conservative members of Parliament, in addressing the electors of Granby last night repudiated the attitude of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Tarte on the question of sending a Canadian contingent. They did not represent the real sentiment of Quebec he said, and the hesitation of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Tarte's opposition to the scheme had caused French Canada an incalculable wrong in the eyes of the Mother Country and other provinces.

Civic Row at Ottawa.

Ottawa, Oct. 26.—Civic departments here have again fallen out. The Board of Works ordered the Engineer to make certain repairs costing $2,000. The Finance Committee refuses to authorize the expenditure, and has warned the Engineer that cheques for any money spent on the repairs will not be signed. The Board of Works has already overdrawn its appropriation but the Finance Committee promises to do what it can to furnish the money if the Engineer furnish a detailed statement of the repairs.

For America's Cup.

Montreal, Oct. 26.—There is a movement on foot for the Canadians to challenge for the great yacht trophy, the America's Cup. The scheme is to build a yacht with money raised by popular subscription through Canada.

If the idea of those at the head of the scheme are carried out the yacht will probably be built at some point in the Maritime Provinces. The challenge, if sent, probably go through the Royal Nova Scotia Yacht Club, as according to the deed of gift, the challenge must be from a club having quarters at a seaport.

Returned From Atlin.

Capt John Martin, who has been in the Yukon district since early last spring, returned to town yesterday, and is renewing old associations. The Captain looks the picture of health, and was kept busy yesterday shaking hands with his many friends here whom he chanced to meet. He says that for a time luck was against him, but finally he got several claims that are turning out well. The Captain will return to the north in February.

If the British use up men right along with the fatality alleged at Mafeking, the Boer cause will shortly be up in the air before long.

PETERBOROUGH, OCTOBER 18, 1899

THERE ARE IRISHMEN AND IRISHMEN

A number of representatives of Ireland in the British Parliament, and a proportion of Irishmen in Dublin, in the United States and Canada, who have by word and deed manifested their sympathy with the present enemies of Britain in Africa. These, however, do not represent the sentiments of Irishmen as a whole. The rather is the majority represented by the men in the ranks of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers, who at the risk of their lives, stormed the position held by the Boers on the hill near Glencoe and drove them off with great slaughter. And this proceeding does not stand alone in the history of the British army. For hundreds of years the Irish have stood side by side with their brothers in arms from Scotland and England in all conflicts with the enemies of the Empire, they shared the common danger, and by deeds of heroism brought no small part to the lustre of the army and the navy.

SCIENTIFIC BATTLES

The engagements of the British forces in South Africa are being carried out on the most scientific military principles. An epitome of the modern art of war as laid down in the books may assist our readers to follow the action of the troops more intelligently from the more or less fragmentary accounts of the fighting. The battle opens with the artillery duel at long range, during which the full strength of the British artillery is turned upon and overwhelms in succession the artillery units of the enemy. Meanwhile the infantry is preparing to advance for the frontal attack and the flanking forces are despatched. When the enemy's artillery is silenced, the British artillery distributes its fire over the front of the enemy's position, which is to be attacked by the infantry, and endeavors to keep down the enemy's rifle fire while the British infantry advances. If, as at Glencoe, a hill is being attacked, the artillery can keep up its fire over the heads of the stormers until they are within three or four hundred yards of the top, when the artillery ceases firing and the infantry charges with a cheer. Where the ground permits the British artillery may advance after silencing the enemy's artillery and take up a closer position, say about 2,000 yards, to support the infantry attack.

NOTES AND COMMENTS

"The Canadians will be gratified at the news that the British West Indies are already dissatisfied with the reciprocity treaties they negotiated with the United States last spring," remarks the Buffalo Express. Canadians have a shrewd idea that that's what usually happens to any country that endeavors to make a square deal with Uncle Sam and gets the inevitable gold brick?

•• • ••

There is one thing that may be noticed when British troops go into action, somebody gets hurt. In the present war there are no "terrific bombardments" lasting several hours with casualties to the extent of one mule.

•• • ••

Canada's heart is warm towards the brave men who by land and sea are ready to give even life itself for the honor and integrity of the empire. May the God of Battles keep and preserve them, and give them stout hearts and strong hands.

•• • ••

Hans Lawther, a wealthy citizen of Fulton, Mo., has been made the defendant in a remarkable lawsuit. Several years ago Lawther took Miss Ethel Lynch from an orphan's school under the condition that she should be educated and brought up as one of the family. The young woman now alleges that instead of complying with the agreement he gave her such a limited education that she can only work as a servant. Because of this she asks $2,400 as wages and $3,000 damages.

•• • ••

The two books of naval signal codes which disappeared from a British warship lying at Portsmouth a few days ago, have not yet been recovered, in spite of the most painstaking work on the part of the Government's detectives, and it is now announced that if they are not returned with proper explanations within a week, a complete new code will be prepared. This will cause a great amount of work, as the naval code is always prepared for a term of five years. It is the belief in naval circles that the books are still in Portsmouth and the police have already searched several houses in that town. One of the ship's boys was arrested the other day and testified that he had been sent out of the yard with a parcel of books, a description of which tallies with that of the signal books. He said that he gave his parcel to a civilian, who instantly disappeared with it. The Scotland Yard detectives who have been working on the case are said to believe that the books are now in Paris.

•• • ••

Some Conservative papers continue to gas about Sir John Macdonald's loyalty to the empire, in orders to stick splinters into the Laurier cabinet's doings with regard to South Africa. Sir John Macdonald set up a 35 per cent. tariff against Great Britain as well as against the rest of the world, a step which was liable to do more to cut Canada loose from the empire than anything else ever done by this country. Sir John did not look at it in that light, neither probably did he look at it in any other light but that it suited the Conservative party. If the history of the past were wiped out and the Liberal Government proposed a step like that to-day, a section of the Conservative press would want to tear the Liberals to pieces for disloyalty.

A WAR BALLOON'S ADVENTURES

Italian Peasant Saw the Devil Come Out of It.

The Balloon Corps of the Italian army has been exercising in Rome recently, says the London Globe, and experienced the following curious and unpleasant interruption. It appears that a sudden gust of wind swept away the balloon, made of silk, and the soldiers, holding it by the ropes, had to let them go for fear of being carried off by the balloon, which at once rose and made for the hillside district. Toward evening it came to earth at the village of Palombaro, and then its troubles really began. The whole population of the neighborhood ran to meet the beautiful, silvery, shining balloon, and soon took it a prisoner.

To their great astonishment, the women and maidens of Polombaro discovered that the balloon was made of pure silk and naturally they sought to get as large a piece of it as possible to make into dresses. But, despite all their efforts, the simple-minded peasants could not empty the balloon, which with every puff of wind bounded hither and thither and threatened finally to escape from them into the clouds. The matter became serious, and at last a rumor ran among the crowd that the balloon was a monster escaped from hell, and that the devil was hiding inside it. How to get rid of the devil was the next question. "That will be simple enough," said a crafty peasant. "Let us drag the balloon into the church. If the devil really is inside he will then have to come out of the balloon of his own accord, since no devil can remain inside a church."

No sooner said than done. The balloon was dragged to the church, and the large entrance door was thrown open, but the unwieldy "monster" resisted all efforts to cram it through the church door. Then arose a squabble among the peasants. Some of them maintained that the balloon was too huge, while others said that the devil was the cause of their failure to force the balloon through the door, because he resisted with all his strength the efforts being made to make him enter the church by force. A final attempt was made, and by dint of pushing, squeezing and dragging the balloon it was got inside the church.

In the church all was darkness. Some candles were at once brought, as the villagers desired to observe closely the demeanor of the suspicious balloon inside their church. One especially inquisitive peasant went up quite close to the balloon and held a candle to the silk at a part from which there was a small escape of gas. All at once a bluish flame sprang from the balloon; then came in quick succession a fearful roar, a terrible stench and loud calls for help, as the people, half suffocated and many of them singed, ran blindly from the church.

Pale and trembling from their fright, the good folks of Palombaro assembled on the square in front of the church. Of course, nearly all of them had seen the devil as with a blue flame and a fearful stench he had escaped from the balloon and out of the church. When the smell had passed away, in the course of half an hour, a couple of foolhardy young men ventured to enter the church again. There were no evident signs that the liberated devil had wrought any great havoc. But the beautiful silk, from which the fair sex of Palombaro had intended to make fine raiment, was utterly destroyed, and lay black and charred on the flagstone.

The Crawford Monument.

A draft for thirty-six dollars has been received from "Kit," being the amount collected by her through the Women's Kingdom of the Mail and Empire towards the Crawford Memorial Fund. It is hoped that this amount will be handsomely augmented by the proceeds of Dr. O-Hagan's lecture this evening, when a good musical programme will also be provided.

Bridegroom 122 Years Old.

Atlantic City, Oct. [illegible].—The record of a remarkable wedding was returned to the Bureau of Statistics to-day by Rev. Thomas J. Cross, pastor of the First Baptist Church, of Atlantic City.

The ceremony was performed on the evening of September 3 last, in the parlor of the cottage, 8 South Delaware avenue. Only the principals and two witnesses were present. The groom was Charles Smith, a practical physician, who gave his age as 122 years, and the bride was Miss Sallie May, aged 45 years. Both were born in the United States. This was Dr. Smith's second matrimonial venture, but the bride had never been married before. She is a well-formed, matronly-looking woman, while her husband is a tall, well-built, patriarchal-looking man, with flowing white beard, and apparently not more than 70 years of age.

Dr. Smith explained his longevity by using an "elixir of life," which he distills from a formula of the Persians. He is active in his movements and a man of more than ordinary intelligence. The couple reside at the cottage where the wedding took place.

Whispers of War

There are whispers in the canteen, there are whispers in the mess,
There are whispers wheresoever walked a lad in soldier dress,
Just another such a whisper as the one that grew and grew Till it burst in cannon's thunder on the plains of Waterloo.

It was only just a murmur, but a murmur low and deep,
Like a lion's angry growling when you
rouse it from its sleep;
But it's reached the golden Indies and the wild Canadian shore,
Bound to speak again in cannon, as the lion's bound to roar.

And the burden of them whispers ran like this, "It's bound to come;
Pull the Lion's tail and wake him, and you'll find he isn't dumb;
And if you want to work him up to action
rougher still,
Rouse his mem'ry too, and whisper in his ear, 'Majuba Hill!'

"We've been patient; don't get talking about foreign policy;
It is time our debt to settle, and what is to be will be.
We've had one bill receipted, just sent home from the Soudan,
And to settle up another we are ready to a man."

Ay, it's reached where'er our language makes the music of the breeze,
For I've just received a letter from a chum across the seas;
And he says, "We all are waiting with old England heart and hand
For to settle that account, boy, just received from Boerland."

There was whispers in the canteen, there was whispers in the mess,
Till they found a vent in poetry, or we'd had to burst, I guess.
And we wrote a little ballad, an' we all
put in a word;
Here it is, "A British War Song," by the fighting Forty-Third.

There's a blot upon our story, say whate'er you will,
'Tis that field of death and glory called Majuba Hill.
There our vaunted pride was smitten—
unavenged as yet—
And the honest heart of Britain burns to pay the debt.

Dark Majuba, yet how glorious deeds that lit the fray!
What of him who held victorious shot and shell at bay?
Ay! we've heard the story often, and we'll hear it still,
How the flag of truce held Farmer* on Majuba Hill.

Should be heard the loud war-rattle, what have we to fear?
There is music in a battle unto Brittons
dear.
Dread and danger make us calmer,
strengthen heart and will,
Ay, there's many a lad like Farmer in our Army still.

Who is he that comes a-looking neither left nor right;
With the self-same mein he carried in the hottest fight?
Eyes of steel that match the fiery gleam of cross and star,
Stern and sturdy, stiff and wiry, Bobs of Candahar.

Who is he to fear a stranger, on, 'mid shell and shot,
With a smile for death and danger—
who could daunt a Scot?
It is he whose sword made brightness
in the dark Soudan;
Glorious and victorious Hector of Macdonald's clan.

Let the drums and trumpets rattle, need we shrink away?
With such men to guide the battle could we lose the day?
Nay, we would retrive our honor, fighting on until Brightest boast upon our banner, dark
Majuba Hill.

Now, there ain't a Rudyard Kipling in
the fighting Forty-Third;
But it just expressed our feelings and our very souls are stirred;
For there's something in the rumour of a war that seems to start
Into action the old Briton in the weakest English heart.

True, I know all men are brothers, or at least they ought to be,
But at bay we can't help fighting—we're a fighting family.
—Kate Bishop ("Kay Bee"), in Montreal Star.

CAUSE OF THE BOER WAR.

OVER ONE HUNDRED YEARS OF STRIFE AND BITTERNESS.

Some Things That Led to the Present Outbreak of Hostilities in South Africa.

Rightly to understand the present situation in the Transvaal, the history of South Africa since its occupation by the British should be taken into consideration. The first white men to make settlements in the Cape were the Dutch. They went there in the 17th century, and they were joined by the British in 1795. The British Government captured the territory by force of arms in 1806, and the Cape of Good Hope became definitely a colony of the British Crown in 1814. The white population then consisted largely of men of Dutch descent, though with a considerable admixture of Huguenot blood. English immigration followed British sovereignty, and in 1820, not less than 4,000 British colonists arrived at the Cape.

Meanwhile the Boers, as the Dutch settlers were called, resented the autocratic rule of the British, and were especially incensed at the interference made with their "right" to enslave the negro races. The emancipation of slavery in the colony in 1834 was the cause of the "Great Trek," or exodous, of 1836, which led to the formation of Natal, the Orange Free State and the Transvaal. One grievance of the Boers was that when slavery was abolished the slave owners received as compensation orders on London, where they were compelled to cash on the spot at ruinous rates, practically impoverishing them. Another was that by order of the Government they were obliged to surrender certain valuable lands on the Kei River, which had been annexed. In rage and disgust the Boers began to go north and east into the wilderness. Those who went north across the Vaal River were practically unmolested by the English. They were, however, still claimed as British subjects, and on August 21, 1845, the Government of the colony issued a proclamation to that effect.

THE TERRITORY ANNEXED.

In 1848, after quelling a native uprising beyond the Orange River, the Cape Government formally annexed the territory between the Orange and Vaal, under the name of the Orange River Sovereignty. To accomplish this pacification, the Government became involved in a conflict with the Boers of the Orange district, who were joined by the farmers from beyond the Vaal under the redoubtable Andries Pretorious.

A Kaffir war being then in progress, Pretorious took advantage of the predicament of the British, and proposed "a permanent pacific settlement," and on January 16, 1852, received from the Crown officers a guarantee that the farmers north of the Vaal had "the right to manage their own affairs and to govern themselves according to their own laws, without any interference on the part of the British Government." Two years later, at a convention signed at Bloomfontein, Great Britain also repudiated sovereignty over the Orange territory.

Such was the origin of these two Boer States, together containing about 4,000 adult males. Under enlightened governments the Orange Free State prospered. Such was not the case in the Transvaal, for within its borders there were at least four so-called republics, each claiming sovereign power. Finally, one of these rose above the others, and in 1858 the Volksraad passed the "Gronwet," or fundamental law, which is still nominally the constitution of the country. But it was not until 1864 that all the Boers north of the Vaal agreed to recognize M. W. Pretorious, son of Andries, as head of the State. The white population then numbered about 30,000. Wars with the large native population were frequent, the Boers refused to pay taxes, their paper money was worth about one-fourth of its face value, and the country was going from bad to worse.

THE BRITISH INTERVENE.

In 1876 matters came to a crisis, which led to the intervention of the British Government in Transvaal affairs, and finally to the annexation of that State on April 12, 1877. It came about in this way. The weakened and disorganized republic was hemmed in by the Kaffirs on the north and Zulus on the south, and not only in danger of extermination itself, but, by failing to repel the common foe of white men, became a menace to every civilized community in South Africa.

It was then that the British Government sent Sir Theophilus Shepstone as a special commissioner to "territories adjoining the colony of Natal," to inquire into the recent disturbances. He was empowered "in certain events to exercise the jurisdiction of Her Majesty over such territories or some of them." On his arrival in Pretoria he explained to the Executive Council of the Transvaal that his mission "was to confer with the Government and people of the Transvaal with the object of initiating a new state of things, which would guarantee security for the future." After three months' enquiry, the Commissioner became convinced that the only method of effectually bringing safety to the Boers and of protecting British interests in other colonies was by annexing it to Great Britain, and he issued a proclamation to that effect. The majority of the people readily accepted annexation as affording protection against savage foes that threatened them with annihilation. Of the Executive Council only, President Burgers and Paul Kruger, entered a protest, and refused to serve under the new form of government.

As Sir Theophilus Shepstone entered the Transvaal with only 25 mounted police to back up his authority, it cannot be said that he annexed the country by force of arms. But he has been blamed for too precipitate action, for had he waited two or three months more the Boers would undoubtedly have been compelled to seek British protection. His step probably saved the colony from being absorbed by Germany or some other European power, but when little aid came from the British, the former slight opposition to annexation became real. Paul Kruger went to England to protest, while a memorial protesting against his protest, and signed by many Boers, was also sent to London. Kruger's protest was rejected, and the Home Government was now definitely pledged to maintain her authority in the country and to see that the promises of local self-government was fulfilled.

THE ZULU WAR.

The outbreak of the Zulu war in 1877 kept the hands of the authorities full, and, in part, at least, prevented them from carrying out the proposed reforms. The Boers complained at this neglect, especially as the British Government had failed to give them protection against the Zulus. This had been one of the chief reasons for accepting annexation. A second deputation, consisting of Paul Kruger and P. J. Joubert, went to England to protest again. Meantime, many of the Boers were serving against the Zulus, and fully half of the population were still in favor of British rule. The Government assured Kruger and Joubert that it was impossible to withdraw the Queen's sovereignty from the Transvaal. This was in 1878.

Soon after the return of these delegates, Sir Bartlet Frere proceeded to Pretoria. He reported that many loyal Boers claimed that they were being intimidated by the disaffected members of the State, and testified that substantial improvements had been made in the administration since annexation.

Sir Bartle also visited the camp of the malcontents and argued the case with a committee, who demanded a restoration of their independence. To them he replied that annexation was "irrevocable." This was the fifth time that British sovereignty had been asserted. He also reported that the malcontents were far from forming a majority of the white population. It is now admitted that neither the Government at home nor the administrator, Sir Theophilus Shepstone, had been vigorous in their efforts to effect reforms or to protect the Boers. But in 1879 the most urgent danger in which they stood—that of being slaughtered and plundered by the Zulus and Kaffirs—was removed by the victories of Lord Chelmsford and Sir Garnet Wolseley. But Lord Wolsley's settlement was far from successful. He announced a new constitution in December, 1879, the chief feature of which was a nominated and not an elect Council, as the Boers had been promised. He declared that malcontents Boers were the "most formidable enemies the Transvaal had ever had." He caused the arrest of Pretorious on a charge of high treason, but, quickly changing his mind, dragged him from prison and nominated him a member of the Legislative Council.

THE BOERS RISE IN REBELLION.

In England, Mr. Gladstone, in his campaign speeches, was proclaiming the action of the Conservative Government in South Africa "an invasion of a free European, Christian and republican community," but when the Liberals came into office, the Cabinet decided that "the sovereignty of the Queen over the Transvaal could not be relinquished." Sir Bartle Frere was succeeded by Sir George Colley as High Commissioner, and in December 1880, the Boers rose in armed rebellion and killed or wounded 157 British soldiers. This outbreak was brought on by wilful misrepresentation of British policy by the chief agitators, who were aided with money from the Fenians. But the grievance which gave vital force to the revolt was the failure to grant self government to the Transvaal, as promised by Sir Theophilus Shepstone. For this failure both parties in Great Britain were to blame.

Following their first victory, the Boers proclaimed the independence of the country. The small force of British troops was defeated in several disastrous engagements, notably that of Majuba Hill. Instead of sending a large force and quelling the uprising, as is the universal custom of the English, the home Government yielded to the armed and victorious rebels. The Transvaal was restored intact to the Boers, who received "complete self-government subject to the suzerainty of Her Majesty."

This convention was signed in Pretoria in August 1881. No appeasement of the animosities between the Dutch and the English inhabitants of the Transvaal followed the conclusion of the convention. The Boers never respected its terms, but continued to importune the British Government for an ampler measure of independependence.

CONCESSIONS MADE.

Lord Kimberley, who occupied the Colonial Office when the convention of 1881 was signed, was followed by Lord Derby. The latter listened with favor to the arrogant and overbearing demands of President Kruger, and in 1884 the convention, which forms the present basis of the relations between Great Britain and the Transvaal, was signed. By its terms the latter was permitted to call itself the South African Republic, while the control of its foreign policy was reduced to the provision that the republic would conclude no treaty with any State or nation, other than the Orange Free State, without the consent of the Queen. It is maintained that as Great Britain retains the power of vetoing foreign treaties, she still exercises suzerainty over the South African Republic.

These further concessions were granted in the vain hope that amity would be restored thereby between the two white races in South Africa. But this act of abnegation appeared to the English residents to set up a rival ruling power in the British sphere. The Boers had unwillingly agreed to confine the Transvaal within fixed limits, but to hold them to that promise has been no easy matter, and the British Government has been obliged to interfere by force of arms to protect British rights and prevent the Boers from annexing all the neighboring native States.

Ever since 1884 the Transvaal Government has been trying to accomplish two things—first, to shut off the Cape from the north and to acquire a seaport of its own, and, second, to retain all power in the hands of the Boers, and to deny the franchise to all settlers within its borders. By the foresight and sagacity of such men as Cecil Rhodes, Sir Hercules Robinson and others, the Boers have in the main been defeated in the first of these objects, although they have thus far succeeded in the second.

THE CASE OF THE OUTLANDERS.

The chief cause of discord throughout South Africa is the treatment of the Outlanders (non-Boer settlers) in the Transvaal. By the law of 1882 any male could obtain the rights of citizenship after a residence of five years. There was then a fair number of Englishmen resident in the Transvaal, especially in the Lydenburg mining district. But with the gold discoveries of 1884 and 1886, came a rush of English immigrants, and by the end of 1888 Johannesburg was a large and flourishing city. By 1894 the Boer population of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State was estimated at 70,861, and the Outlanders at 77,000, including 62,500 British subjects. But the registered voters numbered only 13,126. Many of these Outlanders have been in the country since 1887, and yet in 1894 not one of them had a voice in the Government, although its Treasury, formerly bankrupt, had been replenished as a result of their industry.

This denial of the franchise had been brought about by the act of 1887, by which the Volksraad raised the period of residence necessary to obtain a vote for President and members of the Volksraad to 15 years, and by a subsequent amendment by which no alien could obtain full burgher rights. It is true that in 1890 a second Raad was created, membership in which might be attained after four years' residence, but this [illegible] within, as all acts may be (and are) overruled by the first Volksraad. Other grievances are the dynamite monopoly and various restrictions to trade.

Reforms were agitated by the British subjects, but the petitions of the Transvaal National Union to the Raad were rejected with jeers and insults. The British Colonial Office tried again and again to obtain for the British residents the electoral franchise after five years' residence, but in vain. Jamieson's raid, made in response to an unauthorized and injudicious appeal of a few Outlanders in Johannesburg, was an attempt to bring the Boers to their senses by force of arms. It was a proceeding entirely unauthorized by the British authorities, and the great mass of the Outlanders were entirely innocent of complicity with it. It not only failed of its immediate object, but materially strengthened the Boer Government as an upholder of the law and order, and tied the hands of the British Government, and prevented the application of pressure.

Recently the Volksraad has begun to interfere with the judges in the discharge of their duties, and the Outlanders have lost confidence in the one institution of the country which has hitherto commanded their respect. In four out of the five States which comprise South Africa, the Dutch and English enjoy absolutely the same privileges, while in the fifth a Boer minority has all the power, and the large British element none of it.

The outbreak of the war was preceded by long and tiresome negotiations. They were provoked by the presentation to the British Government of a petition signed by 21,684 Outlanders, praying for redress of grievances and a restoration of the political rights guaranteed to them under the conventions of 1881 and 1884. This was presented on March 23, and was shortly afterwards endorsed by Sir Alfred Milner, British Governor of Cape Colony. On May 31, a conference was held at Bloemfontein between Sir Alfred Milner and Mr. Kruger. The British representative proposed a five years' (retrospective) franchise, a naturalization oath similar to that of the Orange Free State, full rights to vote upon naturalization and a fair representation of the new voters in the Volksraad. In declining this proposal, President Kruger offered a seven years' franchise, not fully retrospective, under which every man would have to abandon his old citizenship and not gain a new one for several years. Even at the end of that period his Transvaal citizenship would be only partial, and would be granted not as a matter of right, but on suffrance, at the will of Boer officials. The conference ended in failure.

FRUITLESS NEGOTIATIONS.

President Kruger returned to Pretoria and secured the enactment of a law on the basis of his proposals. The British Government pronounced it unsatisfactory, and on July 12 the Transvaal adopted another law, granting the seven years' (retrospective) franchise, but again made its application depend upon the pleasure of Boer officials, and not upon right. Obscure and unsatisfactory as this proposal was, the British Government was inclined to accept it, and on July 31 proposed another conference to examine it. Not until August 19 did the Transvaal Government reply, meanwhile collecting ammunition and making military preparations. It then practically declined the British offer, and substituted therefor a five years' retrospective franchise and increased representation, provided Great Britain would pledge itself never again to intervene in Transvaal affairs, no longer to insist upon the assertion of suzerainty, and to concede arbitration, from which governments other than that of the Orange Free State should be excluded. On August 28, the British Government replied that, while it hoped no further intervention would be necessary, yet it could not pledge itself not to protect its subjects in the Transvaal; that it still retained suzerainty, and that it would consider the scheme of arbitration proposed, but that some matters fell outside the domain of arbitration, and required prompt settlement. It renewed its proposal for a conference. In replying, on September 2, the Transvaal offered conditionally to enter a conference, but withdrew the whole franchise offer, and insisted upon absolute abrogation of British suzerainty and the erection of the Transvaal into a "sovereign international State."

To these demands Great Britain replied, on September 13, practically renewing the Transvaal's own proposal of August 19 of a five years' franchise and increased representation, with non-foreign arbitration, but leaving the sovereignty question as before, and suggesting that the Outlanders in the Transvaal Legislature should be permitted to speak English. To this the Transvaal replied on September 19, accusing the British Government of bad faith, withdrawing all former offers and guardingly agreeing to a conference or joint commission of enquiry. Since that time the British Government has denounced as false the charges of bad faith, has withdrawn its former offers and announced its intention of submitting a new plan of settling the controversy.

Before this plan was announced the Transvaal Republic sent to the British Government a peremptory ultimatum calling on the latter to acknowledge its sovereignty as an international power and to withdraw its troops from the Transvaal border within 48 hours. When the British troops were not withdrawn the Boers began the war.

BRITONS PROUD OF THEIR ARMY

The Mobilization Arrangements Arrangements Have Worked Like a Charm, and the Army Corps is Ready to Move.

London, Oct. 20.—Another proof of the magnitude of the war in addition to the estimate of £10,000,000 required for military purposes, is the proclamation calling a portion of the militia into service for replenishing garrisons. There is nothing unusual in this course, since an organized force of 120,000 militia was brought into use in the Soudan campaign in 1885, in the Crimean and in other crisis. It is not unlikely that the Mediterranean and other garrisons may be reinforced by militia levies.

Mobilization of half the reserves is virtually completed, and the muster is satisfactory in every respect. The military system has worked like well oiled machinery. The army corps is ready to move, andw ill start to-morrow to go on steadily. If the Admiralty has arranged the transport service as well as the War Office has done its work, no cause of complaint can be found.

British military pride is rising everywhere with the evidence that the reserves have made a brilliant muster and that there are no signs of official mismanagement in any quarter.

The supplementary army estimate asks the House of Commons to vote an additional 35,000 men and £10,000,000 in consequence of the situation in South Africa. It is explained that the 35,000 men represent the probable maximum excess beyond the establishment fixed for the year 1899-1900, and is in consequence of the calling out of the reserves, and of the temporary transfer of troops from the Indian to the British establishment. With the additional £10,000,000, the total army estimates are £30,617,200.

The militia consists of thirty-two regiments of artillery, fourteen companies of engineers, 124 battalions of infantry and six companies of medical staff, with 129,752 officers and men.

MORE TRANSPORTS TAKEN.

Boston, Mass. Oct. 20.—The announcement is made here that the British Government has chartered the Dominion Line steamer Englishman for use in transporting supplies to South Africa. The Englishman has made but two trips to this port. It is expected that the steamer Canada, of the same line, will be chartered also.

New York, Oct. 19.—The steamer Maine, which has been lent without charge to the British Government by the Atlantic Transport Company, left Philidelphia on October 18th. On her arrival in London she will be fitted up as a hospital ship.

The Maine is a steel, three-masted single-screw vessel, built by William Gray & Co., of West Hartlepool, Eng., and launched in July, 1887. She is 315 feet in length, forty feet beam and more than twenty feet deep. She has three decks, and her gross register is 2816 tons, the net register being 1813 tons. Below she is divided into six water-tight compartments. The Maine has been employed as a carrier of cattle and other freight. She is commanded by Captain Muselwhite, and has a crew of forty men. When refitted she will accomodate about 300 persons in the hospital quarters.

Rough Voyage of Empress.

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 20.—The steamer Empress of India, which has reached here from Japan, has completed the roughest trip of her forty-three voyages. The second day out from Yokohama she encountered a typhoon, which destroyed communication between the engine-room and bridges and destroyed some of the boats. The storm continued unabated all day and all night.

Fears are expressed by officers for the transport steamer Senator, carrying home the Fifty-first Iowa. She left Yokohama for San Francisco eight hours before the Empress, and, having immense upper works, would fare badly in a gale.

Snap Shots With a Graphophone

The Graphophone is to the ear what the photograph camera is to the eye and more, for the gramaphone catches instantly and preserves every tint and shade of sound. A most interesting use of a gramaphone is to make records of your friends' voices to be preserved for future use. You can catch the story of your jolly friend just as he told it, or the favorite song of some loved one, just as she sang it and have it reproduced perfectly at any time and as often as you please. Besides the Graphophone affords wonderful entertainment in the way of reproducing the music of bands, orchestras or vocal or instrumental soloists. No investment will return so much in pleasure as the purchase of a Graphophone. It is the perfect talking machine. The Manchesters outflanked the left of the Boers upon the hill and then took part in the final charge with the Gordons and Devonshires.

A GREAT POKER GAME

IT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT ABOUT AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

The Victim Was the Samoan King Malietoa and the Victor an American Naval Officer—The Jack Pot That Caused the Trouble.

"There was a stiff game of poker played by a paymaster in the navy with King Malietoa several years ago. I guess this was about the healthiest game ever indulged in by a foreigner. Malietoa had heard of the great games played by Kalakaua, king of Hawaii, and the Samoan thought he'd like to take a little brush on this line. Well, Malietoa's opportunity to test his belief came one day when an American man-of-war—never mind which one—sailed into the harbor at Apia. His determination to take the thirty-second degree in the mysteries of the great American game was satisfied to the fullest extent. Among the officers aboard the man-of-war were a paymaster, a lieutenant and an assistant engineer, who had burned the midnight lamp studying poker at Annapolis and had prosecuted the study in season and out of season ever since they left that place. In a word, they were all three just about as smooth poker players as you could find in a month's travel.

"There was a trader among the white residents of Apia who was known to come to the front with a pretty stiff game, and Malietoa soon arranged through him a game with the officers. By invitation and appointment the king and his friends met the officers in the private parlors of a European, and before the evening was half gone Malietoa requested that the limit, a small one, be taken off. The old codger had won several pretty fair jack pots and felt his importance and ability to clean up the whole crowd. Off the limit came, and for several hours Malietoa had almost phenomenal luck, winning jack pot after jack pot. The more he won the more reckless he became, and when something was said about closing down he entered a large and emphatic protest. The game proceeded, and the healthiest jack pot of the night was on the table.

"Several hands had been dealt around without any one having expressed his ability to open the pot, when the king, with a look of surprise and a smile of pleasure and triumph combined, announced that he would open it $20 worth. Every player staid. The paymaster drew three cards, the lieutenant the same number, the assistant engineer took two and the trader one. Malietoa showed his blood by standing out and putting $10 more into the pot. The paymaster saw this and raised him $25, while the others staid. Then the king raised again, and the paymaster threw in $25 more. It was becoming too interesting for the other players, and they dropped out. After the king's last raise the paymaster hesitated a moment, put his cigar to one side and shoved $50 to the middle of the mahogany.

"The king put up the equivalent in Chilean silver dollars, the currency of the islands, and, drawing a small sack from his pocket, emptied its contents before him and excitedly placed in the pot the funds of the royal treasury of Samoa, amounting to $79 in silver. The paymaster's face grew serious, and he looked at his royal opponent in a hesitating, puzzled sort of way. Could this be a Samoan Ah Sin he had run against? Had this kingly copper colored son of a gun learned the art of poker playing from visiting traders years before and had he been playing possum all the evening? Having six or seven months' pay in his inside pocket, the paymaster decided to chance some of it in finding out.

"After a few moments of undecision he drew $579 in gold and silver from his pocket and added it to the pot, which now covered the table. Malietoa gave a gasp and called for a glass of kava to steady his nerves. This he gulped down and announced that he was out of funds, requesting at the same time that the paymaster take his word for $500, but there was nary a take, the paymaster only smiling and looking fixedly at the pot. Then the excited monarch offered to put up the island of Manono, one of the finest in the Samoan group, against the $300. To this the paymaster consented, and a transfer deed of the property, duly signed, attested by the trader, who was a notary public, and witnessed by the other two officers, was put in the pot. Then the king called the paymaster, who slowly laid down our aces and a five spot.

"With a look of sorror and a Samoan wall of despair, his majesty exposed to view three kings, an eight spot and a deuce. Then he fell off his chair in a faint, the excitement having been too much for his nerves. Kava in copious quantities brought him around sufficiently to enable his removal to his own castle. The paymaster shoveled his money into a sack and placed it in the trader's iron safe, but the deed for the island he carefully placed in his pocket.

"Next morning the details of the big poker game were known to nearly every inhabitant of the place, and the German and English consuls sent official communications to the American consul protesting in most emphatic terms against the action of the king in disposing of the island of Manono to an American or to any one else, and warning the consul that unless the paymaster returned the deed for the island to the king at once they would direct the attention of their respective governments to the case.

"Here was a pretty state of affairs. The officer had, no doubt, won the island fairly, and the king's action was binding, but in the tension in which Samoan affairs were at that time the German and English governments would only too willingly have taken advantage of the circumstances as an excuse for international complications, ending ultimately in a disastrous way to American interests.

"The facts were fully explained to the paymaster, and on the promise of Malietoa that he would give the officer a number of fine mats and other Samoan articles of value the deed was returned to the king and destroyed. By mutual consent of the consuls and others interested the affair was hushed up in every way and was thus allowed to die out. Malietoa took an oath that he would never again play poker."

AN ATTACK UPON THE EMPIRE.

Russia and France May Seize the Present Opportunity.

London, Oct. 24.—The sailing of the Channel squadron to-day for Gibraltar is now regarded by the keenest observers as an indication that some unexpected attack upon British interests is possible. The magnitude of the preparations for the war, which are out of all proportion to the requirements of the military situation can be adequately explained on the theory that the Government suspected that some great power would be tempted to seize the opportunity for striking a sudden blow or carrying out a deeply cherished policy.

Russia May Strike.

The quarter from which an attack of this kind may come is unmistakable. The Russian press has had license to criticise the English policy in South Africa in the most acrid way, and a rumor that Herat may be occupied is already in the air. British commercial interests in Persia are so large that a Russian seizure of the commanding position in western Afghanistan would be a serious blow, aimed directly against free trade. That seems a more likely menace than the forcing of the Dardanelles by the Russian Black Sea fleet.

Understanding With Germany.

The movement of a powerful French fleet to the Levant coincides with the circulation of a rumor that the Russian advance may be resumed in Asia while England is preoccupied with the war in South Africa. It also fits in with the explanation of a secret agreement between England and Germany which I have already given in previous despatches. This was that England, in return for a free hand in South Africa in settling the Transvaal question, had agreed not to make any hostile use of her fleet if the German Emperor were to decide to follow up his visit to Jerusalem with a serious attemptt o colonize any portion of Asia Minor and to bring it under German influence.

Given Pointers.

The Ontario License Department has received a number of complaints from License Inspectors throughout the province, that it is almost impossible to secure witnesses on account of a decision made by Jistice Falconbridge, under which a witness who purchased liquor after hours, may refuse to give evidence on the ground that he would be incriminating himself and a charge might be laid against him for buying liquor after hours. The Department has sent out instructions advising Inspectors to prosecute such witnesses for infraction of the law, and their case being over, they can can give evidence against the hotel keeper.

VIVID HEALTH

Nothing so rare as charity, easily impaired and often lost—the envy of all and the grandest jewel in the crown of life is vivid health. Many a man has paid the forfeit of sickness to the gain of wealth. A loaded purse cannot atone for the deranged liver, the altering step, the rebellious stomach. Every pulse beat of impoverished blood carries weakness and disease. Gradually all nerve power leaves you and the fun of life is gone. An empty sack cannot stand upright, and so Death gathers in his cheques.

Stimulants and Purgatives cannot cure you, but The GREAT INDIAN BLOOD MEDICINE must and will.

Every bottle of this universal blood-maker and flesh builder carries a positive GUARANTEE. Evidence of new tells of hidden disease. A deranged stomach will undermine the entire system. This Great Family Journal

A tribute to its Editor by an admiring, but not over truthful subscriber, published by request with apologies to our readers.

Hail to the Morning Times! The monarch of the local world!
Whose flag is a mask of liberty, where'er it is unfurled!
To it the people bow the knee and offer homage due the rank,
And envy the editor's hefty pile of wealth within the Ontario bank.
His sparkling gems from Sanderson's, are worth the ransom of a king,
Of costly fabrics in his dress — Rich. Hall's finest imported things
Harry LeBrun's ties and gloves—of the choicest Parisian bore,
His shoes are patent leather dreams, the finest in Bob. Kidd's store.

The carriage which conveys him 'round, from Joe Yelland's, knocks the socks,
A footman perched back in the rear, an Ethiop driver on the box;
The horses, steeds whose pedigrees goes back to Arab's desert sands,
Their trapping wrought by skilled men and passed thro' Ben Shortly's hands,
On cushions of the finest silks, made by Miss Rose, he calmly sits,
In pose 'twould throw Jim Stratton's grandeur into fits.
And puffs he at cigars, of brands the Prince of Wales, could not afford—
They cost him seven dollars at Sam Ray's, when bought wholesale by the cord.

He dwells within a mansion fit to house the proudest king on earth;
'Twould take an expert many days to figure up just what it's worth;
Pure marbles from Italian hills by sculptors carved with skill untold.
With doors of rare mahogany, all bearing knobs of solid gold.
The viands on his banquet board would tempt an epicurean god.
Rare treasures, raised by "Veritas" and "Old Subscriber" from the sod,
And wines——! ! But here our pencil fails, the muse her wings declines to flop—
Rare nectar from an age long past, and worth a heritage a drop!

When togged out his his Sunday dress, 'twould make Tom Dunn bat he's eyes,
And gaze upon his knightly air, with envy he could not disguise!
His jewels flash as dazzling stars set in a firmament of clothes.
Of broad-cloth, beaver and Billy Lech's furs, and all such nobby things as those Any woman of noble birth, or gentle manners she would be,
Would give her eye-teeth, sure, to own for lord, the proud emperor "We."
To help him blow the golden wealth that comes to him in ceaseless floods,
And see that needle-ladies keep the jeweled buttons on his duds.

His cash comes to his hand unsought, he never need present a bill,
Subscribers and the men of ads., rush up to pour it in his till.
And if the Editor should be out at lunch or at the corner store
They fold the green-hued bills in wads and shove them underneath his door.
All hail this might editor! his life is an elysian dream!
Upon the earth he proudly reigns, a monarch clothed with power supreme!
Lives such a life of heavenly ease that when he hears the trumpet blow
He'll watch the great procession pass, but haughtily decline to go.

To Non-Advertisers.

Those merchants in Peterborough, who are not advertising, if they want more business and better business and are prepared to take care of increased trade will do well to avail themselves of the advertising columns of The Times. Judicious advertising is the life of business. If a merchant desires to do the best business his capital and stock will permit him he must advertise. The fall selling has commenced. People are buying the seasons necessities. They are studying the Times to find out what goods are on the market, where they are sold, and at what prices. The greatest benefits will be reached by those merchants who advertise for it is very true that the constant advertiser.

By the law of common sense,
Builds his business enterprises
Into columns most immense.

A CLEVER RUSE.

The Auctioneer Was Quick Witted and Finally Made a Sale.

An auctioneer on East Washington street—one of those redoubtable individuals commonly termed "slick"—was the cause of a farcical scene recently that would have done credit to a burlesque show. He had been talking industriously for a long time to a crowd of interested but enthusiastic listeners.

The affable auctioneer conscientiously went through his repertory from beginning to end, but somehow the crowd did not "warm up" to him—to quote his own language. Finally, with a dark look that bordered on despair, he grabbed up a well known pasteboard hatbox containing about 50 spools of silk thread of different colors. With the grace of a conjurer he extracted five of the spools, and, arraying them in a tempting semicircle on the counter, announced that they were "to go at any price."

But the audience, while admitting with nods of approval that they were good spools of thread, displayed no marked inclination to become excited over them. Not a bid was offered.

"I'll sell 'em for 10 cents," suggested the auctioneer timidly. It was plain from the tone of his voice that he was losing faith in himself and in all the world. There were no takers. The man of the red flag added three more spools to the semicircle. "All for 10 cents," he declared. But thread stock was far below par. The auctioneer caught up all the spools from the counter and flung them into the box with an impressive gesture. The light of inspiration flashed from his eyes.

"The whole blamed box for 10 cents!" he cried.

"I'll take it," was the prompt response, and a little man in a washed out overcoat and wearer of red chin whiskers stepped out from the crowd with a dirty 10 cent piece in his upraised hand. The auctioneer clutched the money feverishly, and, turning the box upside down so that all the spools dropped into a basket on the counter, he handed the worthless piece of ancient pasteboard to the anxious customer. A roar of hilarious laughter rose from the crowd that was heard throughout that neighborhood.

"I don't want your blamed old box!" wailed the unfortunate purchaser.

"You said you'd take it," replied the auctioneer. "I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came in a strong chorus from the delighted audience.

"I bought the spools!"

"No, you didn't! You bought the box! I'll leave it to the crowd—didn't he?"

"Yes!" came the answer again, stronger than ever. The red whiskered man stalked indignantly from the place with the box under his arm.

"What you going to do with it?" yelled the crowd.

"That's what!" cried the speculator as he held the pasteboard box in both hands, football fashion, and kicked it vigorously into the middle of Washington street.

THE COOKBOOK.

A nourishing dish may be made from cooked meat by stewing it very slowly in really good stock or gravy for 1½ hours.

An Italian way to give the touch of garlic to the salad is to rub a piece of bread with it and put it in the salad dish, where it lends its flavor through the dish as the salad is tossed.

Cook twice as much hominy as you want for a meal and pack what is left in a square dish. Next day cut in slices, fry in pork fat and serve with maple sirup. Rice is good fried in the same way, and children are very fond of both.

For baking, the banana should be green, but neither too green nor too ripe. It may be made most delicious by peeling and rolling in brown sugar and baking in a buttered pan in a very hot oven. It should be served around blanc mange.

MANDY'S QUICK WIT

UNCLE JOHN'S MODEL WIFE WAS EQUAL TO THE OCCASION.

An Exciting Race That Was Grandly Won When It Seemed Surely Lost Just Because This Clever Woman "Seen Her Duty, and She Done It."

"My wife," remarked Uncle John Algus with an air of pride and proprietorship, somewhat more prevalent among young husbands in their honeymoons than among old ones who have been married for 50 years or more, as Uncle John was—"my wife is one uv them women the Lord only makes a few uv, and them mighty scatterin. She's jist as good natured and happy now as she wuz when I courted her, but Mandy ain't all mush and spoon victuals, and there's times when she has to be handled with keer or somethin will be sp'iled. She's got temper a-plenty, and she ain't afeared uv the old sarpent himself. I mind one thing she done once that I'll never fergit of I live to be older than the parson's wife's bonnet.

"In them days Mandy weighed a hunderd and eighty-seven pounds in her stockin feet, and I wuz only a scant hunderd and forty. We had on the farm all the time seven or eight head uv fine horses, and one winter we had a pair uv 4-year-olds that we prided ourselves pertickeler on, for they had been takin premiums at the fair every year since they wuz yearlin's. They had speed, too, and we thought they couldn't be beat by anything in that neck uv woods, but a neighbor uv ours named Hall—everybody knowed Jim Hall, jist like they knowed me—had a pair he had bought in the next county that he offered to bet a cow and calf could beat ours hands down. He used to let 'em out past our place to kind uv tantalize us, and I tell you they wuzn't a funeral percession by a long ways, but Mandy used to laugh and say we'd show him something when the goin got good.

"You see, it was along in November then, and the roads hadn't froze yet. The first snow come in December with a mighty cold spell followin and hangin on, and in about a week or ten days we had fine sleighin, and one afternoon Mandy said she guessed we ought to hitch up the bays and go out for some air and exercise. That was enough for me, and I had the team to the cutter and out at the gate waitin for the lady in less than no time.

"The team wuz feelin as frisky as kittens, and the way they slung the snow and spun over the road would stir the blood in a wooden man. When we got to the turnpike, where the folks usually let their teams out, I guess there wuz a dozen or more movin up and down at a clippin gait, and we sailed right in among 'em, and in about seven minutes we passed everything on the road.

"Jim Hall wuzn't out with his team, and I could see that Mandy wuz gittin anxious, though she wuzn't sayin much. The road leadin to Jim's place struck the pike about 200 yards from the upper turn, and there wuz no sign uv him as we passed, and we didn't see him as we come back, but just after we got by his road we heard a clatter up the pike, and, by crackey, there wuz Jim a-comin lickety split. I guess he'd been to the postoffice, and the way he wuz comin after us wuz like a mink after chickens. Mandy took one look over her shoulder and told me to let 'em go for all they wuz wuth. I didn't need to be coaxed, and by the time she had said the words we wuz fairly flyin over the smooth snow track, and Jim wuz comin right behind us too. For the first few rods we gained on him, then he begun to creep up on us in spite uv all we could do. Everybody on the road knowed how me and Jim set store by our teams, and they pulled out to one side and give us all the room there wuz.

"I shook up my beauties as I felt him drawin up on me, but shakin wuzn't enough, and I touched 'em once or twice with the whip, but Jim jist rared back on his strings, lookin like destruction smilin at desolation, and kept a-comin. When his horses' heads passed our dashboard and I could see the snort in their noses, I got kind uv sick and thought I'd have to let go, but Mandy nerved me up, and I hung on and leaned away forrerd as if that would help some. By this time Jim's horses had their heads even with mine, and I held him there for a minute or such a matter, but jist as I begun to have a hope that it might be a neck and neck at the finish Mandy reached for the line next to her, and, with a sudden jerk, she pulled the team off to one side uv the road, where the snow wuz in a high drift, and Jim went ahead with a yell that made my ears stand out like windmill flappers.

"I wuz that dazed for a minute at Mandy that I couldn't do a lick, and, deacon though I wuz, I'm afeard I'd a-used language that wouldn't have sounded exactly right in Sunday school, but before I had a chance to make a move Mandy made a flyin leap over the side uv the sleigh and lit in the deep snow. Then I wuz dazeder than ever and had some kind uv an idee that we'd been struck by an earthquake or something and Mandy wuz killed, and I must go back after her and dig her out. But the team had their senses with them, and when they felt they had nigh two hundred pounds less load to haul than before Mandy jumped they didn't stop to see what had happened, but let theirselves out on a spurt that wuz chuck full uv chain lightnin, and out uv the snowdrift I could hear Mandy scream: 'Go it, John; you're all right now.'

"And so I wuz, and so wuz Mandy, for before Jim knowed that anything had happened I wuz up with him, alongside, neck and neck, nose and nose, ahead and past, and when I pulled up at the toll gate he wuz ten lengths behind and too much surprised to even cuss.

"Mandy was in the middle uv the road brushin the snow out uv her clothes and waitin for me as I come back, and when I said I'd give her a new silk dress for that she said it wuz only what any wife ought to do for her husband, but she couldn't prove it by showin me where any other wife had ever done it, and I made her take the dress in spite uv herself. That's the kind uv a heroine my wife is," and Uncle John went down into his inside pocket and fished out a quaint, old fashioned daguerreotype in a brand new gilt frame.—Chicago Inter Ocean

Picture, Not Paint.

An art patron one day came into Turner's studio when the artist was already famous. He looked at a picture and asked what was the price. The artist named the sum he had set upon it.

"What," exclaimed the buyer, "all these golden sovereigns for so much paint!"

"Oh," replied Turner, "it's paint you are buying? I thought it was pictures. Here," producing a half used tube of color, "I'll let you have that cheap. Make your own terms," and, turning his back on the astonished patron, he went on painting.

"Dimness of sight, palpitation, shortness of breath, black spots or else shining lights before my eyes, terrible headache, numbness in my arms and hands and tongue, also my jaws would get numb; constipation, prolapsus, debilitating drains, soreness through my bowels; in fact I was diseased from head to foot," writes Mrs. Mollie E. Carpenter, of Linaria, Cumberland Co., Tenn. "When I first wrote to Dr. Pierce concerning my health, I was so weak I could only write a few words when I would have to rest. I could hardly walk. Words cannot express my sufferings. Now I can do my own washing and cooking. I can take a ten quart pail in one hand and a six quart pail in the other (full of water) and carry both one fourth of a mile and never stop to rest. I am as heavy as I was at 19 years (125 lbs). I also had dimness of sight and impaired memory. I had spells that when I would try to speak I couldn't think of the words I wanted to say, but would say something else. I have improved, oh, so much, and Dr. Pierce's medicines have done the good work. It has been about a year since I commenced to use the medicines. My health has been improving slowly but surely. We cannot expect a disease that has been coming on for years to be cured in a few days. If any lady, suffering as I have, will write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y., and get his advice and use his medicines according to directions, a cure will surely result."

Most dealers in medicine sell Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. There is no other medicine that is "the same" or "just as good." Don't accept a substitute.

COPPER MINING STOCKS

For several months shrewd investors have been putting their money into the shares of Copper Mines. This is true not only of men with large amounts of money at their disposal but also applies to those who have made a study of investments with a view to securing a large return for small investments. As high as THREE AND FOUR HUNDRED PER CENT. has to our knowledge already been realized on some of these investments. Americans were the first to make a specialty of Copper Stocks. They knew what they were doing, for the reason is not far to seek. Every Copper Mine in the world is at present taxed to its utmost limit to meet the growing demand for copper for electrical purposes. The reserve stores of copper are being depleted until it pays no longer to use copper in some eastern countries as a coin. Copper has gone up in price from 9c to 18 cents. The supply of Copper from the mines of the world to-day is only about 80 per cent. of the consumption. That is the reason why financiers have their engineers searching the four quarters of the globe for Copper Mines, and that is the reason the shares in promising copper companies are so eagerly picked up by investors.

If you have any money to invest we would ask you to consider the shares of the SUPERIOR GOLD & COPPER COMPANY, LIMITED. This Company owns and operates some valuable native copper properties. We are in a position to offer you a special opportunity in this stock which as an investment should give you a profit of at least 100 per cent in six months. Send for prospectus and particulars.

Occasionally we have an opportunity of giving our clients a special offer on some stocks, and we have this opportunity now. If you are interested write to us at once. These shares are sold in large or small blocks to suit buyers.

We deal in all legitimate mining shares on commission. If you want to buy or sell write us.

OBITUARY.

The Late Mrs. Wm. Chambers.

The death occurred on Wednesday of Mrs Wm Chambers, one of the oldest and most respected residents of Otonabee, where she had resided for forty years during which time she had lived a life that won for her the esteem of all her friends and the love of her family and relatives.

Mrs Chambers' name was Margaret Thompson, and she was born in County Down, Ireland, 63 years ago. About 1859 she crossed the Atlantic to New York to meet and wed her husband, the late Wm Chambers. After their marriage they settled in Otonabee where she resided ever since. She leaves six children three sons and three daughters. The daughters are Mrs Jas Hatherly, and Mrs E Dewell, of Otonabee, and Mrs Wesley Whitfield, of North Monaghan, and the sons are Robert, James and Joshua, of Otonabee. The deceased was a Presbyterian in religion.

The funeral will take place from the family residence, lot 19, con. 16, Otonabee, this afternoon.

The Late Late James Fowler.

One of the oldest residents of Smith, died suddenly on Wednesday, in the person of Mr James Fowler while on his road into town. Mr Fowler had been unwell in the morning, but started to drive to town afer dinner intending to see his doctor. He was coming down the hill on the second line of Smith after leaving his residence and was noticed by Mrs Richardson, who lives near by. Noticing the horse stop, Mrs Richardson went to the road to see what had occurred and found Mr Fowler lying on the roadside. He had been stricken fatally getting out of the buggy and had fallen out to the road. His friends were at once notified, and his timely sudden demise caused the deepest grief.

The deceased was 74 years of age. He had lived in Smith all his life, and was much respected among his wide circle of acquaintances. He leaves a wife and four sons, James, William, Frank and John, who all reside in Smith.

The funeral will take place this afternoon from his late residence, lot 1, con. 2, Smith.

The Agricultural Society.

Enquiries have been made at the Times Office regarding the affairs of the Peterborough Central Exhibition. The prize winners are becoming impatient at the delay, and would like to see a statement of the finances of the society published. This is only reasonable, and we hope President Fitzgerald will see that this is done.

Millbrook Reproter. The Methodists of Millbrook have entered upon a scheme for the reduction of their mortgage debt. The Rev. Mr. Crossley, of Peterborough, will address a meeting of the congregation in the school room of the church on Monday next at 8 o'clock.

The strict measures taken by the police to suppress the tramp nuisance throughout Ontario has had the desired effect in so far as Peterborough is concerned. They have given this locality a wide berth for several days. Chief Rozzel makes occasional visits to their haunts but reports the wandering Willies extremely scarce.

A lamp exploded in the bar room of the McGregor House, Norwood, on Tuesday evening. The oil ignited and caused a small amount of damage and raised considerable excitement before it was extinguished.

The Gold Lake Party.

The firm of Hiram Walker & Sons, of Walkerville, has offered to supply the Canadian contingent with whatever quantity of whiskey is required by them during the South African campaign. The director-general of the medical staff has intimated that only three cases will be required, as on arrival in South Africa such supplies will be furnished by the Imperial authorities. Now, what bothers the Times to know, if only three cases of whiskey are required for the whole Canadian contidgent, for a four months' campaign, how much buttermilk will the Gold Lake Hunting Club consume in three weeks' hunt?

Langford. I would not give 5 cents a foot for the work done.

Q—What are your particulars? A—Only 5 1-2 bags of cement were used instead of nine bags, only one box of granite was used instead of 3 boxes of granite. Ensign cement was used in the foundation instead of the Star cement.

Q—Do you charge Mr. Hay with wilfully violating—

A—Mr. Hay did his duty if he reported to the chairman of the Board of Works. If not he did not do his duty.

Q—Is there anything else? A—Mr. Sheehy claimed that a mixture of two of granite and one of cement would not trowel. We made a test on the 28th of September and good work was the result. There was no difficulty in the surface being put down.

Q—Was that screened granite? A—It was the same as came from the crusher all along.

Ald. McWilliams was then cross-examined by R. F. McWilliams. He replied that the Council or Board of Works had never authorized any change in the specifications. The chairman of the Board of Works would have no right to make any changes. The engineer would have no power to make any material changes in the specifications. Ald. McWilliams claimed that he had done his best to have the work stopped and the payment of the money stopped but could not do so.

Q—Can you explain the cause of the reduction in the term of guarantee from five years to two years.

A—No. I was away when it first came up. We then had the term raised from one year, as proposed, to two years. It looked as if someone knew of inferiro work being done.

Ald. McWilliams was then cross-examined by Mr. Dumble, counsel for Evans and Langford.

He stated that he had no practical knowledge of the laying of concrete walks.

Q—How were those driveways broken? A—By a hammer.

Q—How long had they been laid when they were sledged? A—About three months.

Q—Do you know that concrete increases in strength in more than a geometric ratio with lapse of time? A—No I do not know that. Anybody could see that this was not concrete.

Mr. Dumble—But you cannot deny the fact I have stated

Q—Do you know of the values of cements? Ensign cement is 30 cents a barrel cheaper than the other.

Q—What complaint have you regarding the concrete in in the base? A—It is not concrete at all.

Q—That is exaggerated language and is not correct. Do you know that a sledge will disintegrate anything?

Q—Do you know that the under concrete was not made in proportions specified? A—I have no knowledge of it.

Q—Then as far as you know they have laid the ingredients in the base according to contract? A—Yes.

Q—Is there any report that the contractors were not carrying out the contract? A—Yes. Mr. Hay's report and Mr. Ranney's report.

Q—Did Mr. Hay assume the responsibility of what was done by the contractors? A—That is for him to say.

Q—Did Mr. Hay authorize the use of sand? A—I do not know, Mr. Hay will answer that.

Q—Last year you laid certain walks and made them of the proportions you complain of now? A—No. Last year when we could not get granite we used granite sand, not ordinary sand.

Q—Were not 5 1-2 bags of cement used last year? A—Mr. Belcher denies that the quantity you named was used.

Mr. Stratton, counsel for the Mayor next took up the examination:—

Q—You are a member of the Board of Works? A—Yes.

Q—And one member has as much authority as the other? A—No the chairman is the man whom the engineer notifies of anything.

Q—But do the minutes or regulations of the Council say so? A—I do not know what the minutes say, or whether there are any regulations. The chairman has power to call the Board together. I do not know that we have had any Board of Works this year. The Mayor and Mr. Langford seem to have been the whole Board.

Q—The mixture used by the contractors this year was the same as last year? A—That is not true. The engineer will deny that.

Q—It was the duty of your engineer I presume to see that the proportions were right? A—He should have instructed his inspector.

Q—Under whose instruction did these people go? A—I did not know under whose instruction they went.

Mr. Stratton—And yet you were a member of the Board of Work.

Q—Do you say that the engineers and inspectors fraudulently allowed a wrong mixture to be used? A—It was fraudulent if they knew it.

Q—It apparently did not come to the knowledge of any official who knew better until a large part of the work had been done? A—That is right. A large part of Water street had been done.

Mr. Stratton—Then fully one-half of the contract had been done to the satisfaction of the inspectors and officials before they found ffault. Ald. McWilliams—Yes

Q—Then do you accuse fraud when the first half of the work was being done? A—The way I look on it is this: Mr. Sheehy having done work last year, must have known that 5 1-2 bags of cement were not enough.

Q—Then do you accuse Mr. Sheehy of fraud? A—I do not accuse anybody. It is for the court to find out who committed the fraud.

Q—The engineer confirmed what had been done by the contractors? A—I think innocently

Mr. Stratton—You are not pleading the case of the engineer. He knew and confirmed what had been done? A—Not that I know of.

—He ratified the new formula? A—He allowed the work to go on.

Q—You do not accuse him of bad faith? A—No but it was very bad judgment to say the least.

Crawford Sawers' Fate.

Capt John Martin, who returned yesterday from the Pacific Coast, states that there is very little hope that the bodies of Crawford Sawers and his companions, who were drowned a short time ago, will be recovered. This is the opinion of those he spoke to about it at Vancouver.

$8,200 Was Raised.

At a congregational meteing of the George street Methodist church, held on Tuesday evening, $8,200 was subscribed towards the $10,000 required towards the 20th century fund of the church, to be applied towards the debt on the church. It is proposed to raise $10,000 in five years, at the rate of $1000 every six months. Among the large subscriptions were one of $1000, $100 on each thousand, by Mr B F Ackerman; $750, $75 on each thousand, by Mr A Parker; $500, $50 on each thousand, by the Ladies' Aid Society. Then there were several $250 subscriptions, or $25 on each thousand a great many $150 contributions, or $15 on each thousand; more $100 subscriptions and a very large number of $50 ones, and smaller. The whole aggregated $8,200, a most gratifying result, and there will be little difficulty in raising the amount desired and more. Hon Geo A Cox sent a subscription of $500, $50 on each thousand, with a promise of an additional $500 if the entire debt was wiped off.

The Latest War News!

THE MORNING TIMES

Has arranged for full telegraphic reports from the seat of war, similar to the reports given by the Toronto Morning papers.

The carrying out of the above will place the people of Peterborough to the same position as Toronto in regard to the advantages of a thoroughly up-to date morning newspaper, and the publishers thereupon confidently appeal to the people of the Town and surroundiug villages for support. There is nothing that will advertise Peterborough, and keep the name of the town before outside people than a morning paper. It has been said that if you want to destroy a city, commence by depriving it of its daily morning newspapers. This is literally true. The Times, with full telegraphic despatches, will be sold on all the railway trains, and thus will Peterborough be brought to the attention of thousands who would otherwise never know that such a place existed. On the grounds of local patriotism we therefore appeal to the citizens for support.

We expect to have everything in readiness about the 30th instant, so that on and after that date we will supply the paper in the improved form.

COLLISION AT PORT HOPE.

G. T. R. Freight Trains Come Together—Five Men Injured.

Shortly before midnight Thursday a serious accident occurred on the Grand Trunk Railway about two miles west of Port Hope, by which it is expected one of the firemen will loose his life through being scalded by escaping steam after the two big engines came together. The collision was between two freight trains, and will block the main line for at least 48 hours, which at the present, means a great deal when there is so much freight to be hauled. A later despatch from Port Hope says that five members of the train crews were injured, Fireman Boler, of the east-bound freight, probably fatally. Driver Miller, of the west-bound freight, is badly scalded. The two engines and a number of cars left the rails and are completely demolished. Passenger trains between Toronto and Montreal are sent round by Lindsay, Blackwater Junction and Kingston over the Midland division. Driver Miller, of the west-bound freight was brought on by special train to the Toronto General Hospital. Wrecking crews, with special gangs of trackmen, were despatched immediately from York, Belleville and Kingston.

A report reached the Times last night to the effect that Boler, the fireman had died from his injuries.

Golf.

The club competition in driving, cleeking, approaching and putting will be held to-day and Monday, under the following condition. In driving, the best drive, that is the one nearest the hole, and not necessarily the longest, will take first place. In cleeking and putting the same conditions will be observed. In approaching, a fence will intervene, otherwise the conditions will be the same, as the other competitions. Each contestant will have three successive chances, the best ball remaining. The competition will begin promptly at 2.30 p.m. to-day, and at 4 p.m. on Monday.
